ANTWERP ARMY ESCAPES; GERMAN CHECK

OUT GOES BABY, BUT DOG STAYS IN THIS FLAT

Then Father Has Landlord Arrested Under New "Stork" Law.

FACES COURT TRIAL

Charles F. Congleton is along in years—he has passed his sixty-second birthday.

In mundane activities Mr. Congleton has done well. He is a member of the firm of Congleton & McKinnon, which operates a restaurant at 145 North Wabash avenue. He also owns considerable real estate. Mr. Congleton is an influential member of the congregation of the Buena Park Congregational church.

Ever since September, 1913, Mr. Congleton and his wife have been making a tour of the world—partly for the purpose of sightseeing, but chiefly to do missionary work.

Has Rules for His Flat.

One of the parcels of real estate which adds to the terrestrial credit of Charles F. Congleton is a pretentious apartment building at 1351 Wilson avenue.

In that building one J. Warren Isett went to live in November, 1911. Mr. Isett explained he was employed as auditor by an insurance company. Mr. Isett was married, but he had no children. Altogether, he seemed a desirable tenant.

Things passed smoothly between landlord, agent, and tenant until the following spring. One night the doctor came in a hurry, bringing with him a person who appeared to be a trained nurse.

Then a Baby Cries.

Shortly thereafter a baby cried. The sound was traced to the Isett apartment. Next morning Mr. Isett left the house with a smile on his face. He as much as admitted he was a father and that the newcomer was a boy.

It was quite against the rules.

Mr. Isett lived on for a while in peace with the convalescing Mrs. Isett and the new young Isett Jr. He had forgotten there was something in the lease about not harboring children in Mr. Congleton's house.

But while Mr. Congleton was abroad, looking with pitying eye upon the poor of strange lands, his agent, Edgar A. Ransom, brought some sad news to Tenant Isett.

Bulldog but No Baby!

"We cannot renew your lease," he said. "You have a baby."

His tone was reproachful. Mr. Congleton was too good a man to be thus imposed upon.

"But Mr. Hughes, who has been living across the hall in Mr. Congleton's apartment, keeps a bulldog," protested Father Isett.

"I know, I know," said the agent of the church pillar landlord, patiently. "A bulldog—but not children. You have a BABY!"

Mr. Isett and Mrs. Isett and little Isett Jr. moved. There was nothing else to do. They got a flat at 4723 Magnolia avenue.

He Gets Some Advice.

Mr. Congleton could point out to you in the Bible passages intimating that the proper thing is to forgive your enemies and to turn the other cheek. But in the worldly heart of Mr. Isett there was no forgiveness. He was ungenerous enough to cherish a dislike of his philanthropic landlord. He spoke of the case to his friends and at last came upon one who had some advice.

"Why don't you have Congleton arrested?" demanded this friend.

"Stork" Law Invoked.

Then he proceeded to explain that, through the efforts of Edmund Beall, "stork mayor" of Alton, a law had been placed on the Illinois statute books providing a fine for landlords who discriminated against tenants with children.

Isett waited until Congleton got back from Europe, which was last Friday. Yesterday he swore out a warrant before Municipal Judge Uhlir and had the landlord sent to the station. Later friends put up $500 bonds for Congleton's appearance in the Sheffield avenue court tomorrow forenoon.

Congleton's arrest is the first under the "stork law"—section 26 of chapter [illegible] of the revised statutes.

LOSE YOUR GRIP IN EUROPE?

If So You Probably Can Get It at New York Now by Identifying It.

New York, Oct. 10.—The final consignment of baggage abandoned by thousands of Americans in their haste to leave Germany on the outbreak of war has just arrived in this country and is being held here awaiting identification by the owners.

Mrs. Young Asks for School Children's Aid

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools, yesterday sent the following bulletin to the principals, under the caption of "Registration":

The question arises whether it would not be a lesson in civics to impress upon the children's minds that their parents who are eligible to vote should register Oct. 13 for the coming November election if they have not already attended to registration. I think it would be well to call their attention to the fact that both parents should register and on Nov. 3 should vote. In this way the civic duty of voters is kept not only before the parents but before the children, who, before coming of age, will be familiar with the fact that it is the duty of a voter to go to the polls on election day.

MADE 21 ARRESTS; A COP? SURE NOT

Tin Star Sleuth Poses as Funkhouser Man a Week; Keeps Police on Jump; Then Exposed.

GOT PROTECTION CASH?

For more than a week a man posing as an inspector of morals has been "cleaning up" the South Clark street police district. He arrested eleven women and ten men, several of whom were prosecuted by him in the Municipal court and fined.

It was discovered yesterday that the alleged inspector was an impostor. He had a tin star that cost him 30 cents, and that was his only badge of authority. Sergeant Farrell arrested the man, who gave the name of Lewis Schindler. He formerly was a dish washer in a State street restaurant.

Every policeman at the South Clark street station had a fit of laughter when the arrest of Schindler became known. Even the horses on the patrol wagon had to laugh at the way the "inspector of morals" duped the police.

Introduces Himself to O'Brien.

Schindler introduced himself to Capt. P. D. O'Brien of the South Clark street station about ten days ago. He informed the captain that Maj. Funkhouser had sent him to clean up the district.

"The major isn't satisfied with the way things are going here," Schindler told the captain. "Of course, he doesn't blame you or your men, but he told me to get busy and make a cleanup."

Schindler asked permission to be present at roll call that night, as he wished to get acquainted with the men.

Four Calls First Night.

Then he lost no time in getting busy. The first night he was on the job he sent in five calls for the patrol wagon. He gave orders over the police telephone to book the prisoners to Patrolmen Driscoll and O'Brien, two of the men he met at the station. In some instances he told the wagon men not to book the prisoners.

He was in court every morning and he became known around the South Clark street station as "the demon." The patrol wagon was kept on the jump, and the police themselves admit that the district never before got such a cleaning.

Prisoners who would be sent to the station with instructions "don't book" were afterward visited by Schindler. It is alleged he liberated several women upon payment of money.

to pay, it is said, were taken into court and prosecuted.

Most of Schindler's work was performed between midnight and 4 o'clock in the morning. One night he picked them up so fast that he had the patrol wagons from South Clark street, Twenty-second street, and the Central all on the jump at the same time.

Sees "Inspector" Enter "Beanery."

Sergt. Farrell decided to watch the "morals inspector," and yesterday he saw him enter a Harrison street restaurant. On account of its cheapness the place is known by the police as "the beanery." Schindler got on a stool and bawled out his order in this fashion:

"Two in medium, stack o' wheats, and draw one."

The sergeant entered the restaurant unnoticed by Schindler and heard him give the order.

"That fellow," mused the sergeant, "is a waiter or a dishwasher."

Secret Comes Out.

Farrell spoke to the cashier, who nodded to Schindler when he entered, and learned the man was until recently a restaurant employé. He arrested him and took him to Capt. O'Brien's office. The captain called up Maj. Funkhouser, and the second deputy denounced Schindler as an impostor.

"Isn't it enough to make a man kick himself around the block to think that that fellow—a dishwasher—put it over on the police for a week?" said Sergt. Farrell.

"That cobbler over in Germany who a few years ago took possession of a town by wearing an army captain's uniform had nothing on this fellow Schindler. He had the policemen jumping hurdles."

Czar Wastes Men in Face of Awful Fire of Germans

Eye-Witness Calls Repulse of Russians "Bloody Smear."

FALL RANK ON RANK

The following accounts of two days of battle from the firing line in Russian Poland are sent by Karl H. von Wiegand, Berlin correspondent of the United Press, who is the first American newspaper man permitted to witness actual battles on the eastern frontier of Germany.

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND.
[United Press Staff Correspondent.]

ON THE FIRING LINE NEAR EAST WIRBALLEN, Russian Poland, Friday, Oct. 9 [by courier to Insterburg, thence via Berlin, The Hague, and London.]—The German artillery today beat back, in a bloody, ghastly smear of men, the Russian advance.

Yesterday I saw an infantry engagement. Today it was mostly an artillery encounter. The infantry attack is the more ghastly, but the artillery the more awe inspiring. This was the fifth day of constant fighting and still the German trenches hold.

Today's battle opened at dawn. With two staff officers assigned as my chaperons, I had been attached over night to the field headquarters. I slept well, exhausted by the excitement of my first sight of modern war, but when dawn once again revealed the two long lines of the Russian and German positions the Russian guns began to bark their loads of shrapnel at the German trenches.

Guns Roaring at 6 A. M.

We had breakfast calmly enough despite the din of guns. Then we went to one of the German batteries on the left center. They were already in action, though it was only 6 o'clock. The men got the range from observers a little in advance, cunningly masked, and slowly, methodically, and enthusiastically fed the guns with their loads of death.

The Russians didn't have our range. All of their shells flew screaming 1,000 yards to our left. Through my glasses I watched them strike. The effect on the hillock was exactly as though a geyser had suddenly spurted up. A vast cloud of dirt and stones and grass spouted up, and when the debris cleared away a great hole showed.

Russians Try New Range.

While we watched the Russians seemed to tire of shooting holes in an inoffensive mill. They began to try chance shots to the right and to the left. It wasn't many minutes before I realized that, standing near a battery, the execution of which must have been noted on the Russian side, I had a fine chance of experiencing shrapnel bursting overhead. It was a queer sensation to peer through field glasses and see the Russian shells veer a few hundred feet to the right. I saw one strike a windmill, shattering the long arms and crumpling it over in a slow burning heap. Then we beat a retreat, further toward the center.

We had been standing behind a slight declivity. I hadn't sought a glimpse of the enemy. Shells were the only things that apprised us of the Russian nearness. But as we passed out on an open field, considerably out of range of the field guns, I could see occasional flashes that bespoke field pieces, a mile or so away.

Russian Infantry Charges.

Back behind us, on the extreme left, I was told the Russians were attacking the German trenches by an infantry charge, the German field telephone service having apprised the commanders along the front. With glasses we could see a faint line of what must have been the Russian infantry rushing across the open fields.

We passed on to the center, going slightly to the rear for horses. As we arrived at the right wing we witnessed the last of a Russian infantry advance at that end. The wave of Russians had swept nearly to the German trenches, situated between two sections of field artillery, and there had been repulsed. Russians were smeared across in front of these pits, dead, dying, or wounded—cut down by the terrible spray of German machine guns.

I got up to the trenches as the German fire slackened because of the lack of targets. The Russians had gone back. Strewn in the trenches were countless empty shells, the bullets of which had, as it looked to inexpert eyes, slain thousands. As a matter of fact, there were hundreds of dead in the field ahead.

Gun Barrels Sizzling Hot.

German infantrymen spat on their rapid firers as we reached the trench and delightedly called our attention to the sizzle that told how hot the barrels were from the firing.

The men stretched their cramped limbs, helped a few wounded to the rear, and waited for breakfast. It was not long forthcoming. Small lines of men strag-

TELLS SCENES OF ANTWERP'S EVE OF DOOM

J. M. Patterson Gets "Baptism of Fire" with Belgians.

SEES WAR'S HORRORS

In this letter, written from Antwerp in two sections—Sept. 24 and Sept. 25—Mr. Patterson describes a sortie of Belgian forces which had the hope of getting into France and assisting the allies in confounding the Germans on the Aisne. He writes as an eyewitness of a battle near Termonde. His letter was written just before the Germans began their ten-day attack on Antwerp.

BY JOSEPH MEDILL PATTERSON.
[War Correspondent of The Tribune.]

ANTWERP, Sept. 24.—This city is uneasy, excited, and exalted tonight. The great battle still rages in France by the Aisne. The supposition is that the Belgian troops are to go out and attack the Germans on their right flank, or else to attempt to cut their communications behind their extreme right, assisting the English and French to surround the German right.

The rumor of the maneuver spread through the city this afternoon, and the feeling of the city changed in a curious manner—one much easier to sense than to describe. The obvious simile is to compare it to the heaviness before a cyclone.

Troops Pour Across Scheldt.

The troops have been crossing the pontoon bridge over the Scheldt river—the largest pontoon bridge in the world—nearly steadily all afternoon. It is the Sixth division that moves. With them, for scouts, are the cyclist carbineers, in dusty, worn uniforms of green, unshaven, their rifles slung across their shoulders, their entire luggage tied up in bandanna handkerchiefs, strapped to their handlebars.

The artillery moved, not through the city, but around it. The Red Cross autos, with stretchers fastened to their spare tires; the Red Cross auto vans, with triple tiers of canvas cots, are moving south with the army.

There are ninety-four hospitals for wounded in Antwerp tonight. There will be 150 in two or three days, I suppose.

Get Pass Through All Lines.

Through an arrangement with the Belgian Red Cross for an equal division of receipts from the exhibition of the moving pictures, E. F. Weigle, THE TRIBUNE photographer, takes, we have obtained a pass that will carry us anywhere during the battle if it comes, and what is far more important, we have the use of a sixty horse power automobile.

This is an exclusive privilege as far as taking motion pictures goes; and there is only one other correspondent here with an automobile or a pass—Mr. E. Alexander Powell.

In the beautiful cathedral of Notre Dame this afternoon—it is the largest after those of Rome, Milan, and Cologne, and to me it seems the loveliest of all—there was a vast crowd, that included many young officers. The whole edifice seemed permeated with prayer so deep and so yearning, and so desirous of deliverance from woe! There was a fervor and passion of religious emotion as perhaps would not come in the fatness of peace.

War Strengthens Morals?

War searches out the most bestial in man; but it is hard to say that it does not also search and find what is most sublime in him.

It is a total economic waste certainly—but that it is a total moral waste is questionable. For men to be ready to face death gallantly for an ideal, and for women to face widowhood, penury, ruin, gallantly for the same ideal—just as I have seen so many men and women do here and in Germany—that may be folly, and it surely isn't profitable, but I cannot think it is utterly debasing to one's soul to go through this fiery furnace.

BATTLE NEAR TERMONDE.

[Second Part of Mr. Patterson's Letter.]

ANTWERP, Sept. 25.

The battle took place as expected—it wasn't much of a battle for this war—only about a hundred killed on each side, and less than twenty thousand troops engaged in all.

In result it was indeterminate, except for the families of the two hundred dead soldiers.

I might as well confess at the start

One of Belgium's War Tragedies.

This picture was taken on the roadside near Antwerp by Edwin F. Weigle, The Tribune photographer at the front. The women are Madame Claessens and daughter, both in heavy mourning. They told their story to J. M. Patterson, Tribune correspondent.

Before the war they lived in Liege, where the father and two sons were killed and their house destroyed by German shells. They walked to Holland, begging their way, and thence back to Antwerp.

The father of the family, D. Claessens, was one of the most prominent merchants in Belgium.

BIG BATTLE LINE IS HOLDING TAUT

Allies Retain Positions Despite Violent Attacks by German Armies.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The French war office, in its official statement today, says there has been no material change along the great battle front from Lille to Alsace-Lorraine.

The allies have maintained their positions in spite of violent attacks at several points.

The cavalry still is engaged along the Belgian frontier and across it, each side trying to work around the other's wing.

This movement has compelled the Germans to withdraw some troops from other parts of the line and the allies are seizing the opportunity to make headway.

The communication reports that to the north of the Oise the French troops have attained a real advantage in several parts of their zone of action, while in the St. Mihiel region, where they are trying to drive the Germans back across the Meuse, appreciable progress has been made.

Official War Bulletin.

Following is the official announcement given out this afternoon:

"The fighting continues under satisfactory conditions. Our entire battle front has been maintained in spite of violent attacks of the enemy at several points.

"On our left wing, in the region included between La Basse, Armentieres, and Cassel, the fighting between the opposing forces of cavalry has been confused because of the nature of the terrain.

"To the north of the Oise our troops have attained real advantages at several places in their zone of action. In the region of St. Mihiel we have made material progress."

Germans Claim Advance.

Despite the claim of the French war office that the allies have made progress in the region of St. Mihiel, Berlin says by wireless that the Germans are pushing ahead before St. Mihiel and in the Argonnes.

In view of the conflicting reports it is held by military experts that each side gains a little only to be thrust back before making their new positions secure.

Sabre and Lance Fight.

FROM THE BATTLE FRONT, via Paris, Oct. 10.—Saber and lance came into play many times today. The French, British, and German hussars, lancers, dragoons, and cuirassiers, in enormous numbers, came into contact near Lille.

There were no brilliant charges by long lines of horsemen to record, but the British squadron in khaki and the French in their light and dark blue uniforms often crossed swords with the blue-gray clad Germans.

There is not an inch of ground hereabouts which does not show traces of the awful character of the battle.

The town of Albert is a mass of ruins, only a church steeple remaining standing.

Roye has disappeared under constant bombardment. It was the center of the German effort to break through the allied lines.

The German artillery had taken advantage of many quarries in the vicinity, where they placed guns which were beyond the reach of the French artillery.

Vigorous Clashes Near Arras.

The vicinity of Arras was the scene of vigorous encounters between infantrymen who engaged in close fighting with the bayonet after the artillery duel ceased.

Beyond Roye, where the fighting has been exceptionally severe for fifteen days, the allies continued their efforts to dislodge the Germans, who held on with wonderful tenacity. It was necessary for the allies to conduct regular siege operations to get at them.

Farther east the French made a considerable advance in Alsace and captured some territory on the heights of the Meuse, where the Germans attacked them repeatedly but always were beaten back.

GERMAN COUNT'S SPYING BRINGS DEFEAT TO ALLIES.

With Only a Raincoat Hiding His Uniform, He Persuades British Commander to Tell Him Secrets.

BERLIN, via wireless, Oct. 10.—Count Beroldingen, whose mother is an American woman, has been awarded two iron crosses for the following exploit:

One day he appeared among his comrades wearing the raincoat of an English officer and found that they did not recognize him. Consequently he slipped away to the French lines. To the English commanding officer he said: "I am an English adjutant. When will you attack? What are your positions, and what is your plan of action?"

The English general gave the count the information he asked for.

Beroldingen returned to the German lines. The information thus obtained won the battle for the Germans.

GERMAN U-9 HERO TELLS OF VICTORY

Capt. Weddigen Relates in Detail How He Torpedoed Three British Cruisers.

Through the German admiralty the following story of Capt.-Lieut. Otto Weddigen, commander of the submarine U-9, whose feat in destroying three British cruisers has been one of the startling events of the war, is made public.

BY CAPT. OTTO WEDDIGEN.
[Commander of the German Submarine U-9.]

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—[Delayed by Censor.]—I set out from a North sea port on one of the arms of the Kiel canal and set my course in a southwesterly direction. The name of the port I cannot state officially, but it has been guessed at, nor am I permitted to say definitely just when we started, but it was not many days before the morning of Sept. 22 when I fell in with my quarry.

British torpedo boats came within my reach, but I felt there was bigger game further on, so on I went. It was ten minutes after six on the morning of last Tuesday when I caught sight of one of the big cruisers of the enemy.

I was then eighteen sea miles northwesterly of the Hook of Holland. I had traveled considerably more than 200 miles from my base. I had been going ahead partially submerged, with about five feet of my periscope showing.

Get Sight of His Quarry.

Almost immediately I caught sight of the first cruiser and two others. I submerged completely and laid my course in order to bring up in center of the trio, which held a sort of triangular formation. I could see their gray-black sides riding high over the water.

When I first sighted them they were near enough for torpedo work, but I wanted to make my aim sure, so I went down and in on them. I had taken the position of the three ships before submerging, and I succeeded in getting another flash through my periscope before I began action. I soon reached what I regarded as a good shooting point.

Torpedo Hits Bull's-Eye.

Then I loosed one of my torpedoes at the middle ship. I was then about twelve feet under water and got the shot off in good shape, my men handling the boat as if it had been a skiff. I climbed to the surface to get a sight through my tube of the effect and discovered that the shot had gone straight and true, striking the ship, which I later learned was the Aboukir, under one of its magazines, which in exploding helped the torpedo's work of destruction.

There was a fountain of water, a burst

GERMANS HOLD CITY

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Oct. 11, 2:04 a. m.—A serious German check is reported this morning (Oct. 11) at Quatrecht, near Wetteren, east of Ghent, where, according to an Ostend dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company, 20,000 Germans have been repulsed by French and British troops.

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 10.—It was admitted in an official statement given out by the admiralty office tonight that British troops were among the defenders of Antwerp when it was captured by the Germans yesterday, and that at least 300 of the 8,000 men were lost by wounds or captured.

The men were members of one marine brigade and two naval brigades. With several heavy guns they had aided in the defense for the last week of the siege.

They left the city at the same time the Belgians began their retreat. Two of the brigades reached Ostend safely. The other, however, was cut off to the north of Lokeren (a town in East Flanders, twelve miles northeast of Ghent) and 2,000 of the men were interned in Holland.

STATEMENT BY ADMIRALTY.

The statement by the secretary of the admiralty was as follows:

"In response to an appeal by the Belgian government a marine brigade and two naval brigades, together with some heavy naval guns, manned by a detachment of the royal navy, the whole under command of Gen. Paris, R. M. A., were sent by his majesty's government to participate in the defense of Antwerp during the last week of the attack.

"Up until the night of Monday last, Oct. 5, the Belgian army and marine brigade successfully defended the line of the Nethe river, but early on Tuesday morning the Belgian forces on the right of Malines Pere were forced by a heavy German attack, covered by powerful artillery, to retire, and in consequence the whole of the defense was withdrawn to the inner line of forts, the intervals between which had been strongly fortified. The ground which had been lost enabled the enemy to plant his batteries to bombard the city.

BOMBARDMENT IS RUTHLESS.

"The inner line of defenses was maintained during Wednesday and Thursday, while the city endured a ruthless bombardment.

"The behavior of the marines and naval brigades in the trenches and in the field was praiseworthy in a high degree and remarkable in units so newly formed, and owing to the protection of the entrenchments the losses, in spite of the severity of the fire, are probably less than 300 out of a total force of 8,000 men.

"The defenses could have been maintained for a longer period, but not long enough to allow of adequate forces being sent for their relief without prejudice to the main strategic situation.

FORCED BY NUMBERS.

"The enemy also began on Thursday to press strongly on the line of communications near Lokeren. The Belgian forces defending this point fought with great determination, but were gradually pressed back by numbers.

"In these circumstances the Belgian and British military authorities in Antwerp decided to evacuate the city. The British offered to cover the retreat, but Gen. de Guise desired that they should leave before the last division of the Belgian army.

"After a long night march to Saint-Gilles the three naval brigades entrained. Two out of the three have arrived safely at Ostend, but, owing to circumstances which are not yet fully known, the greater part of the first naval brigade was cut off by a German attack north of Lokeren and 2,000 officers and men entered Dutch territory in the neighborhood of Hulst and laid down their arms in accordance with the laws of neutrality."

STORY OF CITY'S FALL.

Antwerp fell before the German onslaught at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. At 9 o'clock Friday morning the preliminary steps of the surrender were taken in the pulling down of the battle flag which was flying from the cathedral and the hoisting of a white flag in its place. The formalities of surrender followed.

The Belgian army abandoned the city before the surrender and is intact. It is supposed to have retreated toward Ostend. The king is said to be with it. Queen Elizabeth is reported to have passed through Folkestone from Dunkirk last night on her way to London.

BELGIANS BLOW UP FORTS.

A few of the outstanding forts—especially those to the northeast, near Contich—are still resisting the invaders. The other forts lost to the Belgians are also lost to the Germans. Mines had been laid and when the retreating Belgian troops were at a safe distance the forts were blown up.

The Germans have restored order in the city and made every attempt to limit the fires burning in various sections of Antwerp, caused by their shell fire.

Two streets—Rues Darciles and Van Bree—have been greatly damaged, the houses lining them for their entire length having been reduced to a blackened, smoking ruin.

Tonight the Germans had established their headquarters in the city and lined the Place de la Commune with machine guns.

PURSUE FLEEING BELGIANS.

A large force of Germans have succeeded in crossing the Scheldt river at Termonde and are now advancing in a northeasterly direction, toward St. Nicholas, according to news agency dispatches received here.

It is apparent that this German force is bent on turning the rear of the Belgian army which evaded bottling up in Antwerp. St. Nicholas is five miles from the Dutch frontier and twelve miles southwest of Antwerp. If the Germans are successful in cutting off the retreat of the Belgian army to the west of Antwerp the Belgians would either have to face battle in the open country or be interned in Holland if they fled across the Dutch border.

TERRIFIC LOSS IN LIFE.

The death roll resulting from the attack on and defense of Antwerp has not been compiled, and probably the full details never will be known, but all accounts describe it as being terribly heavy.

The Germans, although their big guns cleared a path for them, had to sacrifice many lives in crossing the rivers and canals and in driving out the defenders, who held the intrenchments until the last.

The stubbornness of the Belgians and of those who went to their assistance cost them dearly also, so that both sides will have long casualty lists.

SAYS DAMAGE WAS GREAT.

It may be some time before accurate knowledge is available from nonpartisan sources of the damage to the city itself resulting from the bombardment. One report says that two-thirds of the city was wrecked by the tremendous fire of shells which German batteries poured on its buildings, and that the great Cathedral of Notre Dame, built in the fourteenth century and renowned as one of the most wonderful examples of Gothic architecture now extant, was seriously damaged.

This report added that the Belgian defenders had mounted rapid firers on the towers of the building despite the German warning that if the structure was used for military purposes it would be shelled.

Another dispatch received from The Hague says the cathedral is unharmed.

AWAKES FEARS OF ENGLAND.

The famous port immortalized by Napoleon as an outpost which in the hands of an enemy would be a pistol pointed at England's head succumbed to the battering of more than 200 of Germany's mighty eleven, twelve, and sixteen inch siege guns.

When the news was received in London this morning it created a feeling of great unrest. Although Antwerp's fate has been admittedly sealed for days, its actual capture undoubtedly comes home to the British mind with all the force of an eminently grave event.

It cannot conceivably, according to London war experts, alter the eventual result of the allies' campaign against Germany, yet it is plain that no other single event of the war thus far has meant so much to England. It means that the German menace has been pushed almost directly under the British nose.

AIRSHIP RAIDS ON ENGLAND.

If the kaiser's fleet were not effectually bottled up far from the mouth of the Scheldt, Antwerp would almost certainly become the base for a desperate German naval raid on the British coast. It is much more likely to serve as a sally port for the kaiser's air campaign against England, judging by the report that six Zeppelins have been in the wake of the Antwerp besiegers. It is only 120 miles to the English coast.

Several of these Zeppelins were used in the attack. Bombs dropped by them did much to create a panic among the civilians if not the defending soldiers.

The airships also directed the firing of the German heavy artillery, the results of which were appalling.

It is assumed in London that if Germany considers it convenient to its plan of campaign it will not hesitate to utilize the neutral waters of the Scheldt, but except as an airship and possibly a submarine base it is contended that it can derive no advantage from this waterway.

BRITAIN STILL HOLDS SEA.

So long as Great Britain commands the sea, however, no great part of the German navy can use the port, even should Germany overrule Holland's objection to the use of the Scheldt by belligerent ships.

Germany, it is thought, may claim that, being in possession of the city, it acquires Belgium's right to use the river on equal terms with the Dutch, and will proceed to build destroyers and submarines there to menace the British fleet.

If Holland should allow these vessels to pass through the Scheldt, England, it is declared, would certainly proclaim it a breach of neutrality. In any case, Holland's position becomes more and more uncomfortable.

ATTACK ON OUTER FORTS.

The German attack on the city and ring of forts surrounding it began on Sept. 29. The Germans had, however, for a long time previous prepared the way for the attack on Antwerp by taking a number of towns in the vicinity.

The first direct attack on the Antwerp fortifications was against the forts at Waelhem and Wavre-St. Catherines. These were reduced in a couple of days by the aid of the big siege guns. Meanwhile the forts at Lierre and Koningshoyckt had been attacked, and these and others of the outside line of fortifications were taken last week.

The last few days has seen the fighting advance to the inner line of forts and along the Scheldt, principally at Schoonaerde. At the last named place severe fighting occurred for several days, but the superior artillery of the Germans gradually forced the Belgians back.

INFANTRY REACHES SUBURBS.

In the last day or two the fighting had reached practically to the suburbs of Antwerp. The German infantry had penetrated to this point by a breach in Fort Berchem.

Dispatches from Amsterdam which have been heavily censored indicate that the Germans attempted to force the Lierre forts on Thursday. Continuous rifle fire meanwhile was directed against the Belgian second line and the southern part of the city proper. German troops who sought to take the redoubt of the second line at the point of the bayonet were subjected to a murderous fire by the intrenched Belgians.

Zeppelins hovered over the city all of Thursday night, directing the fire of the heavy German siege guns. The effect of this fire is described as appalling.

FINAL ATTACK BY GERMANS.

The final furious attack of the Germans was delivered between 6 and 7 o'clock on Friday morning, the Belgians resisting desperately in their trenches. Both sides suffered terrific losses.

Simultaneously with this attack the German artillery forced its way across the River Nethe. The Belgians are reported to have blown up two and possibly more of the German batteries of heavy artillery as they were making the crossing, and many of the artillerymen were drowned.

At the same time the Germans delivered attacks near Duffel, Waelhem, and Boompuers.

RETREAT OF THE BELGIANS.

The defenders continued their firing and began an orderly retreat, blowing up the forts behind them. The correspondent of the Central News, telegraphing from Sas Van Ghent, across the Dutch frontier, says that fire raged in the southern part of the city of Antwerp all Thursday night and the suburb of Berchem also was ablaze. The orphanage on the Rue Louise was afire, he said, but the inmates had been saved.

The Stuivenberg hospital was hit by two bombs during the attack, according to the Rosendaal correspondent of the Nieuws Van Den Dag, and the 300 wounded soldiers in the hospital were carried out and put on board ships in the Scheldt.

Shells exploded on the roof of the prison, another correspondent says, and the wardens immediately liberated the prisoners.

BURGOMASTER GIVES UP CITY.

It became apparent early Friday morning that further resistance was useless and the greater part of the Belgian army was removed, leaving only enough to man the guns in the shattered forts.

Nearly all the military stores in the city and most of the merchant ships lying in the harbor were either sunk or demolished in order to prevent booty of that sort falling into the Germans' hands.

Later Burgomaster De Vos, accompanied by Ald. Louis Franck, went to the Berchem gate. There they met the commander of the besieging forces and made unconditional surrender of the city.

MANY FLEE INTO HOLLAND.

Dispatches received in London assert that more than two-thirds of the people of Antwerp fled from the city during the bombardment. Most of them have taken refuge in Holland.

One train loaded with refugees was struck by a shell as it was about to leave for Esschen. No details are given of the casualties on the train. Soon afterward the bridge was destroyed, preventing further escape toward Esschen.

In Esschen, other correspondents say, famine prevails among the refugees, who left their homes without food, and many of them with only the clothes they wore. Dutch soldiers were assigned to feed the hungry and are distributing bread, milk, and water. The Dutch are doing everything possible to aid them.

A correspondent at Amsterdam says that one of the most distressing features of the exodus was the large number of insane persons released from the asylum. Many of them are now roaming the country creating fear and exciting disorders. The Dutch government has issued an order warning the public not to act hastily in the cases of these unfortunate ones.

One of the results of the taking of the fortress helpful to the German campaign will be the relief of the considerable force which has been used in the investment of the city. These troops, or such of them as are not required to hold the Belgian army, now deprived of its last fortified position, can be added to the hard pressed German right wing. It is estimated that there are at least 400,000 Germans in Belgium. The release of a portion of this force so that it may reinforce Von Kluck's wing will be a valuable asset to the Germans.

PEOPLE OF GERMANY REJOICE.

Dispatches from Berlin state that the capitulation of Antwerp has caused unprecedented enthusiasm throughout Germany, where the general opinion is that the fall of the Belgian city marks the beginning of the end.

"The capture of Antwerp in ten days carries the germ of the capture of Paris," says the Deutsche Tageszeitung, according to a dispatch from Berlin by way of Amsterdam to the Reuter Telegram company.

"The fall of this fortress," adds the newspaper, "not only means the overthrow of the Belgians, but it is a most serious blow to England.

"It proves that it is only necessary to break down a large section of even the most extended fortresses in order to render the remaining part untenable."

BELGIANS POUR INTO ENGLAND

Horror Stricken Refugees from Antwerp Reach Safety in London.

TELL TERROR OF SIEGE.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Oct. 10.—All day long and until nearly midnight tonight special trains have unloaded in London burdens of horror stricken refugees from shattered Antwerp. There was an endless procession of victims, all with the same story of panic and devastation.

Here and there was a fortunate one who had saved some vestige of his belongings in handbags, but nearly all had nothing left but the clothes in which they stood, and these often were of the scantiest description.

As each train pulled in and unloaded its passengers a corps of Red Cross nurses and members of various relief committees met them. Their services were badly needed, for the women and children still were hysterical from the long hours of horror they had experienced.

Belgians Flee to Seaports.

The realization that they at last were safe in England caused such a reaction that others fainted who until then had faced their troubles with stoic calm.

The majority came by way of Flushing, where it is reported that 40,000 still are awaiting transportation to England. There are no sleeping accommodations of any kind to be had in Rotterdam, to which the exodus from the doomed city is counted by the hundreds of thousands.

Not yet can one gather the full details of the horrors of this short siege, which seem to equal those of former days that lasted days, weeks, and even months. For four days the water supply was completely cut off, and there seems to have been little possibility of getting water in anything like useful quantities, even for those with money, once the municipal supply was gone.

Children Face Most Suffering.

It was impossible to get a bath, mineral waters had given out and many sluiced their hands in a bottle of cheap wine. The stench in the houses, and especially the hotels, where there were many people, was awful.

The suffering of children was beyond words to describe. Though others knew better, there were many thousands who placed absolute belief in the impregnability of the city's forts, so they remained.

One hears from the refugees arriving here tonight that the crash of the tremendous seventeen inch German guns shattered their confidence and soon inspired them with deadly terror. As each shell struck, leaving an aftermath of instant conflagration, people rushed into the streets in their night clothes or into cellars.

Burning Buildings Light City.

The terror of the situation was enhanced by the utter darkness of the city save for the awesome light which followed the bursting of the incendiary shells which the Germans used with constant regularity, punctuating the ordinary destructive projectiles.

At daybreak the exodus began. The southern portion of the city near the museum and the railway station was a mass of flames. From every safe exit thousands jammed and fought their way out. The majority set out for Holland. Many of those reaching London said that no trains were available outside Antwerp, so all save the fortunate few who had bicycles or farm wagons were obliged to walk.

It was an army of misery that walked the twenty-eight miles to safety in Bergenopzoom, in Holland.

Tonight at both Charing Cross and Victoria stations the American committees, which had thought their work about finished, are busy caring for hundreds of Americans of Belgian birth who had been spending their vacation in Belgium.

EDISON TO GIVE AMERICAN NAVY BEST SUBMARINE

Inventor Working on Mechanism to Extract Oxygen from Water.

INSPECT ONE OF CRAFT

New York, Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, is planning to give the United States navy the most deadly and efficient submarine craft in the world. Mr. Edison is working on a mechanism which will extract oxygen from water in much the same way as fishes do through their gills.

Oxygen from Sea Water.

The mechanism, according to the inventor, will enable submarines to remain beneath the surface for much longer periods than now is possible, and so will greatly enlarge their field of operation. In fact, the only limit to their cruising scope will be their fuel capacity.

Inventor Inspects Submarine.

Mr. Edison announced his plans today while making his first inspection of a submarine. With Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, and a family party, he went aboard the submarine G-4 at the Brooklyn navy yard.

An underwater trip along the East river to the Battery had been planned, but the party contented itself with an examination of the machinery and equipment of the diminutive fighting craft.

KING CHARLES OF ROUMANIA DEAD; VICTIM OF PLOT?

Bucharest Hints He May Have Been Assassinated or Poisoned.

WAR FRICTION IN NATION

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 10.—A telegram received here from Vienna says that King Charles of Roumania died at 6:30 o'clock this morning at his country seat at Sinaia in Walachia.

May Have Been Assassinated.

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

BUCHAREST, via Rome and Havre, Oct. 10.—It is rumored that King Charles did not die a natural death. It is said he was either assassinated or poisoned.

The Russian Black sea fleet of eight warships and ten destroyers was sighted yesterday from Kustendje, a Roumanian seaport on the Black sea, apparently bound for the Bosphorus. The vessels were all cleared for action. The cruise is said to be connected in some way with the death of King Charles, which was then known to be imminent.

Death Officially Announced.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The Roumanian legation tonight officially announced the death at Bucharest at 6:30 this morning of King Charles I. of Roumania.

A week ago there were reports that the monarch contemplated abdication, due to friction over the war situation. He was for Germany, while the ministry was a unit in desiring that Roumania should stand with England, Russia, and France.

King Charles of Roumania was a member of the house of Hohenzollern. At the beginning of the war he was inclined to side with Germany and Austria-Hungary and was reported as ready to cast his lot with these countries, but such a course encountered strong opposition in Roumania and particularly in the legislature. Recent dispatches have said that the king, because of a promise he had made to Germany, desired to mobilize the Roumanian army to assist Germany in the war.

Kaiser Depended on Roumania.

It has been said on many occasions in the last few weeks that Germany counted on the intervention of Roumania.

A story published in Paris the latter part of September related that when King Charles asked the cabinet to order a mobilization of the army one of the ministers replied: "We are quite willing if it is against Austria."

King Charles turned to him and said: "I gave my word to Emperor William, and a Hohenzollern keeps his word."

The president of the council here interposed, saying:

"The country knows no Hohenzollern. It knows only the king of Roumania, who does not have to give his word to any one whatsoever."

King Had Little Support.

King Charles then decided to call a council of the crown with the ex-ministers in attendance, but only one sided with him in favor of Germany.

Recent dispatches have described King Charles as being seriously ill, but from other quarters his indisposition has been declared to be entirely political. It has been predicted lately that he was preparing to abdicate.

The succession to the throne of Roumania, in the event of the king remaining childless, was settled by the constitution upon his elder brother, Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen. Leopold renounced his rights in favor of his son, Prince Wilhelm, and Prince Wilhelm, in 1888, renounced his rights in his turn in favor of his brother, Prince Ferdinand, who was born in 1865.

Victor Jonnesco, a nephew of the prime minister of Roumania, and at present holding the post of secretary of the Roumanian legation in Paris, issued a statement in the French capital the early part of this month in which he denounced King Charles for his attitude in the matter of Roumanian neutrality.

CAREER OF KING CHARLES.

Charles I. was Roumania's first king. The story of his career spanning seventy-five years is that of a German prince elected to govern a Latin people. Charles was born a Hohenzollern, an older branch of the family than that of Emperor William of Germany. He was the son of Prince Charles Anthony of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen.

It was while Charles was serving, at the age of 27 years, as an officer in the Prussian guard, that the Turkish provinces of Wallachia and Moldavia united to call themselves Roumania, and, casting their eyes about Europe for a prince to govern them, invited young Charles to be their prince.

Secret Trip to Roumania.

With Austria preparing to fight Prussia, young Charles' departure for Roumania was such a perilous undertaking that he made it secretly. He sailed down the Danube, jumping ashore on Roumanian territory on May 20, 1866, and made his way to the palace at Bucharest, where he was proclaimed prince three days later. Napoleon III. had told him that nothing was more difficult than to govern a Latin race. The young prince soon found that he had been well advised in this respect. His great confidence brought him energy and patience which later won the hearts of his people.

In the meantime, at the age of 30, the young prince paid court to Princess Elizabeth of Wied and was married in the fall of 1869. Only one child was born to the couple, a boy, but he died at the age of 6. In 1876, when there arose the question of participating in the Turko-Russian war, Prince Charles stood firm for neutrality, but when the Russians were on the point of being crushed at Plevna and Grand Duke Nicholas sent his famous call for help, the Roumanian forces were led to battle, and with Charles at their head decisively defeated the great Turkish army.

From this time King Charles was universally acknowledged the leader of the united people, and the kingdom of Roumania became a factor in the international politics.

RUSSIANS TAKE RAIL JUNCTION IN EAST PRUSSIA

Czar's Forces Pursue Germans Beyond Lyck; Occupy Marggrabowa.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 10.—The war office this afternoon announced the capture of Marggrabowa, heralding it as an important victory for the Russian forces.

Marggrabowa is an important railway junction ten miles inside the East Prussian border, twenty miles west of Suwalki. To this point the Germans retreated after being forced to evacuate Lyck.

The following communication, under date of Oct. 9, has been made public by the Russian general staff:

"The combat on the East Prussian frontier continues with the same obstinacy. The German troops are retiring from Lyck and are blowing up the bridges behind them.

"In several passes between Ivangorod and Sandomir artillery battles are occurring with the enemy which is approaching the Vistula."

Russians Gaining in Galicia.

The Austro-German forces opposing the Russian advance in Galicia have been overwhelmed and pressed back, according to military reports. It is also stated that so badly has the campaign in East Prussia gone for the Germans that the war office in Berlin has removed Gen. von Hindenberg from command of the German forces in that territory, replacing him with Gen. von Schubert.

Gen. von Hindenberg was the original commander in chief of the German defense army in East Prussia. He was summoned to the French front on Sept. 17 and was reported to have been put in command of the defense of Cracow two weeks later. On Oct. 7 he was named in Amsterdam dispatches as having been superseded by Gen. von Mogen.

Russia Tightens Censorship.

A statement from the official news bureau says:

"The fighting in Galicia, which weakened considerably the Austrian army, compelling it to make a prolonged retreat, forced the Germans to throw the bulk of their forces on the eastern front to the rescue of the Austrians and created entirely new conditions which will undoubtedly make us adopt corresponding measures.

"It is easy to understand the particular importance of keeping secret, as long as possible, the recent movement of the Russian troops on the eve of great events. Public opinion will soon and of necessity be compelled to be satisfied with the meager details in the official communications, awaiting the time when it will be possible, without divulging military secrets, to lift the veil which must always cover the first phases of a new born military operation."

Germany Sends Reinforcements.

ROME, Oct. 10.—German advices state that German reinforcements are being rushed to the Russian frontier, not only by train but by sea from Stettin, Stralsund, Danzig, and all the other available Baltic ports.

Austria Claims Russian Repulse.

VIENNA, Oct. 10.—An official report from headquarters says:

"Our advance has forced the Russians to slacken their efforts against Przemysl, which reached a climax on the night of Oct. 8, when the Russian losses were terrible. Yesterday afternoon the artillery fire against the fortress became weaker and the Russians commenced to withdraw their forces.

"Our advancing troops near Lancut, a town in Galicia, twelve miles east of Rzeszow, engaged superior hostile forces. The battle continues. The Russians already have evacuated Rzeszow.

"The situation in the Carpathians is good. The Russians retreating from Maramaros-Sziget are now in full flight."

Calls More Men to Colors.

The decree for a levy en masse has hastened recruiting for the army. The lame, the short sighted, and recruits who have been otherwise disqualified have been drafted by the commissariat.

The Austrian general staff admits heavy losses in Hungary. The Russians, it is stated, cut off the telegraph and telephone, and the Hungarian garrisons which had not been reinforced were cut to pieces.

The Zeit says over 100,000 refugees made a wild rush for the trains from Sziget for Kassa and a panic ensued. Refugees are landed in the open country outside of towns, where they are placed in camps.

Austrian Losses Are Heavy.

VENICE via Paris, Oct. 10.—Large numbers of wounded soldiers are being brought daily to Vienna, but the newspapers of the Austrian capital are no longer permitted to report their arrivals.

The nineteenth official Austrian list of killed, wounded, and missing so far as published, has occupied twenty-four columns in the Vienna newspapers and the publication has not been completed.

The wounded who were being cared for at Trieste have now been removed to neighboring places in order to make room in the hospitals of Trieste for those that may come from the naval battle which is expected to occur at any time. Large numbers of physicians have been assembled at Pola.

Antwerp a City of About 400,000.

ANTWERP, at the time the Germans laid siege to the city, had a population of approximately 400,000. The census of 1911 gave its population as 308,000, but the large number of refugees that had gathered there from the surrounding country and smaller cities invaded by the Germans increased this over 30 per cent.

In commerce Antwerp was one of the largest ports in Europe, if not in the world. Its exports and imports for the year 1905 aggregated close to $1,000,000,000. Within recent years the Belgian government had spent $50,000,000 to make it the greatest port in the world.

It was considered one of the strongest fortified points in Europe. Fifteen outer line forts and batteries were constructed in recent years. These strongholds, however, were an easy prey to the new German 42 centimeter Krupp mortars.

Its fine cathedral was begun in the fourteenth century, but was not completed until 1518. Its tower of over 400 feet is a conspicuous object that can be seen from afar over the surrounding country. A second tower, which formed part of the original plan, has never been erected. In the church are hung three of Rubens' masterpieces—"The Descent from the Cross," "The Elevation to the Cross," and "The Assumption."

LONDON PREPARES ANEW FOR RAID BY ZEPPELINS.

Searchlights Search Sky for German Craft—Persons in Street Go About in Fear of Explosives.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—England fears a Zeppelin raid is impending. Tonight the city was even more somber, with fewer lights lit and with sentries operating huge searchlights redoubling their efforts to search the skies for aerial visitors.

The public thinks the German occupation of Antwerp means an almost immediate Zeppelin raid. How strikingly this apprehension has permeated the British was shown when Lloyds today jumped its insurance rate on damage from possible airship bombs from 2 shillings 6 pence per 100 pounds to 5 shillings.

Strategical experts insist, however, that it may be weeks before the Germans can bring up their giant hangars for the Zeppelins, can arrange for the production of the gaseous inflating material, and actually start their raids over British territory. Persons in the street, however, cannot be appeased and fear any night now will bring a German airship over London.

British Hear Bands Play in Enemy's Lines.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The official press bureau issues the following descriptive account communicated by an eyewitness with general headquarters, which continues and supplements the narrative published Oct. 9 of the movement of the British force and the French armies in immediate touch with it:

"Comparative calm on our front has continued through the fine and considerably warmer weather. The last six days have been slightly misty, with clouds hanging low, so that conditions have not been good for aerial reconnoissance.

"In regard to the latter, it is astonishing how quickly the habit is acquired, even by those who are not aviators, of thinking of the weather in terms of its suitability for flying. There has been a bright moon also, which has militated against night attacks.

Music in German Trenches.

"On Saturday, Oct. 5, practically nothing happened except that each side shelled the other. Towards evening on Sunday there was a similar absence of activity. Opposite one portion of our line the enemy's bands played patriotic airs, and the audiences which gathered gave a chance to our waiting howitzers.

"Not only do their regimental bands perform occasionally, but with their proverbial fondness for music the Germans have in some places gramaphones in their trenches.

"On Monday, the 5th, there were three separate duels in the air between French and German aviators, one of which was visible from our trenches. Two of the struggles were, so far as could be seen, indecisive, but in the third the French airmen were victorious and brought down their opponents, both of whom were killed by machine gun fire.

Expect Death When Taken.

"During the day some men of the landwehr were taken prisoner by us. They were in poor condition and wept copiously when captured. One, on being asked what he was crying for, explained that although they had been advised to surrender to the English they believed that they would be shot.

"On that evening our airmen had an unusual amount of attention paid to them, both by the German aviators and their artillery of every description.

"One of our infantry patrols discovered 150 dead Germans in a wood one and a half miles from our front. We sent a party out to bury them, but it was fired upon and had to withdraw.

"On Tuesday, the 6th, the enemy's guns were active in the afternoon. It is believed that the bombardment was due to anger because two of our howitzer shells had detonated right in one of the enemy's trenches which was full of men. Three horses were killed by the German fire.

Both Sides Using Sappers.

"Wednesday, the 7th, was uneventful. On Thursday, the 8th, the shelling by the enemy of a locality on our front which has so far been the scene of their greatest efforts was continuous. Opposite one or two points the Germans have attempted to gain ground by sapping in some places with the view of secretly pushing forward machine guns in advance of their trenches, so that they can suddenly sweep with cross fire the space between our line and theirs, and so take any advance of ours in the flank.

"It is reported that at one point where the French were much annoyed by the fire of a German machine gun, which was otherwise inaccessible, they drove a mine gallery about fifty-five yards long up to and under the emplacement and blew up the gun. The men who drove the gallery belonged to a corps which was recruited in one of the coal mining districts of France.

"The fighting now consists mostly of shelling by the artillery of both sides and in front a line of fire from the machine guns as an occasional target offers. Our Maxims have been doing excellent work and have proved most efficient weapons for the sort of fighting in which we are now engaged.

How Germans Use Cannon.

"The artillery has up to now played so great a part in the war that a few general remarks descriptive of the methods of its employment by the enemy are justified. Their field artillery armament consists of 15 pr. q.-f. guns for horses and field batteries of divisions, and there are, in addition, with each corps, three to six batteries of 4.3 inch field howitzers and about two batteries of 5.9 inch howitzers. With an army there are some 8.2 inch heavy howitzers.

"The most striking feature of their handling of the artillery is the speed with which they concentrate the fire upon any selected point. They dispense to a great extent with the method of ranging, known by us as bracketing, especially when acting on the defensive, and direct their fire by means of squared maps and the telephone. Thus, when the target is found its position on the map is telephoned to such batteries as it is desired to employ against that particular square.

"Both for the location of targets and the communication of the effect of the fire, reliance is placed on observation from aeroplanes and balloons and on information supplied by special observers and secret agents who are sent out ahead or left behind the enemy's lines to communicate by telephone or signal. These observers have been found in haystacks, barns, and other buildings well in advance of the German lines.

Range Given by Aviators.

"Balloons of the so-called sausage pattern remain up in the air for long periods for the purpose of discovering targets and until our aviators made their influence felt by chasing all hostile aviators on sight, the latter were continually hovering over our troops in order to register their positions and to note where the headquarters, reserves, gun teams, etc., were located.

"If suitable targets are discovered the airman drops a smoke ball directly over it or lets fall some strips of tinsel, which glitter in the sun as they slowly descend to the earth. The range to the target apparently is ascertained by those near the guns by means of a large telemeter or other range finder, which is kept trained on the aeroplane, so that when the signal is made the distance to the target vertically below is at once obtained.

"A few rounds are then fired and the result is signalled back by the aviator according to some prearranged code."

CONVICT LABOR SWINDLERS.

Steel Foundry Men Would Charge Men Fee for Jobs and Then Discharge Them.

Licho Evanoff, John Daniels, Michael Cocosian, and Lader Amievian, holding responsible positions with the American Steel Foundry company at Granite, Ill., were each fined $50 and costs in the local court on charges of violating an act regulating private employment agencies. The testimony indicated that the defendants made a practice of charging employes a fee for their jobs, and would dismiss them after a brief service, when others would be put to work through the same system of graft. Evanoff took a jury trial, and after his conviction the others pleaded guilty. This conviction, Richard J. Knight, chief inspector of employment agencies, asserts, establishes a precedent.

PAPAL SECRETARY FERRATA IS DEAD; POPE SHOWS GRIEF

Leader in Work at Vatican Succumbs to Peritonitis; Made Cardinal in 1896.

ROME, Oct. 10.—Cardinal Dominic Ferrata, the papal secretary of state, died today.

Cardinal Ferrata was stricken with appendicitis soon after his appointment by Pope Benedict on Sept. 4. The immediate cause of his death was peritonitis, an outcome of his protracted illness. It was considered imprudent to operate.

The secretary of state passed away surrounded by faithful friends. He was conscious to the last moment. His last remark was: "I am so tired; I go to join my savior."

Pope Sorrowed by Death.

The death of the cardinal, although not unexpected, greatly affected the pontiff. The news was conveyed to him by telephone, and his comment was: "God's will be done, but it takes from me a dear friend and my right hand."

The pope immediately retired to his private apartments, where he prayed for the repose of the soul of the deceased cardinal.

Among the telegrams of inquiry received shortly before the cardinal's death was one from M. Briand, the French minister of justice.

Cardinal Born in 1847.

The cardinal was born at Montefiascone, Italy, in 1847. He was the papal legate to the world's eucharistic congress at Malta in 1913. Cardinal Ferrata was an archpriest of the Patriarchal Lateran Arch-Basilica.

He was created and proclaimed a cardinal June 22, 1896. For six years he was papal nuncio at Paris, and later was prefect of the congregation of bishops in Rome.

SPEECH BY CLARK PRAISES WILSON AS PEACE KEEPER

House Leader Says President Has Done Great Duty to People of America.

GAIN FOR WHOLE WORLD

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 10.—A tribute to President Wilson as a peacemaker and expression of a fervent hope that the war in Europe might soon end marked the first speech of Speaker Champ Clark in the fall campaign, delivered here tonight in advocacy of the renomination of Representative J. Thompson Baker.

"Perhaps—who knows?" said the speaker, "when President Wilson has finished his course as chief magistrate of this mighty republic, and when historians come to assign him his place in history, they will pass over the great domestic measures of his administration, such as tariff revision, currency legislation, etc., and declare that his efforts to keep the United States out of war constitute his clearest title to the gratitude of his country."

All Have an Interest.

Mr. Clark said Americans had both an altruistic and a selfish reason for wanting peace.

"We are all akin to somebody over there," he added, "and our hearts go out to our kindred in their sore distress. This applies to us all, whether our ancestors came over 300 years ago, as mine did, or at a later time. It applies with peculiar force to our 10,000,000 citizens who were born in the countries now in battle array.

Hope for Early Ending.

"Who started the conflict no one seems to know. What it is about appears equally obscure. No matter who got it up, no matter what it is about, we fondly hope and fervently pray for its early conclusion, not only for the sake of humanity and civilization, but for the sake of our own prosperity and happiness."

KAISER'S PEOPLE BELIEVE DEFEAT MEANS END AS NATION.

EXPECT 500,000 TEUTONS TO DIE ERE WAR IS OVER

Germany Hopes to Win, but Figures on an Appalling Cost.

PEOPLE REMAIN CALM

[This article by Mr. McCutcheon is on "The war as seen from a German city."]

BY JOHN T. M'CUTCHEON.

[Copyright: 1914: By John T. McCutcheon.]

AIX LA CHAPELLE, Sept. 24.—In copies of American papers which have just arrived I read with amazement of the gloom and depression which are said to prevail in Germany. The empire is plunged into mouring, according to some of these accounts, and the German papers are said to contain little besides casualty lists.

When I look about me here in Aix la Chapelle, or Aachen, as the Germans call it, I can see little or nothing to support these pessimistic reports that are being circulated and can only conclude that they are spread as part of a deliberate plan to deceive the rest of the world as to conditions in Germany.

Like a Political Campaign.

A great war seems to be like a great political campaign, magnified a thousand times. One side spreads stories calculated to show the hopelessness and demoralization of the other side.

In a political campaign the opposition is accused of all crimes in the calendar; in a war the opposition is accused of every brutality known to savages.

A great modern war is fought in the newspapers as well as on the battlefield, and the side possessing the greater facilities for circulating its stories has an immense advantage over the other in molding public opinion.

In the present war the allies have as great an advantage over Germany in this respect as a political party which controlled the newspapers would have over an opposition which had little or no means of reaching the public ear.

The consequence has been that the world is convinced by the constantly reiterated stories of German atrocities that they must be true, inasmuch as they are so ineffectively denied.

Germans Chafe Under Stories.

The Germans chafe under the stories of their brutuality, but helplessly shrug their shoulders and say: "In a few months the world will know the truth."

Just what the truth may be no one man can know. There have undoubtedly been atrocities committed, there have undoubtedly been many innocent people shot, and there have undoubtedly been many frightful consequences of this bitter fighting between nations which see their very existence hanging in the balance.

The English, French, and Belgians accuse the Germans of the most shocking cruelties, and the Germans accuse the English, French, and Belgians of equally shocking acts of barbarism.

Only 10 Per Cent True.

In the opinion of an impartial observer, such as I am endeavoring to be, I feel that 80 per cent of these accusations are untrue, 10 per cent fearfully exaggerated, and 10 per cent true.

I have heard Germans accused of spearing children on their lances and riding along with the bodies held aloft, but I have not been able to find anybody who had himself seen such a thing. I have heard Belgians accused of cutting off the breasts of German nurses, but I cannot find any man who can say that he knows of his own knowledge that these reports are true.

I have heard of Germans whose eyes were gouged out while they lay wounded on Belgian battlefields, but in spite of a thorough search for proof here in the Aachen hospital, I cannot find a man whose eyes have been gouged out.

The Germans say that the men who have been mutilated are dead and for that reason cannot be seen, but there was one report of a German soldier who was said to be in a hospital here and who had had his eyes gouged out. I searched for him, but no one could take me to him.

Applies Alike to All.

Consequently I have reached the conclusion that practically all of the atrocity stories, both pro and anti German, are either untrue or grossly exaggerated. If there have been otrocious deeds committed, it is hardly credible that the Germans alone have done them.

The average Russian soldier is far more illiterate and ignorant than the average German soldier, while the Belgian percentage of illiteracy is one of the highest among civilized nations. If one is to believe the stories of German barbarism, one can more easily believe the stories of Russian and Belgian barbarism.

As a type of the stories which the Germans tell about the English soldiers, I quote one which a young German officer told an acquaintance of mine.

While the fighting was especially fierce in a certain place in France a force of English soldiers held aloft a white flag. The Germans ceased firing and advanced to within 150 yards, when they were suddenly subjected to a withering volley.

The Germans dropped to the ground and the officer in command again ordered his men to advance. They had gone only a few yards when the white flag was again displayed and the German ordered his men to cease firing.

Doubts White Flag Story.

Once more the English held their fire while the Germans advanced much nearer, and then opened up a terrific fire. This was met by a charge which swept the English from the trenches and sent them fleeing in a panic.

The Germans followed, and found themselves receiving a fairly heavy fire from the rear, where later they found that uninjured English soldiers had smeared their faces with blood and had lain as dead when the Germans charged over them. Then they had opened fire on the Germans from the rear.

The officer who told this story said that five times in his own observation during one day's fighting the English had displayed the white flag and had fired when the Germans approached near enough to them. Thereafter the Germans would not recognize the white flag when shown by English soldiers and would never cross a trench without seeing that every English wounded man was genuinely wounded.

I tell this story as a type of the sort of story one hears. It may be true, but I am inclined to doubt it.

Victories Accepted Quietly.

When I arrived in Aachen three weeks ago the German army had been piling up victory after victory and was rolling the allies back toward Paris. One might have expected the town to be wild with excitement, but it was not. The victories were accepted quietly and with no demonstration.

There was not nearly as much excitement here when the Germans were nearing the fortifications of Paris as there was in America when our sailors and marines occupied Vera Cruz. One could see no exultation in the faces of the people in the streets and in the restaurants. In the city there was an orderly calm which is hard for one to understand.

Two weeks later the Germans suffered their first serious reverse. The newspapers and bulletins announced frankly that the Germans had been forced to retreat. The little flags on the war maps in the windows were moved back from Meaux and the environs of Paris to positions many miles further away. The crowds looked at the bulletins and the maps with no indication of despair or discouragement.

Calm During Anxious Days.

Day after day passed with no definite news. The reports of daily victories and advances were succeeded by reports which stated that the great battle was continuing but was indecisive.

It was a time for great anxiety and suspense, but the people took it quietly. The band played three times a day as usual, business proceeded in a tranquil, orderly way, and the crowds which walk in the streets in the late afternoon reflected no anxiety of thought.

Each day dawned with gray skies and rain showers were frequent. It was depressing weather, calculated to aggravate somber reflections if there were any, but there was no evidence of them in the faces of the people.

"Our forces have fallen back," some said. "One of the generals advanced too fast. His artillery could not keep up and now he is being drawn back."

One German medical officer told me that 40,000 Germans had been killed or wounded, and when I asked him what the enemy's losses had been he said that he did not know.

Courtesy Is Unfailing.

All through these significant and crucial days the attitude of the German people has been admirable in its repression, both in victory and defeat. The courtesy of the people has not changed, as it might reasonably be expected to do during the days when the news was bad.

One night five Zeppelins passed over, presumably bound for Antwerp. Two came back over this city, but I do not know what has become of the others. Perhaps they returned by another route or perhaps they were destroyed.

Last night two more Zeppelins were heard proceeding toward Antwerp, and today I am told that the Church of Antwerp has been destroyed, whether by shell fire or by bombs I do not know.

Yesterday and today, the 24th, the sun has shone for the first time in a number of days, and simultaneously have come reports of German successes. The allies are being pressed back from Reims, about which ancient city the fighting has raged for a number of days.

Also the news bulletins today report the sinking by German submarines of three large English armored cruisers. The bulletins state that the news is not official, but that it comes by the way of Holland from English sources.

Plenty of Food in Aix.

Contrary to reports, there is plenty of food here. The prices in the restaurants are very low and there is no indication of a shortage. Eggs, instead of being nearly a mark apiece, as I have read in an English paper, are 11 marks per hundred of the freshest and best quality—about 2½ cents apiece. Fresh meat is plentiful and other commodities are neither scarce nor dear.

It is possible that the proximity of Aachen to Holland may make food prices lower here than in the interior German cities, but I am told that there is no likelihood of a food shortage for a year or more. The crops this year have been large and the people have succeeded in getting them safely harvested and stored.

Nearly every night we eat in one of the principal hotels, which serves an excellent dinner for 1½ marks, about 37 cents. Soup, two meat courses, a vegetable, and cheese are included in this dinner. Correspondingly low are the prices in all the other eating places, a condition which could not possibly exist if the country were suffering a food shortage.

Seems No Lack of Money.

Also there seems to be no lack of money, if one may judge by the way the people have responded to the call for subscriptions to the war loan. The government first called for subscribers to take up a bond issue of 2,500,000,000 marks, and within a few days the applications reached a total of nearly 5,000,000,000 marks.

This tremendous response insures the success of the second bond issue of 2,500,000,000 marks, which will be called for later if required. It also indicates that the German people, either from patriotism or from the instinct of self-preservation, are willing to back the present war policy to their last mark.

A man who came from Berlin yesterday said the nation was absolutely a unit in support of the war and that no party nor faction nor paper had raised a dissenting voice against the war.

Believe Defeat Means End of All.

If Germany loses, the people believe it will mean national extinction, and that Russia will inundate them from the north, France from the south, and England will take her colonies and her overseas commerce. Consequently they are fighting for their lives and in the belief that they must not lose.

The Germans with whom I have talked are most earnest in their belief in the kaiser's love of peace. They say that he had hoped to finish his reign without war, and quote his action in Morocco a few years ago as illustrating his willingness to accept humiliation rather than go to war.

They also say that Russia began mobilizing several months ago, in proof of which they point to Russian prisoners, captured on the German frontier, who belong to regiments known to have been stationed in eastern Asia.

These regiments must, they reason, have been drawn in from the far east and brought within striking distance of the German border long before war was declared.

All Males Ordered Killed?

I heard a story yesterday which indicates the bitterness of the Russian fighting. A Russian general issued a printed order, so the story goes, that every German male who was old enough to serve in the army should be killed regardless of whether he was civilian or soldier. The women were to be spared.

The Germans say that if this general is ever captured he will be immediately shot.

The losses in the war have been terrific. In Aachen alone I think I have seen a thousand wounded men in the streets, aside from those in the hospitals.

I have seen scores of wounded officers, many of them wounded in two or more places. They may be seen in the restaurants or in the streets at all times.

Casualties May Reach Millions.

For these great losses the Germans have nerved themselves. They expect the casualties to be great. One prominent German made the prediction yesterday that before the war was ended 500,000 Germans would be killed and perhaps four times that number wounded out of a total of 10,000,000 men.

He added that the enemy's losses would be very much greater, and that, unfortunately, these gigantic losses would include the best blood and manhood of the nations at war.

These great numbers are too overwhelming to comprehend. Ten million dead and wounded may be the total when peace once more prevails in these war stricken nations and empires, and no matter who wins, the map of every continent in the world is sure to undergo the greatest change that has ever been known in history.

Few Women in Mourning.

Nearly all the millinery shops in Aachen have their windows entirely filled with mourning millinery, yet one sees comparatively few women wearing mourning in the streets. This is due to a wish expressed by the government that women do not appear in public with their bereavement so much in evidence.

The newspapers, however, devote their back pages to the black bordered announcements of the deaths of men in the war zone.

These announcements are inserted by the friends and business associates and clubs of the men who have been killed, and it often happens that two or three large announcements are devoted to a single man.

Few Ads in Papers.

The newspapers in Germany these days are four page and two page editions. There are few advertisements, aside from the "In Memoriam" cards on the back pages, and the articles are quite short. A great battle will be given only thirty or forty lines, and the headlines will be restricted to one line of heavy black type at the top of the first page.

Considerable space has been devoted to the attitude of the United States, and it is constantly in evidence that Germany hopes to appear in the best light before the Americans.

The newspapers reprint many articles which reflect a favorable attitude in American opinion, and one often hears the hope expressed that the Americans may know the truth about the conduct of the German soldiers in the war.

Round Robin Pleased Kaiser.

When I returned from the French frontier after having followed and been with the German army for a number of days, I was so convinced that the stories of German atrocities had been grossly exaggerated that I, in company with four other American correspondents who shared this belief, made a statement in which we united in declaring that the conduct of the Germans, so far as we had been able to observe, was excellent.

In Berlin the statement reached the war office and was sent to the kaiser in Luxemburg. The latter expressed himself as being highly pleased with it, and ordered that it be printed in all German papers.

A letter of thanks was sent to us by the reichskanzler, or prime minister, and in consequence of this we are now to be given further opportunities of observing the German army in the field.

Mr. Alfred Mannesmann, one of the great German firm whose concessions in Morocco nearly caused a European war a few years ago, has been sent by the foreign office to take us down into France where we hope to see the German army in action. With us is also going Mr. Bjornson, son of the famous Norwegian poet, and a German doctor, who, by good luck, is the husband of a Chicago lady, formerly Miss Bartholomae of the the well knonwn family of brewers.

We have announced that we go neither as pro-Germans nor anti-Germans, and that we will write of things as we see them, whether they reflect credit or discredit upon the German soldiers, and this, say the Germans, is all that they ask us to do.

ZIONISTS SEEK WARTIME HELP

Chicago Jews to Aid Palestine Colonies Formerly Aided by Europe.

TRY TO RAISE $100,000.

The effects of war on Palestine are to be repaired with American dollars, according to Mrs. Benjamin Davis of 6120 Drexel avenue, president of the conference of Jewish women's organizations.

At the first meeting of the season at the Stratford hotel on Oct. 26, Mrs. Davis will launch an appeal for funds for the Zionists. Later Louis D. Brandeis, chairman of the provisional executive committee for general Zionists' affairs, and Nathan D. Kaplan will speak at a mass meeting.

Achievements of a generation in Palestine are imperiled on account of the war. From the nations now at war formerly came sustenance for Palestine. More than $100,000 now is needed to repair the losses and keep the Zionists' colonies together. Relief must come from America alone at this crisis, it is said.

Aid for Travelers.

Among other things that will be considered at the conference by the delegates, representing more than 10,000 Jewish women in forty-eight clubs and societies, will be the Travelers' Aid Society of Chicago and Illinois. Mrs. Ignace J. Reis of 4463 Berkeley avenue, treasurer of the society, will tell of the benefits of a Travelers' aid for lone young Jewish immigrants coming to the city.

This society, of which T. C. MacMillan is president and Everett L. Meservey the general secretary, with offices at 39 South La Salle street, contemplates buying a large building, to which all travelers requiring assistance will be taken. Here, as a general center, the Travelers' aid will distribute the travelers of different nationalities to the charitable societies to be cared for.

Want Jewish Chaplains.

An effort will be made to collect $1,000 to send a Jewish chaplain to all the penal and corrective institutions of the city and country this year. The Jewish women will take steps to assist the cripples and the blind and the physically unfit to a livelihood and to put the unemployed in connection with employers.

ACCIDENT TOLL CUT DOWN

Safety First Men to Show Decrease in Injuries.

MEET HERE ON TUESDAY.

National Council Gathering Will Be Attended by 1,500.

Fifteen hundred exponents of the "Safety First" slogan will gather in Chicago on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of this week at the Hotel La Salle. The third annual convention of the National Council for Industrial Safety—the organization that saved 17,000 lives and 1,000,000 accidents during the last year—will represent practically every large industrial and railroad corporation in the country.

W. H. Cameron, secretary for the national council, will submit a report during the convention showing the results since the establishment of the organization in 1906.

Decreases in Accidents.

The following decreases in accidents and deaths have resulted from the educational propaganda, safety devices, and hazard eliminations that have been made by the larger industrial organizations under the direction of the council:

The Chicago surface lines	..75 per cent in injury to school children
Fairbanks-Morse company	72 per cent
Commonwealth-Edison company	40 per cent
Illinois Steel company	70 per cent
International Harvester company	68 per cent
Packard Motor company	67 per cent
Eastman Kodak company	49 per cent
Santa Fe railroad	36 per cent
Chicago, Burlington and Quincy	31 per cent
Chicago and Northwestern	25 per cent
New York Central lines	30 per cent
Pennsylvania lines	30 per cent

One Concern Spends $5,000,000.

The United States Steel corporation has spent more than $5,000,000 on the safety movement and has reduced the number of its accidents and deaths 10,074 since 1907.

It is stated also that cases of dysentery, which are common to all wars, have occurred, and that cholera has been imported by Russian prisoners.

PATTERSON PICTURES ANTWERP'S TERROR AS GERMANS NEARED; SEES BATTLE

PATTERSON GETS HIS BAPTISM OF FIRE AT ANTWERP

Pictures Battle of Termonde as He Saw It with the Army.

SEES WAR IN ALL PHASES

that I know nothing whatever of the tactics of the battle, except what I read in the Belgian papers afterwards. There was no place where one could go with a pair of powerful field glasses and watch distant troops in pygmy battalions far off, being maneuvered like pawns.

We simply drove along in the automobile, passing troops all the time waiting by the roadside until we heard the banging.

Cannonading Increases.

It got louder and louder and more frequent, until we struck a railroad. I don't know in which direction it was from Termonde, some one having stolen my compass and Weigle's, too, but I think it was southeast. Anyhow, no sooner had we got there than we felt it wise to pull out of the road behind a brick freight shed.

The Germans from somewhere or other were using shrapnel and there was a handful of shrapnel bullets behind the shed, still hot. I think they had got out of the egg about a minute and a half.

Promptly things began to happen. About five wounded came out of the road and piled into our automobile. That is unkind. They were helped in chivalrously by all of us. Then our blessed chauffeur chugged off with them, leaving Weigle and me afoot and not only afoot but with a moving picture apparatus which weighs a lot.

Hears His First Shells.

I had never heard shells going by and bursting not far off before. In fact, I had never heard them at all, or seen them, either. They seem to make a tremendous impression even on people they don't touch.

Any one who has ever heard shrapnel remembers it, and says it sound like "whoosh, whoosh, whoosh, boom, wheee-e, whee-ee, whee," or like something else that looks equally silly in print.

Pretty soon I noticed that all the Belgians had gone back past us, about two regiments, I think, and that we were the extreme outposts of the Belgian army, or the rear. It was getting into things very suddenly. I suggested mildly to Weigle we might move. He said it was a fine place to get pictures. But I "beat it." So did he.

Their Place a "Ticklish" One.

I explained as we went carrying the cinematographic studio that it was the part of good generalship to follow up a retreating army and cut it to pieces, and that we were the first ones they would come to. He said they would very likely respect civilians and I bitterly remarked that shrapnel knew no civilians.

The shrapnel was coming pretty near just then. I don't mean to say that it dented the suitcase or broke the lens of the confounded camera, but a lot of it broke within a city block on both sides of us, and that is quite near enough. It sounds very peculiar.

At the end of the half mile's walk the road turned, and we found the Belgians in concealed trenches there.

So if the Germans had followed up the Belgians in retreat we would have been between the two lines. However, they didn't, and after an hour or so the Belgians came back and passed by the station again into the field beyond.

I hung back this time, adhering to my preconceived theory that it was a war correspondent's duty to his paper and himself to get on a high hill and use a pair of powerful glasses, as in a grand stand at a ball game. I wouldn't go on the field in a ball game—unless I was playing myself—why, then, in a battle?

But it doesn't work that way. There aren't any hills hereabouts. Everything is as flat as your palm, and rows of high trees every quarter mile in all directions cut off your view.

You have got to be somewhere thereabouts to see a thing—unless you go up into one of the church towers, which are the highest spots in the country.

The Belgian officers use them as observatories, and the Germans usually drive a shell or two in them for that reason, just to be on the safe side. A church tower is no place for a minister's grandson in Belgium these days.

Anyway I stayed within the reasonable distance of the advance, always remembering that a modern bullet carries 2,000 yards.

The Belgians deployed and crossed the field—it was a big one, half a mile across, one of the very few so big—and finally disappeared into the woods beyond. They looked like pygmies on a giant chessboard toward the end, and I expected fire to break out at them and mow them down in heaps, but it didn't. The Germans had gone.

Chauffeur a Patriot.

The chauffeur came back. I passed some harsh words to him about leaving us afoot, and he said that in his view Belgian wounded came before American well men. Quite true, I suppose, but the trouble with the theory, from our point of view, was that precisely the moment when the wounded began arriving fastest was the moment we would want the car.

In my heart I accused him of "cold feet," but I was wrong there. He has all the other faults there are, but he hasn't cold feet—I saw him under plenty of fire next day, and he was unconcerned, while I had an argument with myself back and forth as to whether I should get behind some convenient shelter while he was standing there in the open, and I finally decided that I should.

Sees His First Dead Soldiers.

We went on into the field which the Belgians had just crossed and there saw my first dead soldiers. Horrors, crown of horrors!

Shrapnel had got three or four together and the wounds were ghastly beyond words. Faces unfaced—the inside of the head was out, and the outside in. None had been wounded in the body.

Further, where another shrapnel had burst, a couple of Belgians and I picked up a wounded man. He had a hole on the top of his head twice as wide as a dollar; how deep I don't know. His face was gray. Clearly he was dying. It was no use taking him anywhere in the automobile, so we laid him down as gently as we might by a hedge, put a flower on his breast, and left him with his fingers making the death clutch at the buttons of his coat.

In beds, it is said, they pluck at the sheets. I suppose it is the same instinct.

Goes to the Hospital.

We picked up a couple of other wounded and put them in the automobile. This time I went with them to the temporary hospital. On the straw lay thirty or forty others. The surgeon, a good looking fellow, worked rapidly, smoking a cigar. He asked only three questions of each wounded soldier:

"Name? Company? Regiment?"

A man standing beside him took it down.

It was dusk, so I told the chauffeur we would go back to Antwerp (thirty miles) and the indefatigible Weigle said yes, but we must start back again at 9 so as to be on the firing line at dawn. I agreed, sighing.

The chauffeur turned up at 9, full of emotion, and certainly half full of alcohol. He displayed some wedding rings, worn pocketbooks with a few centimes in them, and a picture of the wife and so on, and began to cry. Then we started. All sorts of motor troubles delayed us, and we arrived at 1 at Termonde.

Chauffeur Wears Spiked Helmet.

I forgot to say that on the way home the chauffeur decked himself and a Belgian friend he had invited into the car with spiked helmets he had picked up from German dead on the field. He was cheered along the road by troops who knew him, but as it grew darker the cheers changed to questions.

Finally an officer in a rage stopped him and gave him the most scathing arraignment I ever heard, telling him nothing could be so certain death as to drive a car with a German helmet on his head through the dusk. The next day the fool did the same thing and we almost did get shot.

We slept in a stable that night from 1 o'clock on with a squadron of lancers, men, lances, and horses. The horses had eaten all the hay the men were sleeping on, so we slept on boards. I didn't sleep at all. The men snored and the horses stamped the stone floor, and at 4 o'clock I went out to smoke a cigaret in an automobile.

Arrested as a Spy.

I tried to say pleasantly to the sentry at the gate in my amazingly bad French that I just wanted to go to my automobile, so he arrested me for a spy and took me to Gen. Michel, across the way. The general was already up and I was glad to be taken to him, for he posed for Weyl's infernal cinema when daylight came and might not have if I hadn't made his acquaintance. He is a lieutenant general, which is class. He is in charge of the Fourth division, one of the four generals immediately under command of the king.

A battle is a very thick affair. People have a tendency to think of a battle as an affair of one dimension, length, a couple of long lines firing at each other. But it isn't so. A battle is pretty near as deep as it is wide.

Battle Ten Miles "Deep."

We slept at Termonde and the firing line was ten miles away, but the battle was in progress all that way. I don't mean shooting, but troops under arms ready to shoot, moving slowly backwards or forwards.

Another feature of a battle is the deliberation of nearly all the movements. Troops intrenched at unexpected spots, with rifles at ready, lancers hidden behind hedges, ammunition of artillery behind buildings, scouts, motorcyclists, sentries everywhere, regiments at rest in a ditch, rifles in hand, and a mile further on a regiment with rifles stacked.

To me it looked like uttermost chaos. All sorts of troops going slowly in all sorts of directions, and over it all the sound of distant firing.

Trenches Sign of Enemy.

As we got nearer the troops were more and more in shelter. That was one sign and the increased loudness of the firing was another.

I noticed one thing and that was I didn't mind it half as much as the day before. I had gone through it the day before and the noise didn't hurt me, so I began to thing it wouldn't—probably.

We arrived at the convent of the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul at Grysemgen. In normal times it is a normal school. The nuns teach young women to teach. They are not medical or surgical nurses by any means. Yet the war swept over them; they swung a Red Cross flag without, and eighty German and twenty Belgian wounded were brought in that morning. Some had hideous body wounds, and the nuns washed and dressed them tenderly, and, to my green eyes, as skillfully as trained hospital assistants. Not one blanched at this twist of the wheel.

Chauffeur Gathers Trophies.

Our chauffeur centered his interest on the German trophies. He made himself useful in the business, running errands and transporting wounded to the railroad. As I told him, picking them off the field was different, but acting as courier and leaving us afoot out there with Weigle's impedimenta was something else. However, what I told him had no effect.

He had already collected a couple of dozen German helmets, and what he wanted of them I know not—but he did. In the hospital one of the German wounded had the iron cross of valor pinned to his uniform, which swung over the back of a chair. Our chauffeur started to cut it off. The wounded man's eyes followed him, but of course he knew it was useless to protest. Then a nun came up and forbade our chauffeur, saying in French what he proposed was a dirty act. There was an argument and the nun prevailed.

Got the Iron Cross Later?

Later our chauffeur transferred half a dozen German wounded to the Termonde hospital, including the man with the iron cross. I fancy our chauffeur now possesses it.

Right outside the convent was a Belgian battery of four guns. By right outside I mean within a hundred yards. If the Germans returned their fire with shells and struck the convent, there would have been a great scandal. However, they didn't know where the battery was, seemingly, although it was unskillfully concealed and fired a good deal. But considerable rifle and machine gun fire came that way.

Mitrailleuses Carry High.

I was talking to a caisson driver who had lived in San Francisco. There were a few sounds of sing, sing, at which the caisson driver pointed up and smiled. "Mitrailleuse," he said. "They shoot way high—dirty beasts." I strolled behind the wall near by.

But although one knows that rifles kill or wound three to one, compared with shrapnel, the knowledge is purely intellectual. Emotionally one dreads shrapnel three times as much as rifle. It is unreasonable, but it is so. The sound of shrapnel is plain devilish, that's all; whereas a rifle bullet fifty feet or less away sounds merely like the brief hum of a mosquito.

Pay Visit to Alost.

In the afternoon we went to Alost. There was more shrapnel. A half squadron of lancers was under a bridge for shelter and that seemed a convenient place to be, for the shrapnel was rah-rahsihing by. Unfortunately, I asked the extremely good looking lieutenant in charge where all the shooting was coming from, and he took us up on the top of the bridge to explain. He was so elaborate in his explanations, too. It seemed interminable. He lent us field glasses to make sure we followed him, whereas I was glad to accept his first statement that the guns were over there—anywhere—and the German guns were over there—anywhere else. The chauffeur seemed to want to linger and there was with us a Catholic missionary, Father Edward Keys of the white fathers of Africa, who stood up there, too, apparently not caring at all. The lieutenant said none of the guns were near and to my indignant response that shells were flying overhead, he said they were way above us.

Guns Boom Close at Hand.

Just as he again remarked that none of the guns were near, two went off that seemed to be under our feet. "Ah!" said the lieutenant with delight, "ce sont des Belges" (those are Belgians). I didn't argue the matter any further. If under the railroad bridge was good enough for the lieutenant's half squadron, it was good enough for me, and there I went. So did Weigle, and the others followed in a reasonable time.

There was street fighting in Alost and the usual calamities, burnings, and so on, and we struck the bridge at the psychological moment. The Germans had been driven out of the town. They lay dead, warm and bleeding, in the streets in front of the mitrailleuse that guarded the bridge, and then panic struck the citizens.

Flee Across the Bridge.

They came running across the bridge crying, some screaming though their danger was over. For the moment it was indescribable, the pitiful, frightened anguish of their faces. After 5,000 of them had passed it got on one's nerves. It communicated itself as a disease might. Every one was possessed with the idea that the Germans were returning. I was sitting in the cart, and Weigle was across the bridge grinding pictures of the German dead, and the chauffeur was giving them first search—"for the museum," he explained to an officer who questioned him. Then there came again shots, far more distant than those we had been having during the day. The soldiers who occupied the house with the mitrailleuse climbed out of the windows. In perfectly good order, but still they climbed out; and once more we were left outside the Belgian lines. As quick as we could collect Weigle and the chauffour could collect a few more helmets we left. After all, the Germans didn't come back.

From the little I have seen of it, war is indescribably hideous, ugly, terrible, cruel, and wasteful. But in its excitement it is also indescribably fascinating. It summons the ultimate qualities in all directions—the basest and the best—and I don't believe humanity will soon give it up.

In all the streets of Europe today you may see boys playing soldier. It comes naturally to them. But in times of peace you don't see them playing at arbitration tribunals. And what the boy likes, the crowd, which is a nation, likes. If you doubt it, read a book on mob psychology.

The young men I saw dead and disfigured with wedding rings on their fingers were terrible to see.

But until we in the United States have better evidence than the world has furnished since 1900 that war is at an end, let us have the second navy in the world. If we go into war again, let us fight it in the enemy's country or on the sea.

NEW PLEA FOR VOLUNTEERS.

Viscount Haldane at New Castle Says Terms of Peace Will Be End of German Militarism.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—"The terms of peace will be that the dominant spirit of militarism which has perverted every talent of the German nation will be crushed and broken so that those who come after us shall be free from such terror."

This was the concluding remark of a speech delivered this afternoon at New Castle by Viscount Haldane, lord high chancellor, at a meeting to influence recruiting.

Viscount Haldane claimed Great Britain was fighting because it was a sacred duty. He paid a tribute to the great qualities of the German nation, but said it had been prostituted to military uses, and this war was to end that spirit of militarism.

"If Germany should annex Belgium and crush France and annex Holland and check Russia," he said, "then this country would be doomed. Rather than see that accomplished I would see the British empire perish honorably."

Seat of Servian Government Moved from Nish to Uskub, Other Official News Says.

BERLIN, via Wireless, Oct. 10.—The following information has been given out in Berlin for publication:

"A bomb dropped by one of the enemy's aviators at Duesseldorf damaged an airship.

"The seat of the Servian government has been moved from Nish and is now at Uskub.

"The German war loan, which amounts already to $800,000,000, has been paid up in cash to the amount of $150,000,000.

"The Brazilian minister in Berlin has requested thirty of his countrymen living in the German capital to inform their relatives that they are enjoying complete security and that they have not been deprived of their liberty. This step is taken because of telegraphic reports to the effect that Brazilians in Berlin had been shot.

"The reports that cholera has broken out in Berlin are ridiculous.

"The Frankfurter Zeitung declares the people of Paris are depressed by the appearance of new German armies in the north of France. These troops were successful in frustrating the French outflanking evolutions.

DENY STARVING BELGIANS.

Germans Say Brussels Is Better Off than Capitals of Other Warring Powers.

ROME, Oct. 10.—Dispatches from Berlin emphatically deny the charge of the Belgian government that the populace of Brussels has been reduced to a state of famine by the Germans, who have commandeered all the food supplies. It is asserted that conditions in Brussels under German rule are much better than conditions in the capitals of the other belligerent countries.

Why Jeffery Cars Cannot Be Classed by Price

The habit of thinking of all motor cars of approximately the same price as being in the same class, is an injustice to some manufacturers while working to the advantage of others.

Jeffery motor cars cannot be so classed, because few of the motor car plants of the world are equipped to turn out their products on as economical basis as is the big Jeffery works.

Five and one-half million dollars in assets, with the highest credit in the industry, and a plant equipped with three million dollars' worth of the latest machinery constitute facilities which enable Jeffery to build a high-grade product which, if turned out by an organization of lesser equipment and capital, would necessarily have to be sold at a big advance over Jeffery prices.

Jeffery's organization of expert designing and manufacturing engineers, superintendents, foremen and mechanics have not been gathered together in a few weeks or months. It represents the work of forty odd years of manufacturing.

Jeffery's tremendous ready capital and freedom from the dictation of stockholders and directors enables him to conduct exhaustive experiments and thereby to take the lead in engineering instead of simply following the sometimes mistaken ideas of fellow manufacturers.

The same facilities enable Jeffery's purchasing department to buy the best materials offered by the markets of America and Europe in quantities which command minimum prices and without regard to matters of credit which frequently influence a good purchasing agent of a concern less fortunately situated.

Jeffery cars are manufactured in the big Jeffery Works—not merely assembled. There is only one manufacturer's profit from the raw material to the ultimate user. This means that Jeffery can for the same amount of money put more quality into his product that can the producer of an assembled car who is obliged to pay a profit to the maker of each individual part entering into the construction of his car.

Instead of using cheap, common bearings, Jeffery uses imported annular bearings. Instead of using the slow speed, heavy weight motors commonly used in American cars, Jeffery sent his engineers to Europe to design a high speed, light weight motor after the most approved European practice. Instead of building the famous Jeffery Chesterfield Six with ordinary semi-elliptic springs, he used the easy riding cantilever springs. Instead of the noisy, high friction bevel gears, the Chesterfield Six embodies the more expensive, smooth running, silent worm drive.

The Thomas B. Jeffery Company Jeffery Kenosha, Wis. U.S.A.

That is the explanation of Jeffery leadership. That is why Jeffery cars must be judged on a basis of quality, on value delivered rather than on price alone. You can buy a larger car but you cannot buy a better one.

The famous Jeffery Chesterfield Six is now in our salesroom ready for your inspection. It is impossible for us to convey to you the quality in this car. You must see it yourself. Call and see this wonderful car, see the cantilever springs, see the worm drive rear axles, the imported annular bearings, the superb style and finish. If we cannot convince you that this is a quality car from the radiator to the tip of the rear fender we will not ask you to buy.

Various models of enclosed bodies and the famous Jeffery Four are now on display.

YOU can now afford a Kingsbury Piano.

You can't afford to be without one, for this is the instrument that makes extravagance in piano buying unnecessary. It is solving the piano question in thousands of homes just now.

This coming week, and for one week only, we are going to feature the $350 model at $287, and on these very easy terms: $10 down and $6 per month. Further than this we cannot go in value giving, nor can any concern whose standards of piano making are equally high.

The Kingsbury is made in its entirety in The Cable Company's own plant, and right here lies the big fact for Piano Buyers—we make the Kingsbury Sounding Board, as well as its other vital parts. Now, remember, that almost without an exception there is no other piano maker in this country taking such measures to perfect the tone quality of his instrument who charges less than $400—almost half again as much.

Kingsbury Pianos are true toned. They wear well. They are built especially for those who possess a fine sense of musical values—a shrewd sense of the dollar's worth. You can reasonably afford to make this Piano Week in your home, for we have reached the limit of value-giving in a quality instrument.

In our Bargain Department we are featuring some used pianos taken in exchange. These we have rebuilt in our own repair shops. Of the many on our floor, we wish to call your special attention to the unusual values offered in the following:

ASKS COURT FOR HIS CHILDREN

Dr. H. J. Graham Charges Divorced Wife Is Peril to Them.

TAXI BILL WINS SUIT.

Declaring that his former wife, Mrs. Mattie Graham, is setting a bad example for their children, Dr. Herman J. Graham, dentist, has filed a petition in the Superior court asking the custody of the two children, who were given to the wife by a court order in April, 1903.

Dr. Graham in his petition makes new charges involving Mrs. Graham and F. L. Belt, who was made a co-respondent in the cross bill filed by the dentist in the divorce proceedings brought by his wife.

Mrs. Graham, with the two children, Earl and Alice, reside at 4430 Dover street. Dr. Graham, who resides at 863 Lorel avenue, has been contributing $20 a week alimony under the terms of the divorce decree, which was granted in his favor when Judge Dever found the charges of infidelity against the wife true.

Taxi Bill His Cue.

"The clerk in the San Francisco hotel where we were living gave me a bill for a taxi when I came down one morning," declared Guido Diero, a vaudeville musician, in his testimony before Judge Irwin in a divorce suit against his wife, Julia Tutro Diero. "I investigated and found that my wife had been out with a bartender and didn't get home until morning." A decree of divorce was entered.

Andrew Engelhardt of 3240 Parnell avenue was granted a divorce from his wife, Sadie, who, her husband said, went to Seattle with another man.

"I found my husband living with a woman who was since shot on the street and is dead," testified Mrs. Grace L. Wilson, who lived at 6121 Madison avenue until her separation, before Judge Sullivan.

Desertion Her Charge.

Anna M. Walters of 3250 North Karlov avenue was granted a divorce on the ground of desertion by Judge Foell.

Kate Urs of 5658 South Michigan avenue was granted a divorce from Tomo Urs by Judge Irwin. She alleged drunkenness and cruelty.

Edith L. Richards of 1151 East Forty-first street obtained an annulment of her supposed marriage to James Franklin, alias Richard Franklin, from Judge Irwin. She alleged bigamy.

Mrs. Daisy B. Clark was granted a decree by Judge Wacker in the Circuit court from Wade H. Clark, who, she said, left her ten years after their marriage.

Mrs. Violet Rissman of 220 West Sixty-fifth street gained a divorce from M. D. Rissman, a traveling man, who, she said, took another woman with him when he was traveling on the road.

Abraham H. Kalman, a dentist of the Boston dental parlors, is defendant in a divorce suit filed by his wife, Mrs. Mabel Kalman, who charges him with drunkenness and cruelty.

Pugilist's Wife Sues.

John Francis O'Keefe, once a well known pugilist and at one time matched to meet Jimmy Britt, is being sued for divorce by his wife, who, as Georgie McArdle, at 15 years of age was married to him, nine years ago, when he was 20.

Mrs. O'Keefe said she believed her husband's mind had been affected by a blow on the head. The ex-pugilist has retaliated by asking for custody of their two children, on the ground that his wife "is habitually drunk." She charges cruelty.

Leander Dickey alleges in his petition that his wife is addicted to the use of alcohol and that she was in love with a physician who rented their front room at 4852 Vincennes avenue.

Her husband, Edward H. Snyder of 717 Briar place, treated her cruelly and on one occasion "threw a fork at her so that it pierced her arm," according to Mrs. Irene Snyder, who is seeking a decree.

Uses Razor in Fight.

Strazie Venti of 1016 South Peoria street was cut across the hands and face with a razor when fighting with Frank Dobrinsky of 1114 West Erie street at North May and West Erie streets last night. Venti was taken to the county hospital and Dobrinsky was locked up.

HERO OF THE U-9 TELLS VICTORY of smoke, a flash of fire, and part of the cruiser rose in the air.

Seeks Out Other Cruisers.

Its crew were brave and even with death staring them in the face kept to their posts. I submerged at once. But I had stayed on top long enough to see the other cruisers, which I learned were the Cressy and the Hogue, turn and steam full speed to their dying sister.

As I reached my torpedo depth I sent a second charge at the nearest of the oncoming vessels, which was the Hogue. The English were playing my game, for I had scarcely to move out of my position, which was a great aid, since it helped to keep me from detection.

The attack on the Hogue went true. But this time I did not have the advantageous aid of having the torpedo detonate under the magazine, so for twenty minutes the Hogue lay wounded and helpless on the surface before it heaved, half turned over, and sank.

Third Cruiser Hunted Down.

By this time the third cruiser knew, of course, that the enemy was upon it, and it sought as best it could to defend itself. It loosed its torpedo defense batteries on bows, starboard, and port, and stood its ground as if more anxious to help the many sailors in the water than to save itself.

In common with the method of defending itself against a submarine attack, it steamed in a zigzag course, and this made it necessary for me to hold my torpedoes until I could lay a true course for them, which also made it necessary for me to get nearer to the Cressy.

I had to come to the surface for a view, and saw how wildly the fire was being sent from the ship. Small wonder that was when they did not know where to shoot, although one shot went unpleasantly near us.

Two Torpedoes Do Work.

When I got within suitable range I sent away my third attack. This time I sent a second torpedo after the first to make the strike doubly certain. My crew were aiming like sharpshooters and both torpedoes went to their bull's-eye. My luck was with me again, for the enemy was made useless and at once began sinking by the head. Then it careened far over, but all the while its men stayed at the guns looking for their invisible foe.

They were brave and true to their country's sea traditions. Then it eventually suffered a boiler explosion and completely turned turtle. With its keel uppermost it floated until the air got out from under it and then it sank with a loud sound, as if from a creature in pain.

The whole affair had taken less than one hour from the time of shooting off the torpedo until the Cressy went to the bottom.

Sets Course for Home.

I set my course for home. Before I got far some British cruisers and destroyers were on the spot and the destroyers took up the chase.

I kept under water most of the way, but managed to get off a wireless to the German fleet that I was heading homeward and being pursued, but although their destroyers saw me plainly at dusk on the 22d and made a final effort to stop me, they abandoned the attempt, as it was taking them too far from safety and needlessly exposing them to attack from our fleet and submarines.

CALLS CHICAGO TRADE IN PERIL

Commerce Body Head Pleads for Lower Freight Rates to the Coast.

PANAMA CANAL CAUSE.

"Unless the interstate commerce commission allows the railroads to make a lower transcontinental rate to Pacific coast points the entire midwestern section of the country will lose its business with the coast. Chicago's trade alone amounts to millions."

This was the prediction made by Henry C. Barlow, traffic director of the Chicago Association of Commerce, before Examiner Henry Thurtell a few minutes before the conclusion of the famous "long and short haul" controversy yesterday.

Mr. Barlow, along with other representatives from the midwestern section of the country, joined with the railroads in their petition for a modification of the fourth section order, which prevents the railroads from making a special rate to the coast without a proportionate reduction in rates to intermediate points.

Resist Midwest's Appeal.

The appeal was resisted by the intermountain representatives headed by Commissioner Bartine of the Nevada public utilities board. The hearing began on Tuesday. More than 100 rate experts representing the railroads and the shipping interests of the country have gathered the testimony which will be submitted to the commission.

"The business which Chicago and the trade centers of this section have with the Pacific coast will go to the eastern seaboard," Mr. Barlow testified, "because of the Panama canal situation. It is now cheaper—much cheaper—to send goods by rail to New York, thence by water to San Francisco, than it is to ship across the continent by rail. The cities of the eastern seaboard will have less charges to get to tide water with the goods, and they will be able to underbid us to just that extent. It will be enough to put us out of business."

Compares the Rates.

Mr. Barlow submitted the following exhibits, comparing the combination water-and-rail-rates from Chicago to San Francisco since the opening of the canal with the transcontinental rail rate:

	Combination rate, C. L.	Rail rate, C. L.
Cotton piece goods	$1.55	$1.60
Starch	.80	1.00
Pickles	1.20	2.45
Shoe findings	1.50	1.90
Tinware	1.55	*1.70
Paper articles	1.40	*1.90
Leather	1.35	1.35
Iron and steel	.80	.80
Paints	.90	.95
Hardware	1.35	1.90
Earthenware	1.40	1.50
Twine	1.19	2.45

Representatives from Milwaukee, Kansas City, and other shipping centers of the midwestern section of the country appeared in support of the railroads' pleas.

BLACKSTONE HOTEL PASSES DIVIDEND: WAR CUTS PROFIT.

Notice Sent to Stockholders Assures Them of Increased Prosperity Later On.

Payment of a dividend due this month by the Blackstone Hotel company has been deferred owing to the European war and financial conditions of the country in general, according to a notice sent to stockholders yesterday by Henry I. Morgan, secretary of the company.

"In view of the present financial conditions," the notice states, "the board of directors has deemed it wise to defer action upon the question of paying a dividend this month.

"Although the net result of the business of the Blackstone during the last three months compares very favorably with the summer of 1913, especially when the unprecedented circumstances are considered, the natural uncertainty as to the volume of future travel must be reckoned with for the time being.

"Since the Blackstone can pay expenses when only one-half full, the average of profits which may result from increased prosperity to the United States should later on prove satisfactory to our stockholders."

EYEWITNESS TELLS CARNAGE AT WIRBALLEN.

ging along under steaming buckets came hurrying up to the accompaniment of cheers and shouts. They bore soup that the men in the trenches gulped down ravenously. Meanwhile men with the white brassard and the red Geneva cross were busy out in the open, lending succor to the Russian wounded. The battle seemed to have come to a sudden halt.

But even as I was getting soup, the artillery fusillade broke forth again.

Russians Fire Three to One.

From 9 o'clock to noon the Russians hurled their heavy shells at the German trenches and the German guns. The German batteries replied slowly.

There was mighty little fuss and feathers about this business of dealing death from guns. The crews at each piece laughed among themselves, but there was none of the picturesque shouts of command, the indiscriminate blowing of bugles, and the flashy waving of battle flags that the word battle usually conjures up. It was merely a deadly business of killing.

Over to the right, a scant 800 yards away, the Russians had apparently succeeded in getting the range. As I watched through the glasses I saw shrapnel burst over the battery there and watched a noncommissioned soldier fall with three of his comrades. I was told that one had been killed and three wounded. The Red Cross crew came up and bore away the four—the dead and the live—and before they were there the gun was speaking away with four fresh men working it.

Calls for More Ammunition.

But the shrapnel kept bursting away over it and soon an orderly came riding furiously back on his horse, saluted the officers with me, and shouted as he hurried back to the artillery reserve:

"Six inch shells to the front; more ammunition."

I went back to see the wounded, but the surgeon wouldn't let me. I expressed to him my wonder at the few wounded. I had seen only a few in the trenches, and no German dead until I saw the artilleryman killed. He explained that the losses on the German side were light because the trenches were well constructed and because there had been no hand to hand, bayonet to bayonet fighting.

A courier is waiting to take this dispatch back to Insterburg and I am back at general headquarters again this [Friday] afternoon, with the actual firing line a mile ahead of me, but with the sound of firing nevertheless always audible. Fresh troops are passing to relieve the men in the trenches.

Infantry Attack Tried Thursday.

Yesterday, my first day at Wirballen, I saw the third attempt of the Russians to carry the German center by storm. Twice on Wednesday their infantry had advanced under cover of their artillery, only to be repulsed. Their third effort proved no more successful.

The preliminaries were well under way, without my appreciating their significance until one of my officer escorts explained.

At a number of points along their line, observable to us, but screened from the observation of the German trenches in the center, the Russian infantry came tumbling out, and, rushing forward, took up advanced positions, awaiting the formation of the new and irregular battle line. Dozens of light rapid firers were dragged along by hand. Other troops—the reserves—took up semi-advanced positions. All the while the Russian shrapnel was raining over the German trenches.

Finally came the Russian order to advance. At the word hundreds of yards of the Russian fighting line leaped forward, deployed in open order, and came on.

Some of them came into range of the German trench fire almost at once. These lines began to wilt and thin out.

Pause Only to Fire.

But on they came, all along the line, protected and unprotected alike, pushing forward with a yell, pausing, firing, and advancing again.

From the outset of the advance the German artillery, ignoring for the moment the Russian artillery action, began shelling the onrushing mass with wonderfully timed shrapnel, which burst low over the advancing lines and tore sickening gaps.

But the Russian line never stopped. For the third time in two days they came tearing on, with no indication of having been affected by the terrible consequences of the two previous charges. As a spectacle the whole thing was maddening.

On came the Slav swarm, into the range of the German trenches, with wild yells and never a waver. Russian battle flags—the first I had seen—appeared in the front of the charging ranks. The advance line thinned and the second line moved up.

Nearer and nearer they swept toward the German positions. And then came a new sight. A few seconds later came a new sound. First I saw a sudden, almost grotesque melting of the advancing line. It was different from anything that had taken place before. The men literally went down like dominoes in a row. Those who kept their feet were hurled back as though by a terrible gust of wind. Almost in the second that I pondered, puzzled, the staccato rattle of machine guns reached us. My ear answered the query of my eye.

Machine Gun Fire Tells.

For the first time the advancing lines hesitated, apparently bewildered. Mounted officers dashed along the line, urging the men forward. Horses fell with the men. I saw a dozen riderless horses dashing madly through the lines, adding a new terror. Another horse was obviously running away with his officer rider. The crucial period for the section of the charge on which I had riveted my attention probably lasted less than a minute. To my throbbing brain it seemed an hour. Then, with the withering fire raking them even as they faltered, the lines broke. Panic ensued. It was every man for himself. The entire Russian charge turned and went tearing back to cover and the shelter of the Russian trenches.

I swept the entire line of the Russian advance with my glasses—as far as it was visible from our position. The whole advance of the enemy was in retreat, making for its intrenched position.

Dead Men Cover Acres.

After the assault had failed and the battle had resumed its normal trend I swept the field with my glasses. The dead were everywhere. They were not piled up, but were strewn over acres. More horrible than the sight of the dead, though, were the other pictures brought up by the glasses. Squirming, tossing, writhing figures everywhere! The wounded! All who could stumble or crawl were working their way back toward their own lines or back to the friendly cover of hills or wooded spots.

After the charge we moved along back of the German lines at a safe distance and found the hospital corps bringing back the German wounded.

The artillerymen had resumed their duel and as we came up in the lee of the outbuildings of a deserted farmhouse a shell struck and fired the farmhouse immediately in front of us. As we paused to see if the shot was a chance one, or if the Russian gunners had actually gotten the range, a regiment of fresh reserves, young men who had just come up from the west, passed us on their way to get their baptism of fire.

"Rookies" a Gay Bunch.

Their demeanor was more suggestive of a group of college students going to a football game than the serious business on which they were bent. They were singing and laughing, and as they went by a noncommissioned officer inquired rather ruefully whether there were any Russians left for them.

Throughout the day we watched the fight waged from the opposing trenches and by the artillery.

Suddenly at sundown the fighting ceased as if by mutual agreement.

As I write this I can see occasional flashes of light like the flare of giant fireflies out over the scene of the Russian charge—the flashes of small electrical lamps in the hands of the Russian hospital corps.

I'm glad I don't have to look at what the flashes reveal out there in the night.

MANN AND HEFLIN IN HOT ROW OVER WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Remarks by Illinoisan Bring Charge That He Is Unworthy of Seat in the House.

FISTIC FIGHT AVERTED

[By a Staff Correspondent.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—The question whether Republican Leader Mann or Representative Heflin of Alabama, Democrat, characterized the more disparagingly the suffragists who paraded Washington, March 3, 1913, almost caused a riot in the house of representatives this afternoon.

Heflin charged Mann with attempting now to curry favor with the suffragists, of whom he said uncomplimentary things for having participated in the parade.

Mann characterized Heflin as the sort of person who insulted the women in that demonstration.

Heflin called Mann a liar, and a personal encounter between the two men, who were boiling with anger, was narrowly averted. Then after much discussion the house on a roll call expunged the tempestuous colloquy from the records by a vote of 154 to 63.

Women Foes of Mann.

The suffragists have never forgiven Mr. Mann for his remark on the parade. On the night of March 3, 1913 great indignation was voiced in the house over the rough and insulting treatment of the women marchers by men in the crowds of spectators which the police failed to control.

Representative Hobson, in demanding an investigation of the police, stated that he had been informed by a women "that her young daughter was on one of the floats and a ruffian climbed upon the float and insulted her daughter," to which Mr. Mann replied: "Her daughter ought to have been at home."

Heflin Opens Sore Spot.

Today Mr. Mann, giving concrete evidence of his devotion to the suffrage cause, offered an amendment to the Philippine government bill permitting women in the islands to vote, which later was defeated by a vote of 68 to 84.

Thereupon arose Mr. Heflin and charged the Republican leader with making a pretense of equal suffrage convictions for political purposes.

"I thought it would have been better for that young girl to have been at home," Mr. Mann explained, "than in the parade, for fear the gentleman from Alabama should have seen her. He would have been sure to have insulted her."

"Take it down! Take it down!" came cries from the Democratic side, this being the usual demand prefacing impeachment of the conduct of a member.

"The charge that I would insult a woman is outrageous and cowardly, and the man who makes it is unworthy of a seat in this house!" shouted Heflin, who was glowering at Mann from the Democratic side.

"The gentleman from Alabama," Mr. Mann responded, "made a speech at that time in the house which, although the record was changed, was interpreted by all who heard it as an insult to womanhood."

Heflin Rushes at Mann.

In the midst of the commotion that followed this utterance Heflin rushed across the chamber in the direction of the Republican leader, his eyes blazing with wrath and his arm upraised. Mann, pale and grim, calmly awaited the onslaught, but a dozen Democratic and Republican members intervened and stayed the progress of the irate Heflin.

"I denounce the gentleman from Illinois as a liar!" cried the Alabama member, shaking his fist at Mann above the heads of the colleagues who restrained him.

"I demand that those words be taken down," shouted the venerable Representative Payne of New York, and the Republicans echoed the cry.

"I hope the question will not be pressed," Mann said.

Ask Words Be Expunged.

More confusion ensued; Heflin started in on another venomous attack on Mann, a score of members were shouting for recognition, and the crash of the gavel wielded by Majority Leader Underwood was all that could be heard above the din.

At this juncture Representative Garner of Texas, who had just entered the hall, asked Mr. Mann to repeat his reference to Heflin.

"I said," Mann explained, "that I thought there was danger of insult to the women marching in the parade, and added facetiously that there might have been danger from Democratic crowds, and then added that the gentleman from Alabama might have been one of the crowd."

Norwegian Leader Coming.

Reservations have been made at the Blackstone hotel for Johan Ludwig Mowinkel, president of the Norwegian parliament and vice president of the Norwegian-American steamship line, who will arrive there Tuesday or Wednesday. He is accompanied by his son.

MOVING PICTURE ROILS SENATORS

Marshall Resents Criticism of Permitting Taking of Action Film.

CLASH WITH OVERMAN.

[By a Staff Correspondent.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—There was a commotion in the senate today over the episode of yesterday, in which Vice President Marshall, the chaplain of the senate, several senators, and the pages, posed for a moving picture film. Senator Overman, chairman of the committee on rules, announced that "no consent was given by that committee for that performance."

"This matter is impugning the good faith of the vice president of the United States," warmly observed Mr. Marshall. "He is a football to be kicked around most of the time, but this is one instance in which he is not a football to be kicked around. The sergeant at arms is here. Let him answer."

Marshall Questions Guard.

Addressing the sergeant at arms, Charles P. Higgins, Vice President Marshall said:

"Did Mr. Thistlethwaite, the vice president's secretary, state to you that a gentleman had come over here to inquire whether it would be all right to take pictures in this room?"

"He did not make any such statement," replied Sergeant at Arms Higgins. "He just said that you wished to have them taken."

Vice President Marshall then stated to the senate that that was not the form of the request that was sent over from his office to the sergeant at arms. He said he had given instructions to find out whether it would be all right to have the pictures taken.

Marshall Resents Criticism.

"The chair feels that this is a distinct public and open criticism of the present occupant of the chair, without any notice to the chair that there has been any violation of the rules of the senate, either intentional or unintentional, on the part of the chair," said Vice President Marshall, with a marked show of feeling. "This the chair takes as a public rebuke of his conduct, and will accordingly instruct the gentleman who took the moving pictures not to use them."

Vice President Marshall called Senator Pomerene to the chair and repaired to his room, where he summoned Senator Overman. There was a lively colloquy, during which the vice president charged Senator Overman with having taken advantage of the incident to humiliate him.

Meanwhile, the embargo on the moving picture film was removed, and the movie man was given permission to exhibit it.

The New SAXON $395

Half a Cent a Mile

If you are one of these who say you "can't afford" an automobile, stop a minute and consider these facts:

In a nation-wide series of 200-mile non-stop economy tests, 100 Saxon cars, in 100 cities in various parts of the country and under all kinds of road conditions, averaged 34.53 miles per gallon of gasoline. Some averaged more than 47 miles per gallon.

Recently a Saxon car established a world's record for durability and economy by traveling from New York to San Francisco over the Lincoln Highway, 3,389 miles, in 30 days. Over mountains and across the Great American Desert it kept its schedule and averaged 30 miles to a gallon all the way—½ a cent a mile for fuel.

Lots of Saxon owners tell us they travel 30 to 40 miles a day at a cost of 15 to 20 cents.

Can you find a cheaper mode of transportation—everything considered?

CONGRESS NEARS TERMINATION OF RECORD SESSION

Adjournment This Week Will End 18 Months of Continuous Sittings.

OVER A BILLION SPENT

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—When congress adjourns next week, provided nothing intervenes to prevent, it will have completed a session of more than eighteen months, the longest continuous sitting of the national legislative body in the history of the nation.

It will also have broken all previous records for extracting money from the public treasury, having appropriated $1,109,408,777 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915.

If the Republicans in the senate had not defeated the river and harbor bill, as passed by the house and amended by the senate committee, the appropriations for the year would have been $73,000,000 larger.

Appropriations Exceed a Billion.

The Sixty-third congress was convened in extraordinary session on April 7, 1913, by the proclamation of President Wilson. While the president ostensibly called congress together to revise the tariff, the special session was actually made necessary by the fact that two of the big supply bills, one vital to the existence of the government, had not been passed during the short session of the previous congress.

The Indian appropriation bill and the sundry civil bill were passed in the spring of 1913, thus bringing the actual total of money appropriated by the extraordinarily long session of congress up to approximately $1,235,000,000.

The appropriations for the fiscal year of 1915, made by this congress, exceed those of the previous year by $51,803,173 and exceed those of the fiscal year of 1913 by $121,055,437.

Major Laws Enacted.

The list of major laws enacted include tariff revision, federal reserve act, trade commission and supplemental anti-trust laws, repeal of free tolls in Panama canal, Alaska railroad act.

The special session, which merged into the first regular session of the Sixty-third congress on Dec. 1, actually accomplished one major piece of legislation, the passage of the tariff act. There were a few other bills of public importance passed by both branches of the national legislature, including the two appropration bills that had been carried over from the previous session and the bill to amend the Erdman act, providing for a federal board of mediation and conciliation. The latter act was passed in June, 1913, to avoid a threatened strike of trainmen on the eastern railroads.

History of Legislation.

While the federal reserve act was not passed at the special session, it had been approved by the house and hearings on it were being held by the senate banking and currency committee at the time the extra and regular sessions merged in December, and it was passed by the senate just before the Christmas recess.

Preliminary work on the anti-trust bills was undertaken in the house and in the senate late in the fall of 1913, although the president had not at that time delivered his address to congress outlining the scope of such legislation, and none of the administration bills were introduced until after the regular session commenced.

The anti-trust program, which started out, according to President Wilson's outline, with five separate measures, finally dwindled down to two, the trade commission bill and the Clayton bill, to supplement the existing laws against restraint of trade.

Several Measures Dropped.

Both of these bills have been passed and the Clayton bill, which is known as the omnibus anti-trust bill, contains the prohibition of interlocking directorates which, according to the original program, was to have been a separate measure.

Within the last few months it has been announced from the White House and by Democratic leaders in congress that the bill to regulate the issuance of railroad securities which was in the original anti-trust program has been "indefinitely postponed."

Next to the federal reserve act and the anti-trust laws the measure which provoked the widest interest was the resolution to repeal the free tolls provision of the Panama canal act. That was passed after heated debates in both the house and the senate in which a number of prominent Democrats opposed the wishes of the president.

Agricultural Act Passed.

The Smith-Lever agricultural extension act, which grants federal aid to state agricultural schools, was passed during the regular session, after having failed to pass in the last session of the Sixty-second congress on account of a filibuster conducted by Senator Page of Vermont. The bill was passed by unanimous vote in both branches of congress.

The bill authorizing the president to build a railroad in Alaska and appropriating $35,000,000 for the purpose was another achievement of this congress. A collateral bill to provide for the leasing of government owned mineral resources in Alaska has been passed by both branches of congress, but the conference report on it has not been adopted by the senate, although it is expected that it will be before adjournment.

San Francisco Is Helped.

After considerable controversy in both the senate and the house, a bill was passed authorizing the use of the Hetch Hetchy basin in a government reservation of the same name to be dammed and used as a reservoir to suppy water for the city of San Francisco and other California towns. This bill was indorsed by the National Conservation association.

Another act of this congress which is of considerable public importance is the passage of the bill regulating the transactions in cotton futures on the various exchanges.

In his annual message to congress President Wilson coupled rural credits with the federal reserve banking system, and declared that each was of equal importance.

POLICE SHATTER FOOTBALL IDOL

Midway's Freshman Full Back and "Frat" Man Held as Auto Thief.

ADMITS SELLING CAR?

The University of Chicago freshman football team is in need of a fullback. Donald Craig, who has been playing that position with a brilliance that attracted the attention of Coach Stagg, is locked up in the Hyde Park police station as an automobile thief, and a campus idol has taken a Humpty Dumpty tumble.

Without taking any steps toward entering the university Craig, who said he was graduated from Philips Exeter academy at North Adams, Mass., last year, managed to get himself on the freshman football team and into the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity. And for that matter he could have allied himself with any of the dozen "frats" on the campus, so keen was the competition of the rush for the delightful young freshman from the east.

Sneers at Del Prado.

Craig was already installed in quarters at the Del Prado hotel when the semester opened. He proved to be a good football player and a better host and soon became one of the most popular men in the new class. He did not deny a story that Jimmy Craig of Ann Arbor, who made the All-American football team last year, was his brother. His father, he said, was Donald Craig, a shipbuilder of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

One of Craig's attractions was his possession of an automobile. He was always willing to give a friend a "lift" to any desired destination.

Find Him at Hotel.

Craig was in his room at the Del Prado yesterday when a policeman called, accompanied by Arthur Dunleavy of 6120 South Robey street.

"That's the fellow," said Dunleavy.

Dunleavy, it developed, had been picked up while driving a motor reported as stolen. The car belonged to Curt H. Opitz, 7021 West Madison street. Dunleavy said he bought the machine from Craig, and Craig, according to the police, confessed he had stolen it to convert into money, the money to be used to pay his expenses through the fall term at the university.

THE TRIBUNE'S New York correspondent could find no Donald Craig in Poughkeepsie.

TALKS BEFORE TEACHERS.

All Labor on His La Grange Paper Done by Boys.

If it were not for labor troubles Rossiter Llewellyn of La Grange might have appeared sooner before the Cook County Teachers' association, seeking the achievement honors granted by the association. Rossiter, who is 13 years old, publishes a newspaper. He told the members of the teachers' association yesterday at the Art institute that, except for the labor question, the paper would have flourished long since.

"The paper is now a success," Master Rossiter said, "but two previous attempts failed. It was only a question of labor, too. Our paper is printed, folded, delivered, and sold by boys, and boys get the advertising. As the paper comes out on Saturday, most of the heavy work comes at the end of the week. We have found it impossible, almost, to get fellows to work when there's a football or baseball game on."

"Started at the Bottom."

"I was only one of the workers myself on the first two attempts. Now I own the paper and the printing plant. I got my experience under the other fellows. After they 'busted up' the second time, I bought the plant, and it didn't cost much then. The outfit, which is in the basement of my house, is worth $150.

"Every week I get $48 worth of advertising from the stores in La Grange. I urge my subscribers to patronize the La Grange stores. The paper sells for 5 cents a copy, or $2 a year. It has all the news we can get about people in La Grange—weddings, baseball games, and personal items."

Rossiter is in the first year of the Lyons Township High school. The paper is 10x12 inches in size, and varies from four to six pages. It is called the La Grange Record.

$150 on Fraction of Acre.

Another boy who spoke in behalf of achievement honors was Harvey Brooks of Morton Grove, who has made during the summer $150 on fifteen-sixteenths of an acre of land. Among the things he has grown were vegetable specialties, such as cherry tomatoes and orange marrow. He has sold them to restaurants, who use the cherry tomatoes in salads and the orange marrow, secured by crossing an orange and a sugar melon, as pickle.

LOSS IN HOUSE OF 50 EXPECTED BY DEMOCRATS

Shift in the Progressive Vote Will Hit Party in Power.

WAR CAMPAIGN EXCUSE

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—The voice of the politician is beginning to be heard in the land above the roar of foreign guns, much to the satisfaction of those who have challenged the world to produce a war big enough to overshadow an American election.

The Republicans, though sadly lacking in leadership, are seeking to arouse the people to indignation over "hard times," for which they blame the Democratic tariff, over Democratic extravagance, which transcends Republican prodigality, and over the $100,000,000 war revenue measure, which, it is contended, never would have been necessary had the Republicans been left in power.

Colonel in the Limelight.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt is arousing characteristic enthusiasm in himself and others with his denunciation of the two old parties, the political bosses, the Bryan peace treaties, the "demon rum," Wilson policies, corruption, and "pork barrels."

President Wilson is becoming a ready letter writer, sending forth fervid indorsements of loyal Democratic senators who want to come back and less fervid ones for those whose obedience has been qualified.

Now, led by Secretary of State Bryan, the members of the cabinet are taking the stump to extol Democratic candidates and Wilson policies.

Republicans Lose Confidence.

The Republicans before the outbreak of the war were confident of regaining some ninety odd seats in the house, thereby achieving a small majority. Now they are not quite so confident, the political psychology of the war situation being recognized by the politicians as favorable to the party in power.

That the Progressive vote is due to shrink tremendously from that rolled up by Roosevelt in 1912 is a foregone conclusion. That is because the colonel, though still campaigning with his old time vigor, is not running for anything himself.

Democrats Expect to Lose Seats.

The Progressive sadness of view of this situation is shared by the Democrats, who are indebted to the split in the Republican party for scores of seats in the house they won in 1912. With the Progressives cutting less figure this time the Democrats are prepared for a loss of fifty seats in the house.

The Progressives realize that they will lose some members of the house, but they are becoming increasingly confident of making gains in the senate.

Illinois Situation Complicated.

The reports from Illinois at this stage indicate a free-for-all three cornered contest for senator. The Illinois situation is about the most complicated on the political map at present, and it is apparently too early to detect the drift of sentiment. The only fact that stands out prominently is that Robins appears to have developed strength that has surprised even the Progressive managers, while in the Republican and Democratic camps one hears a good deal of speculation on the probable extent of the reported defections from the support of Sherman and Sullivan, respectively.

Senator Cummins is scheduled for an easy victory in Iowa, although the administration is doing all that is possible for the Democratic candidate, Maurice Connolly.

In Indiana the senatorial race seems to be between Shively, Democrat, and Beveridge, Progessive, according to the re-

SAYS MOOSE REJOIN G. O. P.

Garrett D. Kinney Thinks Party Will Sweep Illinois.

HEARS WEEK'S REPORTS.

Sees a Solid Republican Front in November

The Moose voters who strayed away from the parental fold in 1912 are flocking back to the Republican banner in droves all over the state, and nothing can stop the Republicans from sweeping Illinois next month, according to Garrett D. Kinney, chairman of the Republican state central committee.

Mr. Kinney yesterday went over the reports of the first week's efforts by the state organization out in the state and then deliberately gave it as his opinion that the Republicans will present almost a solid front to the Democrats on Nov. 3.

Here Is Statement.

Mr. Kinney issued the following formal statement:

"The first week of the campaign has witnessed the solidification of the Republican party in Illinois. Two years ago every county committee was disrupted and disorganized because of the formation of the Progressive party. The campaign was so short we were unable to reorganize the committees with loyal members of the party. This year the committees were elected at the primaries and we have 102 county organizations which are loyally supporting the entire Republican ticket and are enthusiastic believers in the prospects for its success.

"There have been two other important developments during the week. Senator Sherman answered Col. Roosevelt in a temperate but emphatic and conclusive statement in which he pointed out that Raymond Robins, Progressive candidate for United States senator, is a single taxer, a supporter of the single tax movement, and a believer in the principle. Mr. Robins has not answered that statement, although he has delivered numerous speeches throughout the state and had abundant opportunity to do so.

Cites Robins' Alleged Record.

"Downstate papers have referred to and commented upon the charge that Mr. Robins, while a resident of Pennsylvania, joined in, if he did not lead, a movement to starve the members of a local labor union into the acceptance of his own terms and return to work. Papers declare that the charge was brought to his attention at a number of meetings in the mining district in southern Illinois, but that he ignored it and declined to make any explanation.

"The prospects for the entire Republican ticket are improving each day."

CALLS SHERMAN OUT OF THE RACE

Raymond Robins, Back from Tour, Says Contest Is with Sullivan.

REPORT MOOSE GAINS.

Raymond Robins, Progressive candidate for United States senator, closed the week's campaigning downstate with a statement last night, in which he asserts Senator Sherman is definitely out of the race and that the fight is between him and Sullivan.

Mr. Robins urges all his friends and the voters of all parties to register Tuesday. His statement follows in part:

"The last week finds the Progressive campaign making great gains. Senator Sherman is now out of the running in the opinion even of his friends. His foolish attacks on President Wilson's Mexican policy and his childish controversies in defense of his checkered past have disgusted his own followers.

Democratic Revolt Grows.

"The Democratic revolt is gathering headway daily. In all parts of the state the free Democrats are proclaiming their independence of the machine and the henchmen of Boss Sullivan are cracking their whips in vain."

"The fight in southern Illinois is strictly between Raymond Robins and Roger C. Sullivan," said E. S. Barlow of Johnston City, publisher of the Williamson County News, who was in Chicago during the day.

"The insurgency against Mr. Sullivan in the Democratic ranks is very great and still growing. The coal miners are almost unanimous for Mr. Robins."

An organized movement among Chicago's trained nurses has been started in behalf of the candidacy of Miss Mary McDowell and Miss Harriet Vittum as members of the board of county commissioners.

Will Address Nurses.

Miss Vittum is a former trained nurse. Miss McDowell will address a meeting of nurses at the county hospital tomorrow afternoon.

President A. A. McCormick of the county board sent a letter to County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer in reply to the latter's demand that Mr. McCormick elect under which party appellation—Republican or Progressive—he desires to have his name appear upon the ballot as candidate for president and member of the county board. Mr. McCormick says that if there is a law to compel him to restrict his name to one ticket he will run as a Progressive. But he denies there is such a law.

ALL MUST REGISTER AGAIN

Canvassers Find Wrong Impression Among Women.

LETTER RECITES NEEDS.

All Lists Destroyed; New Ones Are Being Prepared.

With the general warning sent broadcast over Chicago yesterday that "registration prior to Oct. 3 does not count," political chieftains last night said practically everything possible had been done to arouse the voters to the great importance of registering on Tuesday, the last day of enrollment prior to the November election.

Through ward and precinct organizations, the churches, Sunday school organizations, women's clubs, civic bodies, and every possible means of publicity the several party managements have sent the warning cry:

"This is an entirely new registration. You can't vote Nov. 3 unless you registered anew on Oct. 3 or get your name enrolled Oct. 13."

500,000 Democratic Warnings.

Democratic leaders said if the enrollment Tuesday is not up to expectations the blame will lie at the doors of the Republicans.

In distributing half a million pieces of literature and chasers the Democratic managers say they have reached every known Democratic voter whose name was not enrolled on Oct. 3.

The Republican chiefs came back with the retort that they have done their work thoroughly and have succeeded in reaching all the known Republican voters, both men and women, whose names were not enrolled on Oct. 3.

On the first day of registration only 288,312 names were enrolled, men and women, out of a total enrollment prior to the primary of 652,883, leaving 364,571 still unaccounted for.

Women in Error.

While making house to house canvasses in the efforts to get women to register on Tuesday, suffragists found numerous women believe that because they registered last spring they need not do it again until two years have passed.

The chairmen of the ward and precinct organizations of the Sixth and Seventh wards wrote a letter to THE TRIBUNE asking for assistance in letting people know they must register, no matter when they last registered.

"The ward and precinct chairmen in the Sixth and Seventh wards," read the letter, "have ascertained that a number of qualified citizens, men and women, are not aware that they must register now in order to be able to vote Nov. 3. Many women who registered some months ago are under the impression that they need not again do so for a period of two years from that date. This condition seems to prevail throughout the city, as the very limited registration of Oct. 3 would indicate.

"It is of the utmost importance to the welfare of our governing bodies and of our city that civic consciousness be expressed on Oct. 13, which is the last date to obtain the right to vote at the election."

FORTE JURY ASKS DISCHARGE BECAUSE IT CANNOT AGREE.

Reports It Is Hopelessly Deadlocked, but Bailiff Sends It Back to Deliberate Until Tomorrow.

The jurors in the trial of Mrs. Pasqualina Forte, her daughter Anna, and her son Pasquale, charged with the murder of Antonio Morasco, reported to the bailiff in charge of them last night that they were hopelessly deadlocked, and asked that they be discharged.

The bailiff informed them that they could not be discharged until tomorrow by Judge Petit, before whom the case was tried, and they agreed to continue their deliberations until 11 o'clock last night.

They asked that cigars be brought them and renewed their arguments. Judge Petit gave the case to the jury at 5:40 o'clock Friday evening.

Every Tire Trouble
Brings You Nearer to Goodyears

Every rim-cut is bound to remind you that No-Rim-Cut tires avoid this.

Those are four exclusive Goodyear features. To get them you must get No-Rim-Cut tires. And that time is surely coming. It has come to hundreds of thousands already.

More men use Goodyears than use any other tire. And they are men who seek just what you seek.

ILLINOIS CENTER THIS WEEK OF NATION POLITICS

Washington Sends Spellbinders to Aid Each of Three Candidates.

SULLIVAN BIG ISSUE

The Illinois senatorial battle moves into the center of the national campaign stage this week with the invasion by men of national prominence in behalf of Raymond Robins, the Progressive candidate, and Roger C. Sullivan, the Democratic nominee.

Republican chieftains also have their weather eye focused on the Lincoln commonwealth, following the fortunes of Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, whose vote on Nov. 3 will be perused with great care to find comparisons with the Bull Moose strength of two years ago.

"As Illinois goes so goes the nation next time," will be the cry of the lucky party next month.

Roosevelt Coming Back.

That Col. Roosevelt holds Illinois to be the central battleground for the trying out of the Republican and Progressive issues is observed in his decision to return here one week from tomorrow for a final broadside assault on the Republicans, according to the party leaders.

Meanwhile the coming week will witness the opening of hostilities all over the state from Cairo to the Wisconsin line.

The Sullivan and Robins heavyweights will clash tomorrow for a three day hand-to-hand grapple through the downstate districts, with the heavy artillery and siege guns planted in the heart of "Egypt," south of the state capitol line.

Senator Owen, elected as a Democrat from Oklahoma, accompanied by Congressman James Manahan of Minnesota, elected as a Republican, will start in the morning on special trains for a whirlwind dash over the rural districts in behalf of Raymond Robins, the Moose candidate.

Out to Get Sullivan.

Owen and Manahan have broken outside the party corrals for this spectacular stump trip. They are supporting Robins, but are particularly imbued with the desire to lambaste Roger Sullivan, Democracy's big boss in Illinois. While saying a good word for the Moose candidate, they are loaded for bear on the Sullivan issue and will pillory the Democratic candidate without mercy.

While the Owen-Manahan team is finding the range with the sixteen inch oratorical howitzers, Mr. Sullivan's friends will be giving blow for blow with such national celebrities as Dudley Field Malone, collector of the port of New York and son-in-law of United States Senator O'Gorman, and United States Senator Thomas Gore of Oklahoma.

National Democratic Chairman William F. McCombs also will get on the Illinois stump for Sullivan and go all the route for the biscuit manufacturer.

The mufflers also have been taken off by the Republicans in their comeback at the Moose leaders, and particularly Col. Roosevelt.

In his recent trip over the state Col. Roosevelt went after Senator Sherman hammer and tongs, using the epithet "stool pigeon" in one of his vigorous characterizations of the senator.

Roosevelt Draws Sherman Ire.

This was the last straw, and the whole Sherman campaign now is built around the general charge that Col. Roosevelt is bent on a reign of destruction, that he is forgetful of his fast friends of only two years ago, and that he is not fair in his terrific onslaughts on the Republican leaders of Illinois who supported him in 1912 up to the time that he left the party.

While the other forces are tearing up the prairies this week Senator Sherman will be dashing over the state in a special train paying his respects to Roosevelt and reading the record of the friendships of two years ago, when Roosevelt selected him to make the fight against the Root rules in the national convention.

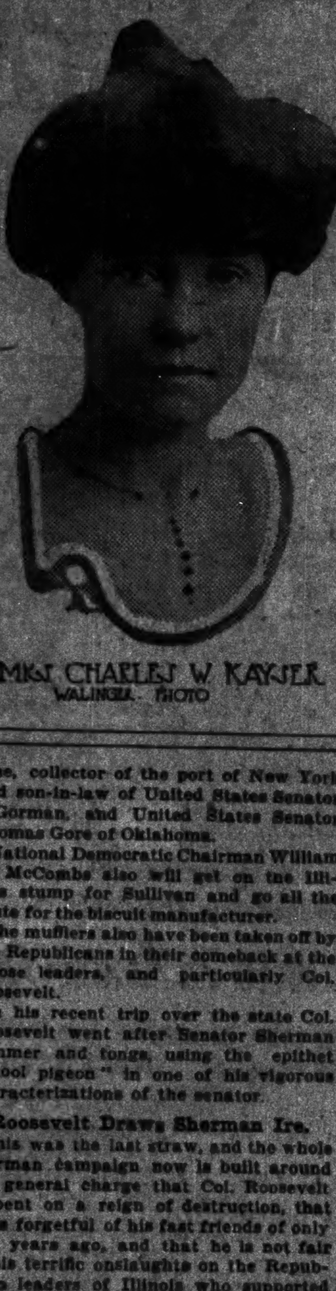
Suffrage? No More for Her.



MRS. CHARLES W. KAYSER.
WALINGER PHOTO

QUITS SUFFRAGE, QUITS IT "COLD"

Mrs. C. W. Kayser, Nettled, Denounces "Women Politicians" as "Greedy."

MOOSE ROW THE CAUSE.

Yesterday an ardent, enthusiastic, energetic suffragist.

Today an "anti."

This is the swift record of Mrs. Charles W. Kayser of Wheaton.

Mrs. Kayser has been one of the mainstays of the suffrage work in Chicago and a leader of the women of the Progressive party. She is one of the few who has been able to work with every faction of suffragists.

During the day she resigned from two positions. She asserted it was merely a starter. She says she is going to quit the cause "cold." Then she is going away to her ranch in northern California to remain for a year.

Resigns Two Positions.

Mrs. Kayser resigned from the Progressive club. Then she went over to the Illinois Equal Suffrage association and resigned from the chairmanship of pages and ushers at the state convention of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association. She said her resignation from the Chicago Political Equality league and from the state suffrage organization will follow.

And her reason is this:

"Men have been bad in politics," she said, "but the way women are going is worse. I want to get away from suffrage. I want to forget it. I would have cut loose from everything today except that I want to help Miss Vittum and Miss McDowell in their campaign for county commissioner. I think they are among the few unselfish women politicians.

"Out for the Plums."

"I've found that the women in suffrage and politics for themselves alone are the ones generally in the ascendancy. The best element among the suffragists are hampered and insulted and mistreated by woman who expect some day to land a big political plum."

The immediate cause of Mrs. Kayser's resignation from the Progressive club was the formation of an Illinois Progressive Women's league on Friday. Miss Marion Drake had invited the women of the Twenty-sixth to the Thirty-fifth wards to a tea to meet Miss Mary McDowell and Miss Harriet Vittum. Mrs. Kayser was one of the hostesses.

Shortly after the tea party began a faction of the women of the Progressive party not invited to the tea opened a meeting in the same room for the purpose of forming the league. They drew on Miss Drake's guests for their audience. Mrs. Kayser said that they had stolen the idea of the league from Miss Drake.

Gallagher Gives Bond.

Joseph P. Gallagher, indicted with William Lorimer, president of the defunct La Salle Street National bank, gave bonds yesterday. Dr. Charles Caldwell and Thomas Keeley, president of the Keeley Brewing company, are on Mr. Gallagher's bond.

O'HARA HOORAYS FOR PARTY; WILL DO TURN FOR SULLIVAN

Lieutenant Governor Tells Chairman Charles to Send Him Where He Wills.

Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara landed in the Democratic organization fold yesterday with both feet. Mr. O'Hara had been undecided whether or not he could forget his primary campaign against Mr. Sullivan until Col. Roosevelt came into the state and began attacking the Democratic national administration.

Now Mr. O'Hara understands it is a call to duty which no good soldier should shirk. It is a call to defend President Wilson. Accordingly he has offered his services to the Democratic state committee, imposing no conditions or reservations, and says:

"Send me where you will; I am ready for the fray."

PRAISE SLEUTHS FOR KILLING

Coroner's Jury Commends Slaying of Fleeing Holdup Man, Rotta Drengowski.

Detective Sergeants Wienke, Schultz, Mikula, and Hanson of the Shakespeare avenue station were praised by a coroner's jury at an inquest over the body of Rotta Drengowski, who was shot by the policemen while fleeing with two companions after holding up the saloon of Stephen Nemitz at 2104 North Western avenue.

SULLIVAN URGES DOWNSTATE VOTERS TO UPHOLD WILSON.

"Now Is Time to Prove Our Patriotism," He Tells All Partisans at Danville and Paris.

Danville, Ill., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Roger C. Sullivan jumped all the way from Missouri, where he spent last night, to the Indiana line for two big meetings in the Eighteenth congressional district today.

The first was at Paris this afternoon, where a thousand Edgar county farmers heard him. The second meeting, here tonight, brought people from all parts of Vermilion county.

An Edgar county escort, headed by the Rev. H. H. Peters of the Christian church of Paris, picked the candidate up at Mattoon and a Vermilion county delegation led by State Treasurer William Ryan, joined the party at Paris. Attorney General P. J. Lucey also joined at Mattoon, and was a speaker at both meetings.

Mr. Sullivan urged on his hearers their duty to maintain for President Wilson a working majority in congress.

"When the country had no serious questions to face," he said, "there were many among us who were given to wrapping the flag about them and proclaiming their patriotism. Now is the time to prove that patriotism. The Progressives assume they are a little in advance of the rest of us. Now they have a chance to approve the most Progressive man who has ever sat in the White House."

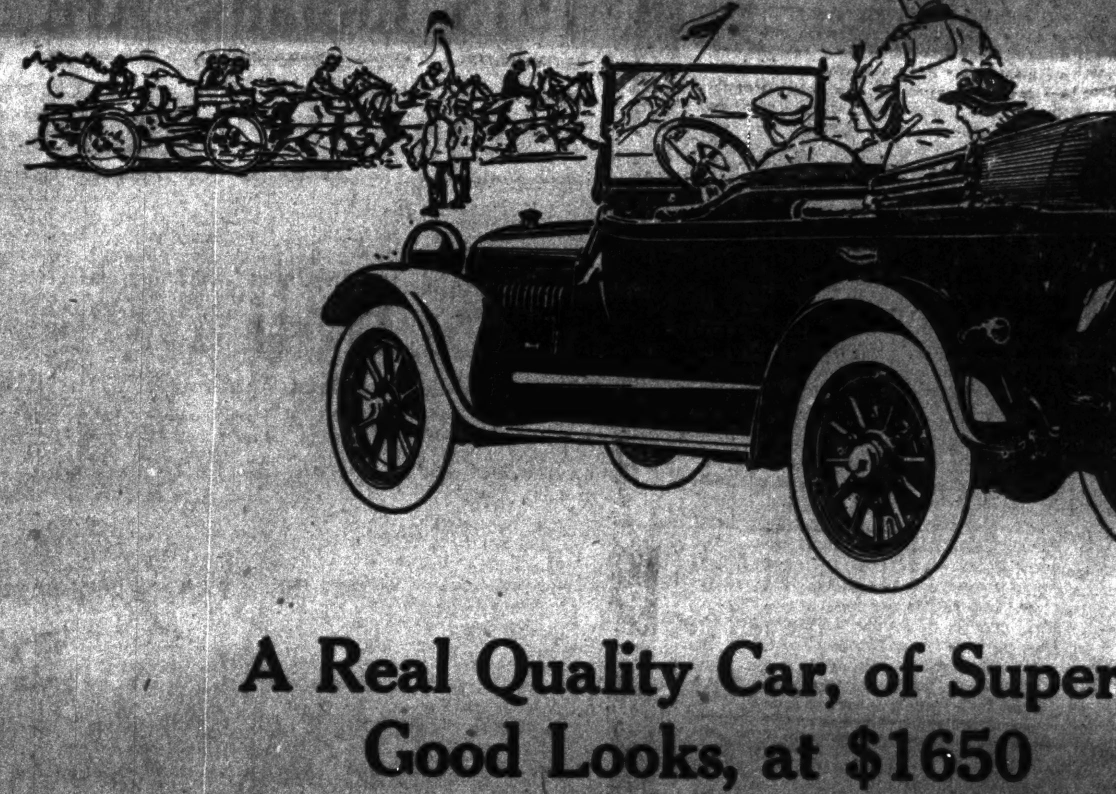
1915 Chalmers
"Light Six"
$1650



A Real Quality Car, of Superb Good Looks, at $1650

Stand on the main thoroughfare of any city. Watch the many makes of cars as they flash by. Most of them pass without notice from the people in the street.

Then comes some thoroughbred of motordom. People turn to look. You hear them say, "What car is that?" or "Isn't that car a beauty!"

You probably have paid that tribute to the motor car thoroughbreds yourself.

And if you happen to be the owner of such a car, you have felt a glow of pride—the just pride one feels in possessing a superior and distinctive thing.

A motor car advertises your judgment. If people don't admire it, you soon tire of even the highest priced car. But if people in the street stop to praise its grace and beauty; if your friends tell stories of its fine performances; if your wife's friends laud its comfort, then you are glad to say, "That is my car."

And such a car is the 1915 Chalmers "Light Six."

Here is a car that has striking smartness and beauty. Owners of other cars praise the sweep of its molded oval fenders. Passersby stop to enjoy the grace of its perfectly blended lines. Experts delight in its silent, vibrationless power—its rare "lightness of foot."

Over 4,000 "Light Sixes" have been proved in more than 3,000,000 miles of service. The Chalmers "Light Six" is the one 1915 car with an aggregate mileage great enough to prove beyond doubt that it has strength for every emergency, power to spare, and the easy riding qualities of cars costing much more. It is the one 1915 car that is selling more rapidly every day, even in these times when most people are thinking of other things besides automobiles.

We offer the 1915 "Light Six" at $1650 as we do all Chalmers cars—as a real quality car, comparable with cars of much greater cost. This "Light Six" is not sold on price alone; but on quality—unusual value at an extremely low price.

You can buy a car of this passenger capacity for less money. But the difference you pay to get a Chalmers "Light Six" will be returned to you in the added pleasure and satisfaction of owning a car of whose looks and performance you can always be proud.

If you pay less than Chalmers prices, you must be satisfied with less than Chalmers quality.

A few big features of the 1915 "Light Six": a different kind of automobile beauty; unusually handsome finish; Pullman-like comfort; 48 H.P. long stroke non-stallable motor which "stays put;" graceful molded oval fenders of both strength and beauty; 4 1-2 inch tires—"Nobby" tread on rear wheels; unusually complete equipment including Chalmers-made one-man top of silk mohair, quick-acting storm curtains, five demountable rims, one-motion Chalmers-Entz electric starter, which makes the motor non-stallable, Klaxon horn, electric lights, etc. And perhaps the greatest feature of all, the unusually high quality in a car at such a price.

You will better appreciate that fact after you have seen and ridden in the 1915 Chalmers cars. We will give you the Chalmers "Real Test" Ride at your own convenience. Arrange for it today.

Most Shoe Dealers are giving Scholl's Foot Comfort Service. This includes scientific shoe fitting and the adjustment of the proper Scholl corrective devices.

Remember, you can wear stylish, fashionable shoes of the same size or smaller, provided the shoes are scientifically fitted and that your feet are protected against strain by Scholl Corrective Appliances.

Weakening of the foot structure causes the feet to spread and lengthen; Scholl's devices prevent this and make it possible to wear smaller sizes. They also prevent corns, bunions and callouses.

Insist on getting Scholl's Foot Comfort Service from your dealer and protect yourself from pains, aches and discomforts. If your dealer does not give this service we shall be glad to tell you of a dealer in your neighborhood who does.

1,000 MEN AND WOMEN VANISH YEARLY IN CITY

Police Missing List Packed with Tragedy of Persons Who Disappeared.

INSANE PROWL STREETS

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

"When found notify his wife as above."

Last year—and every year—between 4,000 and 5,000 people disappear in Chicago, are lost track of by their relatives, and are reported to the police as missing. More than 1,000 of this number—so far as the police records show—vanish utterly and forever. At least repeated police calls at the homes of their inquiring relatives fail to discover that they have returned or have been located.

Officially, and no doubt in most cases actually, the missing thousands are gone forever from the knowledge of their families and friends. They are dead, perhaps, or swept away by the undertow of the city which carries its victims down into the underworld.

Why Some Ran Away.

Some of them have run away from domestic or business trouble and are starting life over again in a new place and under a new name. Others—and they are a growing menace to society—are insane or demented and are wandering about the streets and alleys of the city in their own irresponsible way, ready when the crazy impulse comes to break out into crimes of bloody violence.

Up on the tenth floor of the city hall, in the department of police records, a stack of huge drawers—each representing a year—holds the names and stories of those who are reported missing and who after long continued search the police have not been able to find. Almost every card of the many thousands stands for a bitter and terrible human tragedy.

The most frequent entry at the bottom of these cards is one which needs no explanation and which explains why so many women, most of them with small children, are left alone and in poverty to support themselves. It is: "When found notify his wife as above."

Common Causes of Flight.

Drunkenness, inability to get work, trouble at home, prolonged sickness are some of the more common reasons suggested for the secret departure of the absent husband. Often there is the added comment that he was "very despondent," "has violent temper," or "may commit suicide," and one ingenuous soul declares that the errant gentleman is "very good looking, with a large mole on his left shoulder blade."

Another missing man is described by the police department as "subjick to fits and has a ballot dancer tatoed on his right forearm." There are men who disappear from the most expensive downtown hotels, from the railroad stations between trains, and one or two who have vanished with as much as $7,000 in cash in their clothes.

But there are also plenty of instances in which wives have disappeared in the twinkling of an eye, leaving mourning families and husbands behind them. One such goes far toward explaining the probable cause of his wife's departure when, after describing the lady's clothing, he announces that she "may have two black eyes," depending, presumably, on how soon she is located.

Wife Never Reached Home.

Another wife leaves a note behind her announcing that she "is going home," though letters from her parents say she never arrived. And there is more than one to whom the only clew is the statement that she "rode off in an automobile with a dark haired stranger."

More startling and significant are the reports of the disappearance of scores of young girls between the ages of 14 and 20, most of them in their early teens. A majority of these vanished girls seem to be fatherless. As one reads the desciption of the clothing they wore when the veil of mystery shut down over them one wonders if in some cases that does not go far towards explaining things. One girl of 16, for instance, is said to have worn, in addition to her other clothing, a large white picture hat with black plumes, brown velvet slippers, and flesh colored stockings.

Nurse Drops from Sight.

One strange story is that of a trained nurse who started to answer the call of a physician to attend a case in a near-

Latest in Tangoland—They Dance in Loop Skyscraper

Gordon Strong, the man with original ideas, last night staged the first tango party to be held in a Chicago skyscraper. This was the second of Mr. Strong's plans to go into effect within a week, for on Thursday afternoon he was married to his stenographer, Miss Louisa Snyder. Previously Mr. Strong saw fit to adopt a number of children of good family whose parents were unable to give them all the advantages of education.

The dancing party proved a success. It was held on the second floor of Mr. Strong's Republic building, at State and Adams streets, and was attended by the shop keepers of the building, their employés, and their guests. Between dances the couples dropped into a tearoom opening off from the corridor, and a number of the dancers could not resist the temptation to purchase a pair of slippers for the occasion at a shoe shop across the hall.

Some of those who attended last night suggested that the skyscrapers offered the solution to the problem of where to hold the charity ball. Of late years it has been found impossible to obtain a hall in the downtown district which could accommodate all who would like to attend such an affair. With dancers on eighteen or twenty floors, however, it was explained, thousands could attend without crowding.

WIDOW CONVERTS HOVEL INTO HOME FOR HER CHILDREN

Two Room Cabin Made a Place of Beauty by Poor Mother of Four Little Ones.

A Good Fellow letter the other day brought an offer to share a home with an old couple in need. Investigation proved that this kindly offer came from a couple of old folks living comfortably but humbly and frugally on an income of about $50 a month in a small suburban cottage.

How about that Goodfellowship? Couldn't you do something?

A hovel made into a "home" in the face of all but overwhelming difficulties was discovered yesterday on a Good Fellow expedition into the poverty regions of South Chicago.

The successes of the Widow A. against the pressure of penury are an encouragement to the Good Fellow cause and an incentive to Good Fellow endeavor.

Two years ago John A., a foreign born laborer in the steel mills, died, leaving his widow with three children. There was not a cent left after the funeral. A couple of months later another child was born.

Before the advent of the fourth child the mother became a charge of the United Charities. The mother has since been maintained in a home for the sake of her children.

Mother Makes It a Home.

The rent for the two room cabin is $3.50 a month, paid almost always by the United Charities. Milk and grocery orders and occasional aid from the county agent have supplied the food.

A few cents' worth of flower seeds converted the rubbish laden yard into a garden, tended by the mother in the moments when the care of her children would permit.

Within, the cottage is spotlessly clean, with the pitifully few utensils and bits of furniture in the strictest order.

"These children are growing up here just as happy as though they were pampered in wealth," observed the charity worker in charge of the case. "This is an excellent example of the value of keeping the children with their mother, and the value of the home—which we hold is the best place to rear children."

Who will help save that home?

The family that is half fed and poorly clothed now will be the most likely to fall prey to the disease which come with bad weather.

Fairly Busses Into Action.

A militant Good Fellow dashed into the Good Fellow headquarters on the third floor of the Tribune building yesterday afternoon.

"I've been out of town," he said opening his conversation with rapid fire. "I see THE TRIBUNE is at it again. I've been one of the Christmas Good Fellows; took care of three families last year at Christmas, and I want in on this new stunt—looks good to me.

"Where can I start? I want to be on my way now—must get action right away."

There is one fellow who can always get a job. That fellow is Good Fellow.

Good Dinner Today? How About the Poor?

E.—Husband died two years ago, leaving widow with four children, a boy of 12, one of 8, a girl of 9, and one of 2. Mrs. E. is not strong, but does a few days' work each week. The oldest boy has tuberculosis and needs plenty of nourishing food. That he can have this the United Charities must put in at least a grocery order of $3 per week, besides milk and rent. The boy has the making of a fine young man.

S.—Woman has been left alone with three small children, a little girl of 7, one of 4, and a boy of 6 years. Her married life has been full of trouble because of the actions of S., who is serving a term in the penitentiary in one of the southern states. She does what she can to help take care of her little family, but the most this amounts to is about $7 a month. She is in very bad physical condition. Orders for groceries, milk, and fuel are necessary in this home every week.

WEST SIDE DISTRICT.

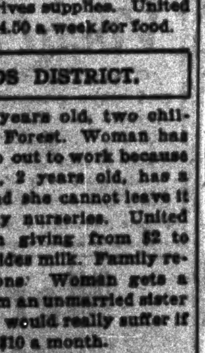
P.—Mr. P. is in the insane asylum; Mrs. P. is left to support herself and three children. She scrubs for the landlord to earn half of her rent; a church pays the other half. To supplement her earnings only two quarts of milk a day and $2.50 a week are needed.

Z.—Mrs. Z. and four children deserted by husband three years ago, just before the birth of a fifth child. One child, the only boy, died since. Mrs. Z. is able by washing to pay $12 per month rent. The county agent gives supplies. United Charities supplies $4.50 a week for food.

STOCKYARDS DISTRICT.

L.—Woman, 28 years old, two children. Man in Oak Forest. Woman has not been able to go out to work because her youngest child, 2 years old, has a tubercular wrist and she cannot leave it in any of the day nurseries. United Charities has been giving from $2 to $2.50 per week, besides milk. Family receives county rations. Woman gets a little assistance from an unmarried sister who works, but she would really suffer if we cut off our $8 to $10 a month.

NORTHWEST DISTRICT.



K.—Husband has an ossificaton of the spine, a progressive disease. Mrs. K. is crippled. There are six children. The oldest, a boy of 17, earns $6 a week. The parents are devoted to the children and the home is a model of cleanliness and neatness. The United Charities gives $30 per month. The rent is $11 and food $3 weekly. Milk is $5 per month and clothing and fuel extra.

W.—Husband has a diseased heart. The physician, who gives his services, says it will be six months before he can work. There are a wife and five children, the youngest being only 7 months old. Mother cannot work. United Charities puts in about $30 a month.

X.—Man deserted one year ago. Rent is in arrears four months. Invalid mother lives in the home. One boy 6 years old. Woman works at piecework, not making more than $7 a week. Had been laid off for six weeks. First landlord's notice has been served.

GoodFellow Cash Box

HERE are yesterday's cash contributions to the Good Fellow movement. In this effort to help the unfortunate poor of Chicago in this time of special stress money, goods, and personal service can be utilized. Every cent helps and every cent received is being expended directly for relief—nothing is deducted for the administrative services of the workers for the United Charities. They become the ministering agents of those who give to the Good Fellow fund.

FIVE FIGHTING TAILORS SUBDUED BY A PASSERBY.

Twenty Pound Goose Hits One, and Battle Is General Until Girl's Screams Bring Peacemaker.

War broke out among the Eastern Ladies' Tailors at 1460 East Fifty-third street yesterday. I. D. Behan of 5338 Cornell avenue, who happened to be passing the store, ended hostilities and then summoned the police, who arrested five tailors. They gave their names as:

Moses Rovinsky of 1126 South Richmond street.

Jacob Rovinsky, his son.

Harry Brizzo of 1460 East Fifty-third street.

Louis Brizzo, his brother.

Abraham Zoll of 1142 South Central Park avenue.

Moses Rovinsky told the police that he and Harry Brizzo formerly were partners in a tailoring establishment and that Brizzo owed him $300. Brizzo said Rovinsky came to collect a payment of the debt and hit him in the head with a twenty pound tailor's goose. He exhibited a long scalp wound as evidence. Then all five got into the battle and Miss Eva Gistien of 2912 West Twelfth street was knocked down. Her screams brought Behan, who separated the belligerents.

Miss Gistien also was arrested, but was released.

GOVERNMENT AIDS ELOPERS.

Lets Couple from Colorado Proceed to Pennsylvania Despite Police Suspicion.

An interrupted elopement of Fred Tesata and Miss Annie Ambrose, 17 years old, was resumed last evening with the consent of District Attorney Charles F. Clyne. They had run away from their home in Superior, Colo. When they arrived in Chicago the police at the Union station turned them over to Hinton G. Clabaugh, chief of the federal bureau of investigation, on suspicion that they were violating the Mann act. Their destination, they said, was Rahway, Pa.

EX-SUITOR SEEKS DEATH.

Swallows Poison Before Wife of Rival When She Resents His Attentions.

Mrs. Rose Levin of 513 South Cicero avenue was married three months ago. Charles Petis of 16 Sheldon street, a former suitor, went to her home yesterday in the absence of her husband.

"I still love you, Rose," he told her.

"Get out or I'll have you arrested," Mrs. Levin exclaimed.

Petis then drew a bottle and swallowed sugar of lead—a deadly poison in large quantities. He was taken to the county hospital. It is said he will live.

SUBURBS KEEP DRIVE CONTROL

Winnetka and Hubbard Woods, by One Vote, Bar Park Board Rule Over Sheridan Road.

COURT CONTEST LIKELY.

Lincoln Commissioner Asserts State Law Practically Forces Villages to Accept Plan.

That part of Sheridan road which runs through Winnetka and Hubbard Woods missed falling under the jurisdiction of the Lincoln park commission by one vote yesterday.

Of a total of 1,053 ballots, 40 per cent of which were women's, the two north shore communities cast 526 ballots for the park board's proposition and 527 against.

The opposition was led by Robert H. Wallace of Winnetka. It consisted chiefly of the nonmotoring element. Their arguments were that taxes would be increased, that persons who could not afford to keep automobiles would be forced to pay for the pleasure of those who could, and that the park board had given no satisfactory assurances of what it would do in the way of policing and lighting the road.

Motorists Also Against It.

The fact that Hubbard Woods, where almost every one and his neighbor is a motorist, went against the proposition was a surprise to Charles H. Thorne of Montgomery Ward & Co., leader of the forces in favor of granting the board's request. He learned subsequently that much of the feeling in Hubbard Woods was based on the fear that the park board would throw a bridge across the community's chief natural attraction—the ravine. Mr. Thorne said he did not favor a contest.

Bernard Jung, auditor of the Lincoln park board, said last night:

"The vote is a great disappointment to me, but the matter is not closed by any means. The legislature gave us power to take over Sheridan road in the north shore townships, subject to the approval of the towns.

"Wilmette, Kenilworth, and Glencoe already have signified their intention, through their boards, of coming in on the Greater Sheridan road. Sentiment in Evanston is in our favor and we expect the mayor and council to ratify the arrangement soon.

Rogers Park Works Alone.

"Rogers Park preferred to make the improvements itself. The work is nearly finished and Rogers Park's section of Sheridan road will be turned over to the park board, I understand, on completion.

"The village board of Winnetka was vested with power to act and the referendum vote was not necessary. Why it was called for I do not know. I understood there was some opposition, but was confident the proposition would carry with a comfortable majority.

"The Lincoln park board will meet Wednesday, consider the situation, and instruct its attorney, Francis O'Shaughnessy, how to proceed.

"Glencoe is north of Winnetka, but we will improve Glencoe's strip of road just the same, also light it and police it. Winnetka will have to wait for its improvement now until there has been a court decision on the park board's rights."

CALUMET CLUB TO CLOSE HISTORIC DOORS ON NOV. 1.

Old Time Institution Sets Date for Passing Traced to Upholding of Traditions.

The doors of the Calumet club—doors through which for four decades have passed the men most prominently identified with the social life of Chicago and whose names have been linked with the history of the city—will be closed on Nov. 1.

The closing will mark the passing of one of the most exclusive organizations in the city. A generation ago social climbers would have paid a fortune to be admitted to membership. Fathers handed down their memberships to their sons and they in turn passed them on.

And an unwillingness of the few members left to depart from the old traditions is responsible for the disbanding.

"There are only ninety-eight members left," said Lawrence Heyworth, president, last night, "and that is not enough to keep the old club going. Many of the members have moved away from Chicago. Rather than throw the club open to the public we decided to close it up."

The club was organized at a meeting of elderly business men on April 4, 1878, with 120 charter members. The name Calumet, the Indian word for peace pipe, was chosen as being synonymous with good will, kindly greeting, and the spirit of fraternity.

LANDIS SUED: WHAT FOR?

Judge Says He Doesn't Know Frank Blacklidge, Who Demands $25,000 in Mystery Case.

Suit for $25,000 damages against Judge Kenesaw M. Landis of the United States District court was filed in the Circuit court yesterday. Frank Blacklidge filed the suit in his own behalf, it was said. Only the præcipe was filed and no cause was given for the action.

Relatives of Mr. Blacklidge were found at 6217 Dorchester avenue. They said they had no idea of the whereabouts of the complainant and refused to discuss the nature of the suit.

When Judge Landis was told of the suit he said:

"I don't know Mr. Blacklidge. I never heard of him. I haven't the slightest idea what the suit is about."

Wanted for Leaving Wife.

Edward P. Osborne of [illegible] Melrose street, arrested on Thursday with Carl Krofhefer of 819 Belmont avenue, charged with burglary, is wanted in Buffalo on a charge of wife abandonment, according to Police Sergeant John Zimmerman of Buffalo.

CROOKS COLLECT FUND TO 'GET' TRIO OF SYSTEM'S FOES

Underworld Fights Back at City Investigators Who Trapped Police.

MERRIAM HEARS OF PLOT

Collection of a fund with which to get rid of three investigators for the crime commission has been begun, according to a report which reached Chairman Charles E. Merriam yesterday.

The story is that a subscription list for this purpose was started Friday night in Dennis P. Foley's saloon, at 3036 South State street. It is said $200 already has been collected among the habitués of the underworld who were exposed by the investigators.

Another report, from an independent source, was in line with the story of the collection.

Seek to Save Detectives.

The "dips" are telling each other it will not be possible to prosecute certain detectives if the investigators are out of the way, and "the investigators will not be able to appear."

Ald. Merriam notified Chief Gleason of the reports and suggested action be taken to protect the investigators.

"I am informed," he said, "that force is contemplated to get the men out of the way. It hardly seems probable efforts to bribe the investigators would be made."

From Two Different Sources.

The information was given to Mr. Merriam by James McKeag, attorney for the commission, who received it from investigators.

"These stories come from two different sources, and they are apparently authentic," Mr. McKeag said. "I am told Foley headed the subscription list. We sent two officers down to Foley's hotel today to get the suitcases left by the investigators, and they were followed on the way back by two men, one of whom was a negro."

The investigators are Ben Kendall, a reporter for THE TRIBUNE, who was loaned to the commission; John P. Mortimer, and Paul R. Classen. Kendall testified before the commission that Foley introduced them in their supposed capacity as "dips" to Detective Harry E. Power. Kendall also told of giving Power $25 and Detective Michael J. Mulvey about $15 for protection.

Gleason Asks for Transcript.

Chief Gleason yesterday requested the crime commission for a transcript of the evidence with a view to filing charges before the civil service commission.

"If the stenographic record bears out the newspaper reports, I shall certainly file charges," the chief said. "Such men should not be at large as members of the police force, if the allegations are correct. The truth should be determined by the trial board."

Hoyne and Gleason Clash.

Friction between Chief Gleason and State's Attorney Hoyne resulted in the issuance of belligerent statements by both officials. The chief's complaint was that the state's attorney was interfering with the work of the police department, especially in the Rialto shooting.

"I do not believe it is the duty of the state's attorney's office to do police work," the chief said. "This should be my duty. Last winter a number of criminals were arrested and are still in the county jail. Why are not their cases disposed of?

"Many people are playing politics, but the police department is not. If we have a few crooked policemen in our department I want to get rid of them, but this does not mean the entire force should be branded and criticised."

Calls Bureau "Rotten."

That the detective bureau is "rotten" was the declaration made by State's Attorney Hoyne.

"I only desire to repeat what I told Chief Gleason to his face," said Mr. Hoyne. "I don't propose to let him or any other police officer or patrolman interfere with my office.

"I think I then added I have the utmost confidence in the rank and file of the department and believe the majority of the uniformed officers is honorably and anxiously trying to do efficient police duty, but that his detective bureau is rotten.

"Furthermore, I told him there is a disposition in the police department to criticise and discriminate against policemen that I had selected for assignment to my office.

"The chief claims to be able to do efficient police work without my interference. I have proved the contrary."

Experience in Seer Cases.

Mr. Hoyne then mentioned the clairvoyant cases:

"I would remind Chief Gleason that as soon as James Ryan was located in Wyoming, Capt. Halpin insisted that Detectives O'Brien and Carmody be sent west for the prisoner. This was a joke. I sent my own officers and subsequently filed charges against the detectives and they were discharged.

"There has been a disposition on the part of the police force to learn what is going on in this office. I told Chief Gleason that when any officer is in my office he is under my instructions and doesn't have to take any orders from him. I need to add, I mean everything I say."

Mayor Harrison during the day revoked the saloon license of Peter Messinger at 1000 West Van Buren street. The police reported drinks were served in the place at 2 o'clock in the morning. Two men with criminal records were found in the saloon. They threatened the detectives. Messinger's license was revoked at 11 South Morgan street on May 15.

GIRL SAW STRANGER.

Shop Employe Substantiates Story in Her Version of the Bertsche Shooting, Which She Witnessed.

State's Attorney Hoyne's investigation into the Rialto shooting in which "Barney" Bertsche, Detectives Egan and Monaghan, Nathan Spira, and two bystanders were shot, has simmered down to a search for the mysterious stranger who was seen talking with Bertsche an instant before the first shot was fired.

The presence of this man was made known to Capt. Halpin by Maj. John V. Clinnin. Yesterday Maj. Clinnin was taken before Edward J. Fleming, private secretary to the state's attorney, who has established headquarters for the inquiry in a loop hotel, to repeat his story.

Girl Will Tell Story.

Miss Frances Letters, employed in a downtown haberdashery shop, was another witness. She was returning from lunch, as recited in THE TRIBUNE. She said she saw Bertsche and the mysterious stranger standing in a doorway when Detective Egan brushed her out of the way while he said: "Step aside, little girl, there may be trouble here."

Mr. Hoyne regards Maj. Clinnin's story as proof for his theory of the imported gunman hired to "get" Bertsche. Miss Letters' story is regarded by Mr. Hoyne as indicating that the shooting was "premeditated."

Kelly Still Held.

Another interesting feature to Mr. Hoyne is the fact that Policeman Charles M. Kelly, still in custody for questioning, and Lieut. John H. Tobin of Capt. Halpin's staff, were both "across the street purchasing tickets in a theater when the shooting began."

Fleming is handling the investigation at the personal direction of Mr. Hoyne. A big detail of detectives are kept busy bringing in witnesses. All Fleming would say was: "Witness after witness tells us that a fourth man stood in the doorway with Bretsche, Egan, and Monaghan. This man was not Spira."

William C. Dunn, attorney for the Citizens' league, in the Ashland block, is to be summoned before Fleming tomorrow. Mr. Dunn's story also touches along the line of the "mysterious stranger." He specifically denies that Nathan Spira, who was badly wounded, participated in the shooting. Both Egan and Monaghan assert that Spira shot Monaghan. Mr. Dunn also says that Egan did fire.

Says Spira Did Not Fire.

"I witnessed everything that took place after the second shot was fired," said Mr. Dunn. "I saw Egan and Monaghan firing low at Bertsche. No sooner had I shielded myself behind a post than Spira went down. After the detectives fired about three shots apiece Egan rushed in on Bertsche and the two went down together. Monaghan then ran into the street and began popping at Bertsche's head, which was exposed above Egan's body.

"But Bertsche saw Monaghan in time and fired at him. Monaghan turned and fled. That's how he got shot in the back. It was Bertsche's bullet that did it and not Spira's. Spira didn't have a revolver in use. Spira fell to the sidewalk from his own injury, and did nothing else but try to seek cover."

Mr. Hoyne's detectives seized the clothing of Bertsche at St. Luke's hospital. Bertsche was shot under the right arm pit, but there is no hole in his coat, clearly indicating that Egan shot him while the two were on the sidewalk. The police still insist that Egan was unarmed.

DUNNE TO PUSH WATERWAY PLAN; OPEN WORK SOON

Governor Tells Business Men Chicago-to-Gulf Project Awaits Congress.

JOBS FOR UNEMPLOYED

Unreserved enthusiasm for the proposed eight foot waterway from Chicago to the Mississippi river which was evinced at a conference called by the Association of Commerce at the Union League club yesterday, was followed by the announcement of Gov. Dunne that he would endeavor to push the project to a speedy completion.

The project, which was submitted to the governor by a special commission last week, was indorsed by Col. W. V. Judson, government engineer of the Chicago district, who said little difficulty would be met in obtaining permission from congress to use an existing appropriation of $1,000,000 for the work.

Gov. Dunne appointed the men present, members of the rivers and lakes commission, the Illinois and Michigan canal commissioners, engineers and citizens interested in the lakes-to-the-gulf waterways, as delegates to the meeting of the National Rivers and Harbors congress, to be held in Washington in December. He asked them to seek the indorsement of the rivers and harbors body and the national congress to the plan to use the federal appropriation for the work.

In the meantime, the governor will lay plans before the state legislature when it convenes, which will guarantee to the federal government the assistance of the state authorities. The tentative plans provide for the construction of a part of the channel by the state.

Report Outlines Needs.

The report of the waterways commission which was considered by the conference favors briefly:

Deepening of the Illinois from La Salle to Starved Rock.

Construction of a dam and lock at Starved Rock.

Construction of a connecting channel between the Illinois river and the Illinois and Michigan canal, just below Marseilles.

Construction of a crib dam below Marseilles and the construction of connecting channels between the canal and the river above Marseilles and just below Dresden.

Widening of the canal and the deepening of its bed to eight feet, and the utilizing of the river for a distance of forty-five out of a total length of sixty-five miles.

Construction of a new lock at the sanitary district power house at Lockport.

The report was signed by Lyman E. Cooley, consulting engineer of the sanitary district; E. J. Kelley, assistant chief engineer of the district; Walter A. Shaw, engineering member of the state public utilities commission, and Le Roy K. Sherman, member of the rivers and lakes commission.

Dunne Tells Plan.

"We are all intensely interested in making practicable and utilizing for commerce the natural cut across the state which was first discovered by Father Marquette," Gov. Dunne said. "Years ago this became apparent to the congress of the United States and the people of Illinois, and congress deeded to the state land for the construction of a canal. This canal was well constructed by the engineers of the day, but we have now discovered the canal has become obsolete and inadequate as a waterway.

"Isn't this talk of a fourteen or twenty-four foot waterway impracticable when commerce is waiting on the banks of the present channel? The federal engineers have reported that a depth of nine feet is all that ought to be considered. Cannot a plan be devised to obtain a channel from Chicago to St. Louis and Davenport, if such a plan does not conflict with plans for a deep waterway which might be proposed later? Heretofore all the argument has been about the depth, and for twenty years the engineers have not agreed. Finally they have reached an agreement and we are about to settle the problem.

"I want the earnest coöperation of the citizens of this state."

Hits "Pork Barrel" Bills.

After discussion by those present, the governor said:

"The consensus of opinion displayed here makes it overwhelmingly apparent we have at last agreed on a feasible project. As I am at present advised, the time has arrived when this project should be pushed to its speedy completion. How can we find a better time to begin the construction of this project than this, when so many of our citizens are unemployed? I do not believe that our appeal will be turned down by congress.

"I do not believe that the policy of future congresses will be to pass so many crazy, impossible schemes as those proposed in the 'pork barrel' bills. But our federal appropriation is already at hand, and if congress is shown that the idea of the state is in accordance with that of the government engineer, there ought be little question that two more years will see the realization of this project."

HALTS CRUELTY TO FOWLS.

Market Mistress Warns Peddlers Against Plucking Feathers from Birds Still Alive.

Miss Kathryn [illegible], market mistress at the municipal market, Maxwell street and South Union avenue, issued an order yesterday to all dealers and peddlers who sell fowls in the market that any cruelty displayed by them toward live fowls in their possession would be sufficient cause for barring them from the right to sell in the market. The action followed an inspection trip of the market mistress in which she saw peddlers pulling the feathers from live fowls.

CHURCH FAVORS UNION WORKERS

Conference Directs Methodist Book Concern to Give Preference.

SETTLES LONG DISPUTE.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Union labor gained a point of advantage yesterday in the Rock river conference.

On a report of the committee on the Methodist Book Concern, read by the Rev. Benjamin Rist of Sycamore, and supported in addresses by the Rev. J. A. Beebe, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Englewood, and the Rev. Harry F. Ward, secretary of social service, the book concern was requested to adopt the preferential system of hiring employés.

"The preferential system," the report said, "directs that whenever there are two applicants for employment of equal efficiency and character, preference shall be given to the man representing union labor, prior claim to be considered in hiring one who is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church."

Pay Union Wages.

Reference having been made that the book concern pays the union scale of wages and observes the eight hour union day, the Rev. J. A. Beebe said:

"Who is it that won the union scale of wages and the eight hour?

"Shall the men, then, who have sacrificed and paid the expenses of the battle that has won these reforms be passed by and preference given to the men who have simply come into possession of these benefits without effort?"

"I have been standing as a buffer between organized labor and the Methodist publishing house for a long time," Dr. Ward said.

Meets Union Demand.

"A proposition has been made by labor organizations to make a campaign against the book concern as being on the unfair list and I have done all I could to prevent it from being carried out. I have the statements of intelligent and progressive labor leaders of the Typographical union that they will take the book concern from the unfair list if we will take this stand in favor of a preferential policy with reference to union labor. I do not advocate this simply to gain their favor, but because I think it is a just and righteous policy."

The resolutions were adopted with less than half a dozen votes in the negative.

President Wilson and the cabinet will be asked by the conference to devise some plan for the presentation of a bill to congress which will be the means of getting the war tax from other sources than the "liquor interests." The Rev. Fletcher Homan made an address, in which he advocated the passage of the resolution.

Action on Ministers.

Important action in the case of several ministers was taken on the recommendation of the committee on conference relations. Those who were placed on the retired list are: The Rev. N. P. Tedrick, the Rev. G. G. McKinley, the Rev. W. B. Leach, the Rev. G. A. Erving, the Rev. O. F. Mattison, the Rev. M. C. Hartsell, and the Rev. George A. Sharpe.

A. H. Gibson was referred to the district superintendents with the request that his case be investigated. The Rev. A. O. Stixrud, who, it was announced, had complained against Gibson, denied that he was in any way involved in the Gibson case.

"I appeared before the committee on conference relations," he said, "but it was in reference to another case."

The Rev. C. A. Kelley and the Rev. T. K. Gale were among those whose complaints forced the action against Gibson. R. T. Cookingham was refused a restoration of his ministerial ordination papers.

The Rev. F. H. Schafer, the Rev. S. L. Bryant, and the Rev. W. O. Bellamy were located. The Rev. I. R. Aldrich, pastor of Vincent church, was placed on the supernumerary list.

Bishop McDowell will preach today at 10:30 a. m. and at 3 o'clock will ordain elders and deacons. The Rev. T. P. Frost of Evanston will preach at 7:30 o'clock. Many visiting ministers will preach in Chicago pulpits.

His father, John G. Gindele, was president of the board of public works of the Illinois and Michigan canal board and was county clerk of Cook county in 1852. Mr. Gindele was born in Bavaria on June 11, 1844, and came to Chicago in 1852. He was educated first in the public schools and afterwards attended the old Chicago university. He became associated with his father in the contracting firm of J. G. Gindele & Sons and later of the firm of Angus & Gindele, building contractors.

1,000 "MISSING" IN CITY YEARLY

by suburb and who never reached her destination and who has not since been located. Another apparently unsuccessful hunt was started for a girl named Delia Cahill, supposed to be working somewhere in the city as a domestic, and who has been left a considerable fortune by the death of a relative in Ireland. By way of comic relief there is the record of a young woman who jumped out of the window of a fashionable downtown hotel—presumably to avoid paying her bill—and who has never since been located.

But the most startling of all are the scores of cards which record the disappearance in Chicago of insane and demented men and women. In a surprising number of cases the statement is made that they have "escaped from the state insane asylum at Dunning," and in more than one instance the police add the comment that the escaped patient is "vicious and dangerous."

Simply Wander Off.

In the great majority of cases "insane" or "slightly demented" people have simply wandered off from their own homes. So far as the police records are accurate it appears that nearly 200 more or less irresponsible people vanished in Chicago in 1912 and have not yet come back into the control or knowledge of their relatives or other guardians.

If an explanation of the increase in crimes of violence is needed that fact should be considered. If each year a hundred or two insane or demented people are added to the nomad population of the city, wandering about without homes or responsible relatives, an increase in all manner of violent crimes might be expected.

Here is a copy of the police report for the last year:

	Male.	Female.	Total.
Reported missing	3,321	929	4,250
Located and returned	2,523	718	3,241
Still missing at end of year	798	211	1,009

To deserve the title of the city of a thousand missing men is a reflection either on the conditions of life in Chicago or on the accuracy of the police records.

FAVORS COTTON LOAN FUND.

Federal Reserve Board Approves Raising of $15,000,000 to Care for Surplus Crop.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10.—The federal reserve board tonight announced its approval, in principle, of the plan for a $150,000,000 loan fund to take care of the surplus cotton crop. Gov. Hamlin of the board in a letter to Festus J. Wade of St. Louis, one of the plan's backers, said that while the board could not express itself upon details, it was of the opinion that the just administration of such a fund would benefit those interested and the rest of the nation as well. He expressed the hope that the banks and merchants would subscribe.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM P. KETCHAM, 70 years old, one of the directors of the World's Columbian exposition, and a well known Chicago lumberman, died yesterday after a short illness at his home in Pasadena, Cal. From 1885 until about two years ago he was engaged in the lumber business in Chicago, was a member of various clubs and other organizations. He is survived by his widow, a daughter, and a brother.

JOHN MOSSER, president and founder of the First State and Savings bank of Abingdon, Ill., died yesterday, aged 82 years. He served several terms as mayor and shortly before his death gave Abingdon a public library building which now is being erected at a cost of $15,000. He had been a resident of Abingdon for fifty-four years.

HAWTHORNE FAIR TO GO ON

Five Races Scheduled for Tomorrow Despite Setback.

ALL PURSES ARE PAID.

Betting on Events Prohibited, Management Announces.

Bad weather interfered with the attendance at the second day of the first annual show of the Chicago Fair association at Hawthorne race track yesterday, but the management held every scheduled event. The fair will continue tomorrow, when a big attendance is expected.

At a meeting of horse owners, held at the grounds in the afternoon, it was decided that five running races will be tomorrow's attraction. Seventy-five per cent of the receipts will be divided among the winners. Another feature will be a motorcycle race of 100 miles, in which several leading riders, among them Joe Walters, Curley Frederichs, Bob Perry, Joe George Lockner, and Erwin Baeker will compete.

No Open Gambling on Grounds.

There was no open gambling on the grounds yesterday. Sheriff Zimmer sent eight more deputies to the track and if any one did betting it was under cover. There also was no report of operations of pickpockets or confidence men. The management intends to keep all lawless characters from the races tomorrow, and announced it never was the intention to countenance gambling.

Thomas Carey and his associates paid out over $2,000 in purses for the races already held. The visitors at the track yesterday expressed themselves as well pleased with the events, in which Ben Chapman's Stick Pin won the feature of the day.

All free tickets issued before tomorrow, except those to exhibitors, concessionaires, officials, and horse owners and their employés, will be void. The object of this is to keep undesirable persons into whose hands free tickets are said to have fallen from the grounds.

Child Wins Bantam Prize.

Among the most enthusiastic exhibitors was little Dorothy Pickard, who won a prize with her black bantams which she exhibited. Dorothy wrote the following composition about her pets, which she was only too glad to take out of their coop to show to strangers:

"This last summer I put Dany and his housekeeper, Topsy, into a little basket and off we started for Lake Cora, Mich. We reached there and Dany and Topsy were put out of the basket to run. Dany's mate, Toby, was in the city hatching her eggs. Four strong chicks hatched. Then Toby and her chicks were taken to Lake Cora. Just a little before Toby came Topsy mysteriously disappeared. Then just about at the end of the summer Toby disappeared. Then came Dany's part. He mothered those babies. I think he mothered them as well as Tobey. Here they are. So you can see what nice, strong pullets he brought them up to be."

Today!—Grand Opening Sale of Beautiful

Lake Glen Ellyn

The Villa Tract of Ten Thousand Trees and 151 Large Restricted Home-Sites

THIS charming property is today placed on the market for the first time. Our last Sunday's advance announcement of the formation of a syndicate limited to 151 refined families aroused the most wide spread interest. Hundreds and hundreds have expressed their hearty approval of the splendid protective features of our plan; scores have been out to see the property this past week. ¶ However, this is the first opportunity any have had to buy. Now all will be able to share in the mutual benefits of the syndicate—up to the limit of its membership. Only 151 joiners can secure their Lake Glen Ellyn homesites—with assured twenty-year protection against overcrowding, shoddy adjoining homes and undesirable neighbors, through its strictly enforced, though not burdensome, restrictions.

¶ From an economic standpoint this novel syndicate plan possesses distinct and unusual advantages. Promotion expenses are reduced to the minimum, the middleman is eliminated, combined purchasing power comes into play. As a result selling prices are one-third to one-half less than would be necessary were Lake Glen Ellyn marketed in the usual manner.

* * * * *

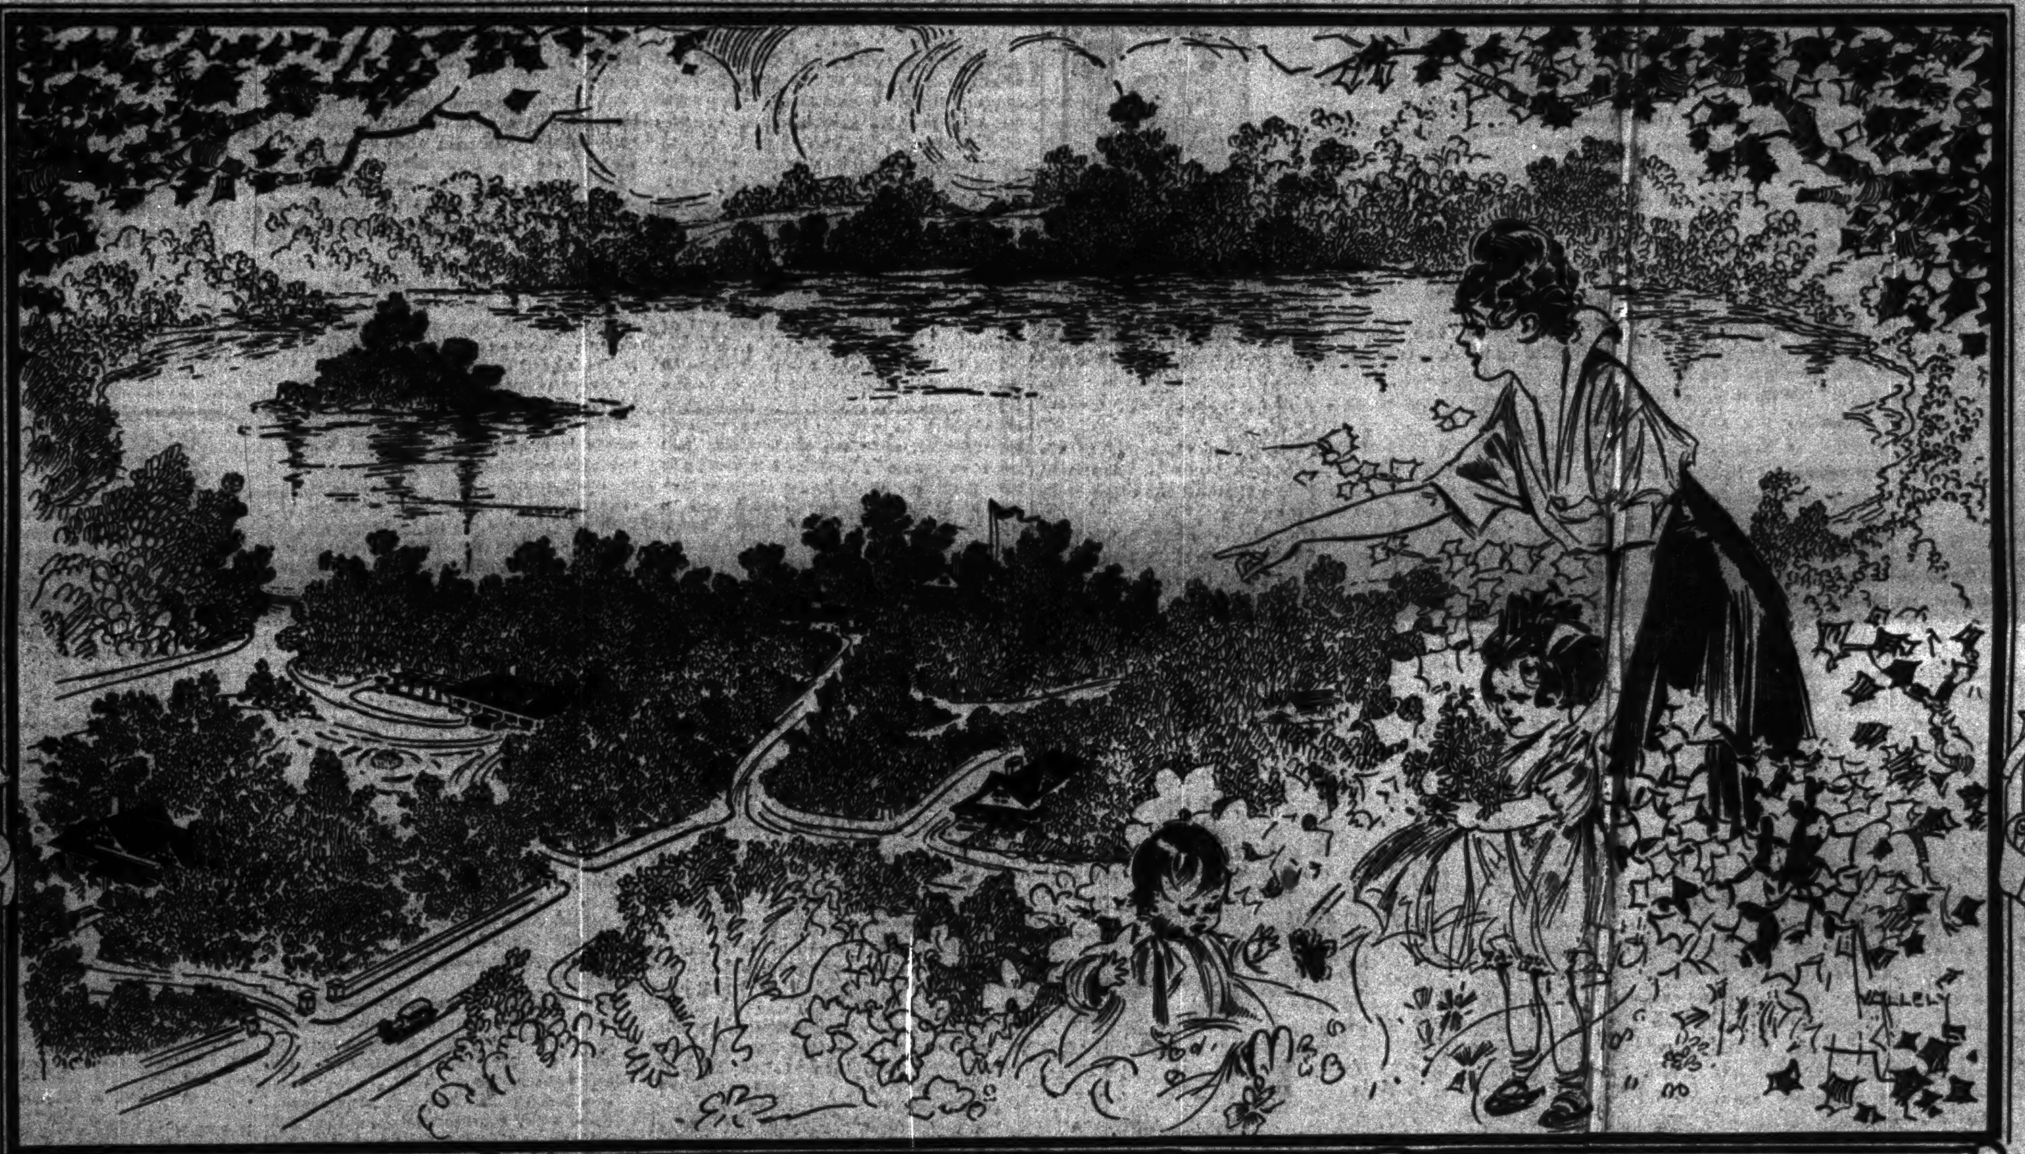
¶ Not within hundreds of miles of Chicago is there a more magnificent place to live than Lake Glen Ellyn. Yet our property is only 37 minutes away—23 miles directly west—within the corporate limits of the village of Glen Ellyn, and easy of access by interurban and train. Set down here, in the very lap of civilization, is this romantic garden spot, with its clear blue lake, it gorgeous wooded hillsides, its enchanting environments. The accompanying drawing, sketched on the scene by Mr. Vallely, gives some idea of the beauty of the lake and the fifty-odd magnificent homesites which surround it on the north and south and which are included in today's offering. To fully appreciate these picturesque lakeside parcels, however, you must see the property; and we venture the opinion that as you stand on the ridge that surrounds the lake and peer through the multi-colored foliage of thick forestry out over the water's blue, you will say, as so many others have said, "What an ideal homesite."

* * * *

¶ It is not our aim to establish a rich and aristocratic colony at Lake Glen Ellyn—although numbers of fashionable and very well-to-do families will surround you on every hand. Our appeal is to people of culture who want a home where they may really live, where they may breathe pure air, where they may enjoy the beauties of nature, and where their children may be reared amidst wholesome and healthful surroundings. In short, people of good breeding who seek the fellowship of their kind. To such, the invitation to cast their lot in Lake Glen Ellyn is extended—regardless of their financial rating.

Wholesale Prices Because of Co-Operative Syndicate Plan!

The combined purchasing power of 151 members, the elimination of the middleman, the lessened cost of selling bring prices of all these splendid home-sites to the very lowest notch. Any other plan of marketing would force us to practically double our prices. Triple them, however, and you could not buy finer, more desirable residential property.



This Glorious Year-Round Paradise Is ONLY 37 MINUTES from the Loop. Our Property Surrounds this Lake

¶ While the restrictions will be strictly enforced, they impose no burden on the purchaser, even though he be a man of moderate means. They are introduced solely for the protection of each and every buyer.

* * * * *

¶ Transportation to and from the city is excellent, the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad maintaining 31 trains daily, with 19 on Sunday. The commutation rate is twenty-five cents a day.

¶ The Aurora-Elgin "Third Rail" operates trains under a daily schedule of every 30 minutes; Sundays every 15 minutes. Their commutation charges are slightly lower.

¶ The principal Chicago stores make daily deliveries to Glen Ellyn.

* * * * *

¶ Our novel syndicate plan makes our average frontage price for these desirable residence sites in Lake Glen Ellyn less then Ten Dollars per front foot. Think, for example, of buying an 87½x170 foot lot at $399! Or one this same generous size with cement sidewalk and sewer and water connections at $800! Twenty-five of the hundred and fifty-one home sites are included at the above figures.

* * * * *

¶ And the wonderful lakeside parcels, heavier wooded even than the others, and three to four hundred feet in depth, are offered at proportionately moderate prices; the highest-priced parcel in the entire tract being but $50 per front foot.

¶ Remember that one hundred and fifty-one is the postive limit of our membership. There are but 151 individual parcels here to sell.

¶ Lake Glen Ellyn is located within the corporate limits of the village of Glen Ellyn but entirely hid away from every semblance of city life. The town itself provides the necessary quota of banks, stores, churches, schools, etc. Hence we have restricted our entire tract to residences.

¶ These restrictions also bind each purchaser not to erect more than one residence to each 100 front feet of property. No home shall be built on the land immediately surrounding the lake at a less cost than $5,000, while in other sections the minimums are $1,500, $2,000 and $3,000. Every house must set back a certain number of feet from the street line; all these restrictions will be operative for 20 years. Thus, there can be no overcrowding in beautiful Lake Glen Ellyn—no unsightly stores, flats or shacks—no undesirable neighbors.

¶ On the other hand, the owners of these 151 homesites in Lake Glen Ellyn are left free to carry out the improvement of the tract according to their individual and joint desires.

¶ If you are interested in our proposition, we must urge quick action. You should lose no time in visiting and inspecting this fine residence property. We anticipate that all the most desirable lake side parcels will be snapped up today. For the beauty of Lake Glen Ellyn captivates all beholders. And the present prices, as we say, are ridiculously low.

* * * * *

¶ The sale of this fine property begins today. If it is a pretty day there will be hundreds out. This will probably be your only opportunity to secure one of the lake-side parcels, for we will place on sale the most desirable home-sites first. Hundreds have this week expressed their desire to purchase in Lake Glen Ellyn, while there are but 151 parcels to be sold.

¶ No actual sales have so far been accepted—this being understood and advertised as the opening day of sale. If you act today you have an equal chance with all the others. It is important that you act without delay.

Prices $5 to $50 per front foot—Exceptionally Easy Terms!

¶ Prices on the majority of the 151 homesites range from $5 to $7.50 and $10 per front foot. All of the lakeside property, except several extra fine parcels of double depth, with frontage on the boulevard and lakeside, is offered at approximately $15 per front foot. The smallest lot in the entire tract is 87½x170 feet (or its equivalent), while the largest is a full-sized city block in extent.

¶ An inspection of the property will convince you that our prices are very, very reasonable. ¶ The terms are particularly easy. ¶ You may pay one-tenth of the purchase price in cash and the balance in 36 equal monthly payments. ¶ Or, if desired, we will issue you a deed and take your 17-months' note and mortgage on the property for the balance, after your nineteenth regular monthly payment has been made. ¶ Lake Glen Ellyn homesites are surely within reach of all refined people of moderate means.

THE DRIFT TO BUREAUCRACY.

The excesses of predatory individualism have preoccupied the American public for nearly a generation. During this period the struggle has been to devise and to apply checks upon individual activities which have threatened the common welfare. Up to this time, however, we have sought public control only for quasi-public corporations, for those utilities which are natural monopolies or of such basic and universal necessity as to justify control in the general interest by some sovereign authority.

This is a departure from our earlier conceptions of the rôle of government, but it has been a departure on principle and compatible with a real respect for individual freedom. Monopoly itself is incompatible with individual freedom, and when it exists properly or inevitably it is no breach of individualism to insist that its power should submit to the only superior authority, that of the people represented by government.

Are we now about to cross the line thus far laid down and to establish government supervision over activities neither public, nor quasi-public, nor monopolistic? Are we going to turn now to the state to administer all private relations in business and minutely prescribe tactics between man and man?

To what extent are we willing to have government oversee our private relations and control our private activities? To what extent have we given up our ancient distrust of the state, our ancient jealousy of invasions of private life and liberty, our ancient regard for individual initiative and self-help?

It is not to be denied that the enormous growth of wealth and of credit, the rise of the private corporation and development of its capacities, the regimentation of labor, and the concentrated control of financial power have created conditions which call for drastic changes in law and the retesting or reapplication of principles. But today throughout the country we find that the zeal for correcting abuses often is heedlessly ignoring principles we have held essential to Americanism and that we are turning more and more to the state. Because in some cases this was necessary and profitable we are rushing with true American excessiveness to the conclusion that if anything is wrong we have only to turn to government to set it right.

This tendency has been shown strikingly in the composition of the administration anti-trust bills, and still more in the discussion they aroused in and out of congress, and it shows in many other measures proposed in congress and in state legislatures.

Perhaps there is nothing more to be desired by the republic at this moment than a sharp awakening to the value of our American individualistic principles. We may then prefer to go on with the multiplication of agencies of public control. We may feel that the conditions of modern life necessitate the indefinite growth and extension of government regulation of the individual. We may decide that we cannot be well governed without elaborate government, and we may decide that we would rather be well governed than free. We may determine that the wastes of the free, competitive, individualistic scheme of human relations are not to be preferred to the effects of bureaucracy.

But let us make these vital decisions with our eyes open. Let us not drift in ignorance or neglect of the past and what our fathers thought it taught them, and without earnest thought of where our drifting will carry us.

An enlightened English publicist, Mr. Henry W. Nevinson, in his significant little book "The History of Freedom," says:

"It is perhaps the official rather than the crown, the aristocracy, or even the plutocrat who now most endangers liberty. Bureaucratic interference with personal life, long the plague of most European capitals from Lisbon to St. Petersburg, threatens to infest the world. We are called upon to accept 'the expert' as our controlling guide and 'efficiency' as the final test of government. Many of the perils of monarchy or any other government from above lurk in such advice. Bees and ants are efficient, but their progress appears to have stopped—stopped dead, as we say; or, if you want expert government, watch the law and order of sheep before a dog. Officials usually govern badly because they naturally magnify their office and routine above life, regarding the intrusion of reality as an unwarrantable disturbance to their habitual toil or leisure. But that is not the worst of it. Even under the most efficient officialdom the governed suffer a degrading loss of personality. It is disastrous to maintain order, however mechanically perfect, or to organize virtue and comfort, however judiciously proportionate, if personality and variety are gone. 'Self-government is better than good government,' and self-government implies the right to go wrong. It is nobler for a nation, as for a man, to struggle toward excellence with its own natural force and vitality, however blindly and vainly, than to live in irreproachable decency under expert guidance from without. Better free than sober, said Bishop Magee of this country, and we may well imagine that it will be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of trial than for a blameless city, cautiously regulated to virtue by the best mechanical appliances of the clerks of boards and the heads of government departments."

ANTWERP AND AFTER.

The fall of Antwerp adds another sanguinary act to that tragic drama whose denouement waits behind the impenetrable curtain of the future. In all that drama the most heroic figure is little Belgium, little in physical power, great in high hearted courage and patriotic sacrifice; little in physical power and yet history may record how that little turned the scale of battle and gave victory to the allied arms. Indeed we know now that Liege saved Paris; that the stubborn resistance of the small Belgian army, which will go down in history as one of the most heroic feats in the records of war, parried the deadly lunge that German warcraft had leveled at the French capital.

And now Belgium has lost all the great citadels the genius of her great military engineer, Brialmont, had designed for such an extremity as this. She has paid in blood and sorrow, but not a drop in shame. Whatever her fortune may be from now on she has this to sustain her.

As to the military consequences of the capture of Antwerp, it is foolish to prophesy. The talk of Antwerp as a base against England is exaggerated. Napoleon is quoted as calling Antwerp a pistol at the head of England. But it was a pistol that he could not discharge. Germany had a base for operations against England, but she will not be able to use it until the British fleet is beaten. Zeppelin raids will count for little except to rouse British war feeling still more and increase the rate of enlistment.

The main strategic motives for the determined attack upon Antwerp were based upon the fact that it was a danger to the German communications and the fact that its existence on the flank or rear of the German advance necessitated withholding a large force from the main battle line.

What will be the result of the release of the large body of troops and heavy guns assigned to the taking of Antwerp? The Belgian defending force was not captured and will join the allies. What will be the effect of the reinforcement of Von Kluck's army? Will it be as serious to the army of the allies as the reinforcement of the Japanese at Mukden by Nogi after the fall of Port Arthur and the release of Nogi's army from that task? A few days must tell decisively.

AMERICAN ARTISTS.

One of the sins of American industry in the past has been its failure to develop or even to encourage the industrial artist at home. It was taken for granted by the silk mills of the country, for instance, that they must go abroad for their designs. The same is true of the carpet and tapestry industry, of stained glass, and even of wall paper, to mention but a few. While American brawn was used in the manufacture of these articles, the designing of the same was always done by "foreign talent."

It is not to be denied that in many of the arts intimately connected with industry the Europeans are superior to us. It is in the nature of the German, for example, and especially in his education, to give more attention to detail than an American gives it. All of these characteristics, however, can be acquired. The fact that Americans have been slow to acquire them often is a reflection on the course and policy of our industries fully as much as on the character of our men and women artists. Our industries too frequently refuse to give the American designer a hearing. He is turned away on the assumption that the finer points of industry will never be mastered by the homespun designer or decorator.

An organization known as the "Art Alliance of America," recently organized in New York, is undertaking to change the old order. It is going to encourage the home artist. It will preach among manufacturers the gospel of "American talent to supply American requirements." It will not urge manufacturers to accept inferior designs merely because they are American made. It will rather encourage our artists to do as good work as is being done in their lines of activity by their confreres in Europe. The war and the industrial chaos it created in the old world should aid this society in the realization of its aim.

A REFERENDUM ON GRAND OPERA.

Intelligent lovers of music are aware that in opera, as in other things, there are cycles and periods. Wagner, for example, is tyrant no more in the opera world. He is in the permanent repertory, but Wagnerian opera no longer monopolizes our seasons. We have had Italian revivals and French periods, but where are we now, operatically speaking? What does the public want in grand opera?

A recent referendum by the Century Opera company of New York furnishes an answer to this question—the more interesting to us in Chicago because that company is to appear here and give us a taste of its quality. Hundreds of ballots were cast, and the result throws light on the development of public taste. The ten operas that lead the list of "favorites" are these: "Aida," "Samson and Delilah," "The Barber of Seville," "Louise," "Rigoletto," "Madame Butterfly," "Bohême," "The Tales of Hoffman," "Thaïs," "Haensel and Gretel."

An excellent repertory in itself, a catholic, sound, highly creditable repertory. Old Italian, new Italian, old French, new French, and modern German opera will be found in the list. The public wants neither hackneyed stuff nor mere novelty for the sake of novelty. It wants beauty, melody, emotion, and takes it wherever it is found.

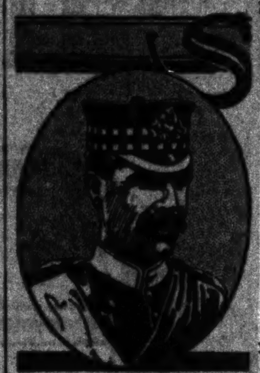
The ten operas next in order of popularity are these: "Gioconda," "Tosca," "Mignon," "The Secret of Suzanne," "The Juggler of Notre Dame," "The Huguenots," "The Masked Ball," "The Magic Flute," "The Walküre," "Boris Godunov."

Again we have old and new French, old and new Italian, old and new German, and one Russian opera of striking merit.

Clearly, we may trust the great public in art as well as in politics, if the great public be given a chance to hear, weigh, and determine.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

[Copyright: 1914: By the Brentwood Co.]



SIR WILLIAM ROBERTSON, who has just been promoted to the rank of lieutenant general for his services as quartermaster general of the British army in France, is the first "ranker" (enlisted man) to attain that high grade in Great Britain.

He began his career as a trooper in the Sixteenth Lancers, and after serving for ten years obtained, at the age of 39, a commission as lieutenant of the Third Dragoon Guards.

He so distinguished himself in the frontier wars of India, especially in the Miranzai and Black Mountain expeditions, and in the Chitral relief expedition, being severely wounded, that he found no difficulty in obtaining from the late Lieut. Gen. Palin of the Bombay Staff corps the permission to marry his daughter.

Since then his promotion has been rapid. He has been commandant of the staff college and director of military training of the British army and chief of the general staff at Aldershot, while he won the favor of King George by acting as his guide and escort throughout the army maneuvers last year, at the conclusion of which he received knighthood and the handle to his name.

There have been several instances of enlisted men rising to major generalships, such as, for instance, the late Sir Hector Macdonald, and of rankers who have risen to colonelcies, such as Sir John Harrington, originally a private in the Middlesex regiment, and who became not only a colonel of that corps d'élite, the Indian Staff corps, but also British minister plenipotentiary in Abyssinia.

Sir William Robertson, however, is the first enlisted man to attain the grade of lieutenant general, and his career is in the nature of a romance, and calculated to furnish encouragement and inspiration to all those Britons who have volunteered for service in the ranks of the British army now in the field against the Germans.

Another extremely interesting figure in the present war is that of Gen. Paul Charles von Rennenkampf, who, under the supreme direction of the generalissimo, Grandduke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, is commanding in chief the Russian army in Poland and East Prussia. He is the one commander on the Russian side who won fame and honor in the war with Japan ten years ago, where his name ended by becoming an inspiration to the entire Russian forces, his sayings and his achievements being an all absorbing topic of daily discussion.

At the head of his cavalry, and especially of his Cossacks, he gave more trouble to the Japanese under Field Marshal Oyama than all the other Russian generals put together.

On several occasions Rennenkampf boldly declined to obey orders from Kuropatkin to retreat, would not allow anybody in his entourage to discuss peace, a word which was taboo at his headquarters, and whenever he received a message from some of the generals or colonels under his command, declaring that they would have to retire unless they received reinforcements, Rennenkampf would reply that if they retired their names would be stricken from the list of the army.

Paul von Rennenkampf is just 60 years of age, hails from Estlande, was educated first at Reval and then at Nicholas academy at St. Petersburg, and on graduation was appointed to a commission in the Fifth Lancer regiment.

He took part in the Turko-Russian war of 1877, where, under Skoboleff, he won the Cross of the Order of St. George for an act of heroism, being but 22 at the time. This was sufficient to mark him out for rapid promotion; and so pleased was Emperor Nicholas with his services in the war with Japan that at its close he bestowed upon him, along with other honors, the title of count and a sword of honor, studded with large diamonds, rubies, and sapphires.

After the war he was selected by the emperor to suppress the revolutionary outbreaks at various points in Siberia, which followed the demobilization of the Russian army, and became thenceforth an object of particular interest to the general staffs of the German and Austrian war departments and of their military attachés in Russia as the one commander of all others who would have to be taken into account in the event of a war between Russia and the Austro-German alliance—that war which has now materialized and which finds him at the head of the Muscovite forces operating against Germany.

France has sustained a severe loss through the death of Count Albert de Mun, Royalist leader, member of the French Academy, and since the death of Gambetta, far and away the finest orator of the chamber of deputies, in which he represented Roscoff, in the Finisterre, for close upon forty years without interruption.

His eloquence was of the classical order, and portrayed the French language in such purity and perfection that even those of his political adversaries who most bitterly opposed his religious and royalist doctrines were accustomed to listen to him, not merely with respect, but with pleasure and satisfaction.

I have always considered that the deference with which he was listened to was due in part to his impressive appearance. Tall, robust, bald headed, with a white mustache and otherwise clean shaven pale face, a Roman nose, a full and disdainful mouth, broad shoulders, a tremendous chest, narrow haunches, and arrayed in a frock coat of faultless build, he looked the typical retired cavalry officer.

His language and demeanor when speaking were characterized by the most perfect outward courtesy. And yet sometimes it was so provocative that there would be signs of restlessness on the benches of the extreme left, whereupon De Mun would stretch out his arms at full length toward them and move his hands at them, as if he were chiding and repressing children.

The ribbon of the Legion of Honor which he wore in his buttonhole was won as a cuirassier officer in the war of 1870, in which he greatly distinguished himself, after having previously served for eight years in Algeria.

Maternally he was the great-grandson of the Swiss philosopher, Helvetius, while on his father's side he descended from one of the oldest families of the aristocracy of the southwest of France, taking his ancient name and title from the castle and townlet of Mun, in an obscure corner of the Pyrenees.

RED CROSS WORK.

THE object of the American Red Cross, the reason it exists, is to go as a temporary means of relief into any field where there is any break in the ordinary machinery of society; to supply wheels when the ordinary wheels have got out of gear. The emergency ceasing to exist, the ordinary machine having resumed its work, with its wheels, rachets, and link belts in position and moving rightly, it becomes the object of the American Red Cross to retire from the field with expedition.

If the emergency is one of war the function of the organization is the same, though details of the relief machinery are organized on a different basis.

In the ordinary day's work of a community the different parts of the social machine carry the loads for which they were devised. The food producing machine, with its divisions into manufacturers and other producers, wholesalers and retailers, dealers, purchasers, preparers and consumers, is in harmonious reciprocal relation. The medical machine conserves the health of the people.

Suddenly there comes a calamity sufficient to disarrange a considerable part of the machine. Days, maybe months, will be required to reëstablish relations. The human bees whose hive has been broken up fly around in reckless disorder or stand around in stupefied idleness.

It is the function of the Red Cross promptly to come on this scene and get into action—to supply bread to the hungry, clothes to the unclad, shelter to the unsheltered; care for the sick and endeavor to prevent epidemic disease.

When society begins again to function in an orderly way the Red Cross retires and leaves the work to the ordinary workers.

Now the American Red Cross had its origin in the needs of the nation in time of war. It may be said to have been born out of war. Its greatest functions relate to war.

One reason for this is that nothing disturbs the every day operations of society like a great war.

Drawing from the ordinary vocations so many men, it deprives families of their means of support.

As these families can spend but little, production and trade are limited, and thus other workers are thrown out of work.

The Red Cross may be called upon to help care for the families left at home.

The army is provided with machinery with which to care for the sick, wounded, disabled, and dead at the front. But there is generally need of a machine to care for or to help care for the base hospitals and convalescent camps and to keep the men at the front in proper touch with the folk at home. This is an important part of the work of the Red Cross.

It is plain that the great need for a Red Cross organization is in the midst of a great war.

During the course of the civil war the nations were convinced that it was necessary to have a general agreement as to certain rules of conduct for the guidance of nations at war.

The first meeting held at Geneva in 1863 was not attended by representatives from the United States. We were represented, however, at the Geneva convention of 1864.

Since then we have been represented in the convention of Petrograd [St. Petersburg] in 1868; The Hague, 1899; Geneva, 1906, and The Hague in 1907.

In order to carry out some of the measures to which our country agreed in these conventions the American Red Cross was organized.

Since the principal agreements through which it came into being were the outcome of the Geneva conventions, the Red Cross insignia have been fashioned after those of Geneva. To the first humanitarian agreements the United States was not a party.

During our civil war Miss Clara Barton had won renown for the assistance she had rendered the wounded and the help she had given the families. When she went to Switzerland in 1869 she was brought closely in contact with the work organized there. She returned to the United States and began her work for a similar organization here. She succeeded in 1881.

Organized on a war basis, she proposed and secured an amendment to the constitution making it possible for the organization to give relief following disasters in time of peace.

As the years went by the organization increased the respect and esteem in which it was held throughout the country until it reached semi-official position by reason of a proclamation by the president of the United States, dated Dec. 27, 1911.

The president proclaimed that on and after that date the American Red Cross, incorporated under the laws of the United States, Jan. 5, 1905, would be the only organization permitted to render aid to the land and naval forces of the United States.

This action was by reason of an agreement of one of the conventions to the effect that volunteer relief societies, in order to have the privileges accorded by the agreement, must have the sanction of the head of the government.

In the "Rules of Land Warfare," issued by the war department on April 25, 1914, there occur many references to the activities of the Red Cross. These are based upon articles of agreement of the different conventions. Some of these rules are as follows:

"Relief societies for prisoners of war which are properly constituted in accordance with the laws of their country and with the object of serving as the channel for charitable effort shall receive from the belligerents for themselves and their duly accredited agents every facility for the efficient performance of their humane task within the bounds imposed by military necessities and administrative regulations.

"For the purpose of distributing relief agents of these societies may be admitted to the places of interment, as also to the halting place of repatriated prisoners, if furnished with a personal permit by the military authorities and on giving an undertaking in writing to comply with all measures of order and police which the latter may issue."—Hague convention, article XV.

"The mobile sanitary formations, including the Red Cross transport column, shall be protected and respected by belligerents."—Geneva convention, article VI.

"The personnel of voluntary aid societies, duly recognized and authorized by their own governments, which are employed in the sanitary formations and establishments of armies, are assimilated to the personnel contemplated in the preceding article upon condition that the said personnel shall be subject to military laws and regulations.

"Each state shall make known to the other, either in time of peace or at the opening or during the progress of hostilities, and in any case before actual employment, the names of the societies which it has authorized to render assistance under its responsibility in the official sanitary service of its armies.

Volunteer societies of neutrals must have consent of their own government and also of the governments whose soldiers they seek to aid.

An army may requisition the wagons and trains of the Red Cross for the care of the medical corps, but for no other use.

The National Red Cross of America is the only volunteer aid society that can be employed by the land and naval forces of the United States in future wars to aid the medical personnel and their employment must be under the responsibility of the government as part of the medical personnel and establishments of its army and they must be assigned to duties in localities designated by competent military authority.

The personnel and establishments of voluntary aid societies while so employed are entitled to the same privileges and protection as that to which the army medical service is entitled under certain conditions, which are:

a That the societies are duly recognized and authorized by their government.

b That the names of the societies to be employed must be notified to the enemy before any of the personnel is actually employed.

c That the personnel is subject to military law. By way of explanation the rules state: "In past wars so many irregularities and even acts of hostility have been committed by members of volunteer aid societies that the conditions above mentioned have been found necessary."

Under appropriate headings in the rules are given in detail just what the relief bodies are allowed to do and how they shall do it and what shall be their special privileges as noncombatants and the limitations of those privileges.

Generally speaking, the Red Cross does not work at the front. The equipment of the medical and commissary departments is supposed to feed and shelter the able-bodied soldiers and to care for the sick and wounded. A voluntary aid organization in that zone would be of little service and would be very much in the way. The stretcher, ambulance, dressing station, field hospital and evacuation hospital equipment of an army is usually fairly well organized. The wounded and sick are close enough to their comrades to have some care from their first sergeants, captains and colonels, as well as from the hospital corps. But from the evacuation hospitals through the base hospitals and convalescent camps back to the homes there is need of an accessory organization.

Director E. P. Bicknell says that with any army the Red Cross would be expected to have men and necessary ambulances, mule teams, etc., for the transportation of sick and wounded soldiers from the field hospitals to the base hospitals. The Red Cross would be expected to provide such surgeons, nurses, clerical force and domestic help at the base hospitals as might be called for by the army authorities.

In convalescent camps the Red Cross service would increase relatively. And then in getting the disabled back to their homes the duty would largely rest with the voluntary organization.

This service may seem of little consequence. Yet the records show that toward the end of the civil war the percentage of soldiers in both the Federal and Confederate armies absent from their commands was at all times large. At times the absentees totaled one-third of the command. Many inquiries were instituted and many remedies for the conditions were offered.

It seemed when a man got out of touch with his colonel he sometimes disappeared entirely, sometimes got home tardily, and usually keeping in touch with him at home and getting him back was difficult and often impossible. A Red Cross organization would have greatly lessened this evil.

The organization of the Red Cross is into four bureaus:

1. Medical bureau with duties outlined as above.
2. Bureau of nursing.
3. Bureau of material. While the material supplied is of every character the main function of this bureau is to supply delicacies and comforts needed by the sick and wounded but not otherwise available for them.

Among the articles to be found in Director Bicknell's list are soups, condensed milk, grape juice, fruits, marmalades and jellies, pipes and tobacco, night clothes, convalescent clothes, socks, underwear, tooth brushes, writing material, towels, pillows, mattresses, mosquito bars, bed clothes and cots.

4. Bureau of intelligence. This bureau serves as a means of communication and information between the sick and wounded soldiers and sailors and their friends and relatives at home. They keep records of the wounded and dead and notify their families. Records of capture are kept and information forwarded to relatives. When it is possible the names of the enemy captured or the wounded enemies taken and the killed enemies identified, with such facts as are proper, are sent through the lines to the relatives.

HAVE PHYSICAL EXAMINATION.

F. writes: "What is the normal temperature for women? For more than a year my temperature has registered 98.8 and over. REPLY.

The normal temperature is 98.4. I suspect that you have not taken your temperature carefully or that your thermometer is out of order.

Have a capable physical examination. If this is negative, quit taking your temperature.

Perhaps your lungs are sound, but you are somewhat [illegible] on the subject of consumption.

DELAY DUE TO PROTEST.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—How soon will the alleys north and south of Franklin boulevard and parallel with the same be paved. OWNER.

I beg to advise you that proceedings for the paving of the alleys between Ohio street, Franklin boulevard, Troy street and Albany avenue have been stayed for one year, from Feb. 20, 1914, a majority protest having been filed on that date. There are no proceedings under way for paving the alleys between Franklin boulevard, Kinzie street, Troy street and Albany avenue, but the board of local improvements will investigate the necessity of the improvement, and, if advisable will institute proceedings thereafter.

NO LICENSE NECESSARY; CANNOT SELL CIGARETS.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is a party who owns a candy store permitted to sell tobacco to the men in the factory where he works?

MRS. J. H. CLARK,
2413 Spaulding avenue.

I desire to state that the city of Chicago does not exact a license to sell tobacco in a candy store, or for the candy store itself, except in the case of the sale of cigarets. I cannot conceive of any way in which a man can be stopped selling tobacco in the place where he works, providing he does not sell cigarets or give away cigaret papers with the tobacco, unless he is stopped by the powers in the plant.

EDWARD COHN, City Collector.

PUBLIC HEARING TO BE HELD.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly tell me if the alley running east and west between Robey and Lincoln streets and between Madison street and Warren avenue will be paved.

N. CULLEN.

A public hearing will be held during the fall or winter on the proposed paving of the alley in the block between Robey, Lincoln, and Madison streets and Warren avenue, and we hope to be able to have the alley paved some time next year.

WATER MAINS FOR CLAREMONT AVENUE.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please tell me when the water pipes will be laid on Claremont avenue south of Seventy-first street.

O. F. BUHLER,
7249 Claremont avenue.

Contract for laying water mains in Claremont avenue, from Seventy-first to Seventy-fourth streets, has been let and will expire Oct. 28. The contractor states that work will be completed before that time.

HAVE POLICY HOLDERS UNITE.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My father is insured in the Scandinavian Mutual Aid association to the amount of $1,500, this being a life policy. He has been in this company for the last twenty-nine years, taking out his policy at the age of 35, he now being 64. He has just received a notice that his payments each month hereafter will be doubled and will be increased each year until he has reached the age of 71, at which time he will be paying about $10 per month. Have they a right to increase these payments when the original contract which he holds is exempt from same? ANXIOUS.

It may be that the insurance superintendent, Springfield, Ill., can supply you with information as to this increase in rates.

The most effective way to handle this situation is for the policy holders of this association to unite in investigating the affairs of the association to determine whether or not this raise in rates is justified. If necessary, the policy holders can retain an attorney.

REVIVING OF A JUDGMENT.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What period of time, if any, does the statute impose upon the renewal of a judgment after it has once expired? That is, may the ability of reviving a judgment be forfeited if the proper steps are not taken within a prescribed time, and if so, what action must be taken? J. A. L.

Under the law of Illinois judgments in any court of record in this state may be revived by scire facias, or an action of debt may be brought thereon within twenty years next after the date of such judgment.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DEPENDS UPON AGREEMENT.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought some furniture, agreeing to pay $20 per month, but owing to present conditions cannot meet the required payment. I informed them that I could pay $10 per month, but they insisted on my living up to my agreement, or they would take the goods by right of mortgage. Please tell me if they can do so, and oblige. A READER.

The right of the furniture company to take the furniture sold depends upon the agreement made when the purchase was completed. In the event that a chattel mortgage was given on the furniture it is probable that failure to make the payment gives the furniture company the right to take possession of the furniture and to sell it for the unpaid balance.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

NEEDS OF ARMY AND NAVY.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Monroe doctrine is not a vital prohibition to a foreign country unless we have an adequate force behind it, and in this connection is there any guarantee that Germany, frustrated in its present encounter, will remain quiescent in the future? Our only safeguard is an adequate navy, an increased first line of military defense and offense, especially in the artillery arm of the service, and a large trained reserve or second line of defense. To depend for a second line on the state militia alone is not satisfactory nor expedient, for many and obvious reasons.

In order to overcome our deficiency I would suggest that enlistment in the state militia be restricted to men between 18 and 25 years of age and that we embody a national volunteer force composed of enlisted men in which the enlisting age is between 25 and 35. This force should be made up chiefly of infantry regiments, with a scattering of cyclist battalions, since possibly the maintenance of cavalry regiments on this footing would prove too costly. The writer has been through two wars, one of which was the Spanish-American, and fully realizes the terrible wastage where green troops are relied upon in a modern conflict which so sorely tries the nerve and stamina of the best trained troops of this day and age.

Our army as at present constituted can only place a single first line army corps in the field (Germany is reported to have twenty-two army corps operating as a first line in France alone), and while our navy consists of fewer units than that of Germany, yet its efficiency is such as to give preponderance to this country, except in submarines. This latter is not an item to be overlooked, nor is the fact that we have two extended and widely separated coasts to defend.

On the face of it we would seem to invite attack, and the saving factor in the whole situation is our latent resources in men and money, and this factor is recognized on the continent.

NOVOCASTRIAN.

"FORM IN FOURS."

Chicago, Oct. 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In the article by Mr. McCutcheon he states that, in his opinion, the men of the English army are poorly drilled and quotes an instance where a party of them did not know what to do when given the order, "Form in fours." In view of the fact that this statement of Mr. McCutcheon's may create a wrong impression in the minds of your readers unversed in military drill, please allow an ex-drill sergeant of H. M.'s army to explain the difficulty those soldiers met when confronted with an order to "form in fours."

The order "form fours" should be preceded by the order "Number."

A party of soldiers, regardless of their number, cannot form fours unless previously numbered. Each individual must know whether he is an odd or even number, as it is only the even numbers that move on the command, "Form fours." Any attempt at guesswork by the men as to whether they are "odd" or "even" would result in hopeless confusion.

Therefore those men, knowing their drill, did the correct thing by standing still when given an incomplete order. The correct orders to carry out the movement required by that German officer are: "Party"—"Number"—"Move to the right (or left) in fours"—"Form fours"—"Right" (or left). "Quick march."

A REAL LIFE.

by Robert Herrick

"TELL us, then," writes Mrs. William Blank—she of the "full life" program which I described some weeks ago—"tell us what is a real life. I quite agree with you that most of the things we independent women do to fill up our lives are futile and silly, but we must do something. I have turned my music room into a workshop and am getting together a lot of women to sew for the French relief fund. Surely that is better than trying to amuse oneself these dark days?"

Surely almost anything is better than "trying"—what a pathetic word—to amuse oneself at any time. I pondered this letter a long while. For it is much easier to poke fun at the fritter of useless women businesses than to suggest a good working substitute for the "full life" program. It is always easier to point out the wrong than to offer a constructive amendment. "A real life?" Everybody must get his or her own reality—nobody can do it for another. But that phrase, the "real life," arrests me; it is a good phrase, worth turning over, especially now.

The desire for reality, that is the one supreme thing this war cataclysm has given the world, even us Americans, removed from the horrors of the conflict by 3,000 miles of sea water. The quarrel may not be of our making, not our affair at all. It may be incomprehensible to us. But just as not one of us can escape the economic and the spiritual consequences of this great war, so no one in the least sensitive to what goes on outside his own front and back yard can escape the depression with which the black cloud of European struggle has overcast the world. The paper comes in the morning as usual; we go our ways to work, to our three meals, and our amusements in the customary routine, but over all hangs this gigantic pall of wrong and misery, of waste and barbaism. We are vaguely conscious that beneath the black pall across the ocean most awful things are happening hourly; men by the tens of thousands are being uselessly butchered, the fruits of enormous human toil are being destroyed, some of the fairest portions of the earth are being harried to a desolation that will take years of patient endeavor to redeem.

No wonder that not merely my correspondent, but all thinking persons are asking themselves, What is real? What goes to make a real life? When men are rotting where they fall in a blind battle, their women and children starving, when all that the world has hoarded and prized is being wantonly gutted, the ordinary pursuits of life seem trivial, pale, and futile. What is worth while in such a world except to fight and die?

Like so many other American women, my friend has turned her music room into an impromptu factory for making garments for the wounded. Without discussing the utility of these efforts of mercy, which at least prove the sympathetic and humane spirit of our women and their practical bent to convert feeling into action, one can point out that this is in the way which surplus woman energy is too commonly used today, in some desultory and accidental task.

It is often said that women as compared with men are opportunists. Certainly our society does what it can to make them opportunists. Extra or occasional labors of charity, art, or organization are turned over to well to do women because they have the time, "have nothing else to do." Thus these leisured women, often with splendid energies and abilities, become unconsciously "casual labor." They distribute posters for a reform candidate, manage a charity ball, run a local market for a few weeks, etc. All good causes, doubtless, but nevertheless with the limitations of casual, temporary occupation. The thing is taken up for the moment with enthusiasm, to be laid aside at the lure of the next appeal. There is something insubstantial and febrile about such occupations, no matter how much worth while their objects may be. And the fact that women go in for these odd jobs with more ardor than training belittles the working powers of women in men's eyes.

Few men ever ask themselves what is a real life, fortunately! If a man over 25 should spend much of his time pondering the question we should know that he at any rate would never achieve reality. Few men are mostly under the economic necessity of meeting realities, humble or great, it makes little difference, every waking hour. The letter has to be answered, the column of figures added up, this man seen—the job whatever it is done somehow.

But even when the primal spur of making a living is removed or lessened men's work and men's lives have a reality that women's lives often lack because their efforts are planned, coherent. One thing leads to another in an endless patter. There is not much conscious volition in their lives, perhaps, because the pattern once having been set up on the loom of life there is small opportunity to escape it; they must keep on weaving that pattern. And the pattern absorbs them—in favorable circumstances engrosses them. It is their reality—their life.

To put it otherwise, their efforts are creative, which means that they are making some kind of a whole and each petty deed plays its finite part in this whole. As Arnold so well said: "It is undeniable that the exercise of a creative power, that a free creative activity, is the highest function of man! It is proved to be so by man's finding in it his true happiness. But it is undeniable also that men may have the sense of exercising this free creative activity in other ways than in producing great works of literature or art."

Many other ways! And it is because men's daily work is more of a piece, and thus more truly creative, that they do not have to "fill in" their lives with all sorts of substitutes, of casual and ephemeral occupations. Nor do they have to ask themselves what makes a real life. A man child from the start is led to look upon his life as a coherent whole. "What are you going to do when you leave school?" is one of the first questions asked him.

Men are educated, trained as far as possible, to create a single pattern for their lives. The same kind of women are still largely left to drift about, feeding on their emotions, trusting to chance and a husband to fit them out with a coherent occupation. They are supposed to marry, and husband and family will keep them busy, keep them from asking the inconvenient question, Is my life worth while? But we know how rare the perfect norm is becoming these days, how often neither husband nor family completely exhausts the energies of women.

As my correspondent says in the letter from which I have already quoted, "The children are all at school and doing very well. The family goes almost automatically." That also is the trouble! The modern ideal is efficiency, automatic accomplishment. The school, the college, society have relieved many women largely from the burdens of "bringing up" their families, where economic conditions have not relieved them of the families. So they are set loose upon themselves and life to find a coherent, satisfying occupation, a small point in the periphery of the world's wheel, where they can put their shoulders and shove with some sense of accomplishment.

If they had been educated from the beginning like their brothers and husbands to find a creative interest, a consistent employment of their energies, instead of being left to take the odd, casual jobs that turn up, they would not have these uncomfortable moments of self-questioning, this sense of futility and vacuity that the best of them are conscious of. Fortunately their daughters more and more are being trained to look on life as men look on it, to prepare themselves against the jobless day which because of their preparation and outlook may never come to them. Not all the daughters of this generation, of course; there are yet many specimens of the willfully parasite who consider that they establish their superior caste by relying wholly on sex for occupation and amusement.

The waste of fine woman energy in our modern society seems to me enormous. "If," writes another friend, "I only had a real job." (This woman has done admirably several self-discovered and useful jobs.) That cry rises in the hearts of able, intelligent, well to do women the land over. The waste of woman energy in unrealities, in "full life" programs, in amusements that do not amuse, in emotions that fail to satisfy—it is folly! Such women take work in this or that one of our universities if they happen to live within striking distance of one, or attend a course of popular lectures in a subject they never thought of before because some other woman is doing it or because the lecturer heads the money or "has created quite a sensation." They run a charity for a while or do a bit of gardening or "go in for art," or some other accidental interest that may beckon alluringly for the moment, "filling in" thus their conscious moments with a heterogenous mess of nonrelated activities that lead nowhere.

Of course there is always "service"—some form of charity work—for the idle woman with too much energy to sit idle or try merely to amuse herself. But suppose that charity does not appeal to every woman? I can imagine the cold disgust such a doubt must raise in the hearts of strenuous social workers. Yet it is conceivable that social service may not appeal to many women as a permanent occupation any more than it does to many men. Some intelligent women may even question the basic principles on which philanthropy, social service, rest, may consider it unscientific, wasteful, even harmful. I have heard sincere social workers voice such doubts. Not every woman was meant to be a ministering angel any more than every man was designed to be a martyr. To tell every idle woman to interest herself in social service if she does not happen to have a genuine liking for the work is like telling every man to be an artist whether beauty has any meaning to him or not.

Probably there is no clear road of escape for those women who are no longer young and who have been brought up in the old way of looking at woman as a creature to fill corners. Discovering themselves towards middle life with unabated energies, with leisure and intelligence and the will to do, but without training or the habit of consistent and creative work, they will remain more or less fortuitous, casual, their lives the sport of every wind that blows through the social heavens, unsatisfying, leading nowhere, least of all to the accomplishment of character. They will be "restless," "unsatisfied," "groping," or trivial, gadding, nervous, overemotionalized. Life to such as these must remain a series of accidents, never quite real.

But for the young woman with intelligence enough to feel how the world is going or with wise guidance and a happy fortune, the same disaster need never come. She will aim to make her life creative, that is leading on and forward somewhere—also to make it whole, not a thing of shreds and patches. She will get her pattern early and cling to it, finding the abiding satisfaction that harmonious men find in pursuing a consistent pattern, in forgetting themselves in an effort for attainment that does not stop in an hour or a day or a week or a season, but persists calmly through the years, turning here and there as necessity demands, broadening or contracting, but always steadily persisting. That makes not merely for a full life but for a real life.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids.

It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. At 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

LONDON WRITER TELLS REASON OF GERMAN RETREAT

Hillaire Belloc Describes Enemy's Strategy in Falling Back from Paris.

ILLUSTRATES IN DIAGRAMS

In a recent issue of Land and Water of London, Hillaire Belloc gives an interesting explanation of the retreat of the German armies when within a day's march of Paris.

There have been a number of reasons advanced for this tremendous reversal of startegy on the part of the Germans, the one most accepted being the serious defeat administered to the armies of the center under the command of the crown prince by the French, forcing their retirement from the line between Sezanne-Vitry-le-Francois. This retirement of the German center, it has been claimed, endangered the advance of the armies to the west under Gens. von Kluck and von Hausen and made a general retreat imperative.

According to Mr. Belloc, Gen. von Kluck discovered when he approached Paris that a tremendous force of French had been accumulated in and behind Paris to the west and south and that this forced him to retire.

Tried to Escape Trap.

That Gen. von Kluck attempted to escape the trap set by the French was shown by his unexpected swing to the southeast away from Paris, depending on the German armies to the eastward to pierce the enemy's lines, when he would have been in a position to swing to the east as one-half of a great clamp that would enfold the shattered French left wing. After Von Kluck's realization of the situation, Mr. Belloc outlines the strategy that the Germans acted upon as follows:

"It was then evident that the only chance the Germans had of relieving or negativing this pressure upon their extreme right near Paris was to break through somewhere upon the long line between Paris and the fortified line Verdun-Toul.

"This French line (with its British contingent towards the left of it) ran in a great curve behind—that is, south of—Provins, La Fere Champenoise, Sommesous, Vitry-le-Francois, and Revigny. It was further evident that the chief German pressure in the attempt to break the French line would fall somewhere in the neighborhood of Vitry-le-Francois. Whether the Germans would succeed in this or whether they would be compelled to a general retreat was still doubtful.

German Advance Doomed.

"Events have proved that the German effort to break through was doomed. The alternative to such success upon their part, a general retirement, was therefore undertaken, and that retirement proceeded throughout Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, until, upon Monday last, Sept. 7, the Germans were holding a line parallel with and north of the river Aisne and occupying certain heights which pass above and along the river Suippe, a tributary of the Aisne.

"The allied bodies following the Germans in this retreat passed from near Paris, through Meaux and Soissons; from Provins, through Montmirail and Chateau; Thierry; from Sezanne, through teau Thierry; from Sezanne, through Chalons towards Reims; and, on the extreme right, from Revigny up to the southern edge of the forest of Argonne, near Ste. Menehould.

"The whole of this vast movement of rapid retirement upon the part of the German forces and of equally rapid advance upon the part of their pursuers will be known to history under the general title of the The Battle of the Marne.

Diagrams Used in Explanation.

"Before understanding anything in detail, it is necessary to understand it in general, and the general scheme of what happened in the course of last week—that is, of the sudden retirement of the German right wing from in front of Paris, with all the vast consequences that have followed upon that retirement—may be put into the shape of a fairly simple diagram.

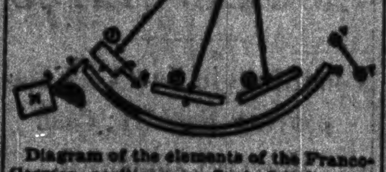

Diagram of the elements of the Franco-German positions on Sept. 6 before the German retreat.

"However we number them, there were, in the main, three great German masses [1], [2], [3] advancing into France from the north and pushing back on to the line Verdun-Paris the French line with its British contingent. This French line one may roughly represent, not in size, but in position, by the bend A-B between the fortified line Verdun-Toul and Paris [P], in which, both as to proportionate size and as to position, the British contingent is represented by the shaded portion.

Keep Back Large Reserve.

"Within and to the east of Paris the French commanders had kept back a large reserve, represented by the square block X. That was the position on Sept. 3 and 4, when the largest of the German armies, No. 1, was at the gates of the French capital.

"The commander of this large German army [1] got wind for the first time of the existence of this large reserve in these two days. He thereupon attempted with great boldness not to retreat but to turn suddenly at right angles in the direction he had hitherto been pursuing, join up with army No. 2 along the line C-D, and, in conjunction with that army and with army No. 3, break through the allied line and cut it in two.

"In this attempt to march right across the front of the French left and the British contingent, along the line C-D, which was too bold, he was caught; and he had to retire the way he had come while the men of the great reserve at X were pouring through and around Paris after him, along E-F, and the British contingent was pounding up behind him.

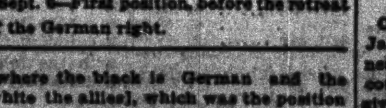
Explains Change in Campaign.

"That is the whole story, which explains the change in the campaign, and it is the only story which explains it.

"But once so considerable a change had been effected in the position of army [1], the position of army [2] and of army [3] was at once gravely compromised. Instead of the three main German masses forming a continuous line, two-thirds of them were now threatened in flank, and the retirement of army No. [1] upon their right compelled them to retire also, mass No. [2] having to go back somewhat more precipitately than mass No. [3].

Advance Becomes Retreat.

"Thus the entire German advance was converted into a full German retreat, and from being originally in such a position as is indicated in the following sketch



Sept. 6—First position, before the retreat of the German right.

[where the black is German and the white the allies], which was the position on Sept. 3 and 4, the German armies were compelled to pass through a stage upon Sept. 9, roughly represented by this sketch, in which their center and eastern portions at A and B stand for a moment in an exceedingly dangerous, isolated position.

Second position (Sept. 9 to 10), when the German right had begun to retreat, showing isolation of German center and left.

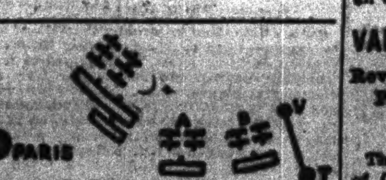
Turn Toward Defensive Position.

"From this position they could only extricate themselves by retiring in their turn and taking up a united line again with the army that had retired from Paris, so that by the Sunday morning the whole German line was in retreat towards a defensive position along the Aisne [six miles from Paris] after the fashion indicated upon the sketch below.



Third position (Sept. 12), when the whole German line was in concerted retreat to its prepared position on the Aisne.

"Now to this general scheme of the retirement, which was thus forced upon the mass of the German forces, must be added one important modification. There were present in the field not only the three main masses [1], [2], and [3], but a fourth body [4], which had come round not from the north, but from Luxemburg under the crown prince, and had already begun to bombard Verdun.

Forts a Big Factor.

"Should Verdun fall, and the line of forts connecting it with Toul, yet a fifth body [5] would be present upon the flank of the French line, imperiling its advance and checking the retreat of the other three German bodies.

"The task before the French, therefore, was not merely the simple one of following up a general German retreat. It could not depend upon the continuance of that retreat save by holding until it had driven the German line past it, the fortress of Verdun, and that fortress, as we know from the experience this has given of the lessened resisting power of fortification against modern siege artillery, was in grave peril."

COAT DRESS FALL DRESS; DARK BOTTLE GREEN IN FAVOR

Dressmakers Told by Fashion Art League of America of Other New Designs.

The following early autumn fashion suggestions were yesterday sent to dressmakers throughout the United States by the Fashion Art League of America:

"The coat dress is a smart substitute for the tailleur costume for the mild days of fall and an ideal costume for the California season.

"Dark bottle green, tete de negre brown, black, or navy blue are the desirable shades. Dark blue never stays in favor very long with the ultra dresser, because of its great vogue for practical use. The materials used are vigonne broadcloth, or serge, used in combination with satin, with edges bound with narrow black silk braid.

"In this type of gown the straight line from shoulder to hem is giving way to the more distinct waist line and flaring skirt. This much discussed skirt should be from two to three and one-half yards in width and of circular cut. If the skirt is to be two yards a long redingote tunic one-half or three-quarters way round and with a wider skirt a short coat effect either in back or front, or a short flared peplum with a narrow sash tied in a bow at one side, with fringed ends.

"The frock should be high in neck with long satin sleeves. With this costume turnover collars and cuffs of stuffy starched pique or linen can be used, but it is a novelty that is liable to become very common. The high stock of fur, the new tulle ruches or the short ostrich feather collars are accessories that are becoming and in excellent taste."

LANDIS NEARLY SEES FIGHT DURING CLASH OVER RING.

"Oyster Ike" and "Duffy the Goat" Almost Come to Blows in Courtroom After Testifying.

Oscar Levine, alias "Oyster Ike," and James Franche, alias "Duffy the Goat," nearly came to blows in Judge Landis' courtroom yesterday over testimony given in a hearing to determine the ownership of a $250 diamond ring. Levine, who is a federal prisoner in the county jail under Mann act charges in New Mexico, said he had given the ring to Attorney Emile B. Van Bever as security for a $25 legal fee.

Franche, who also is a prisoner in the county jail on a charge of murder, testified he had overheard Levine's arrangement with Van Bever regarding the ring. He said the ring was given to the lawyer unconditionally in lieu of a $150 fee to Van Bever for fighting the removal proceedings against Levine in the Mann act case.

The hearing was held because of a complaint filed with Judge Landis by Mrs. Clara Levine, "Oyster Ike's" wife, who said she wanted the ring back. Attorney Elwood G. Godman represented Van Bever.

After hearing the evidence Judge Landis exonerated Van Bever from any charge of unethical conduct in refusing to surrender the ring. When Franche left the witness stand after testifying against "Oyster Ike" the latter made a threatening move toward him as he passed the table where Levine was sitting. Several deputy marshals prevented an open clash.

VAIL'S WHEEL TAX PAID.

Revision Clerks Make Error in Placing Insurance Broker on Delinquent List.

Through a mistake in revision, the name of Charles W. Vail, insurance broker, was put on the list of delinquent wheel tax payers a week ago. Last August investigators of the vehicle bureau found that Mr. Vail had no city wheel tax license. When this was called to his attention Mr. Vail paid the tax. When the list was revised a week ago the clerks failed to eliminate Mr. Vail's name.

Life Insurance.

H. C. V., Lostant, Ill.—If you have made twelve payments of about $96 each on a twenty year $2,000 endowment policy you have paid $1,152 and still have to pay about $768. You do not state the exact surrender value that your company gives your policy at the present time, and so we assume that the figure is $1,015, which is the average surrender value of such policies in several large companies.

If you withdraw your money now, in the present stringent money market, you can invest it in a good municipal bond which will yield you $50 a year, or about a 4.80 income basis for the eight years. With the $50 income you can get $2,000 ordinary, nonparticipating life insurance so that if you should die within the next eight years your family would be left better off than under the endowment policy. Under that your family would receive $2,000. Under the change to municipal bond and ordinary life policy your family would receive $2,000 and have the $1,000 bond beside.

However, if you are in good health it is probable that you will live much longer than eight years. You are 40 years old now and your expectation of life is a little more than twenty-eight years, according to the American experience table. Suppose you live the twenty-eight years. The income on your bond would all have been expended in paying premiums on the ordinary life policy and at the end your family would have simply the bond and the $2,000 insurance.

If you continue paying the premiums on your endowment policy you will pay about $768 more and after eight years have passed you will receive $2,000. In other words, by paying in $768 you will have increased the surrender value of your policy by $985, which gives you about 7 per cent interest on your payments, a higher rate than you can get from any other equally conservative investment.

When you get the $2,000 the money market may be easier and good municipal bonds may be on a 4¼ per cent basis. Your $2,000 would then yield you $85 a year. As you will then be eight years older an ordinary life policy will cost you more. In one large nonparticipating company the rate would be $35.15 a thousand, so that with the income from your bonds you could pay the premium on a $2,400 life policy and finally leave your family $2,000 in bonds and $2,400 in insurance money.

From the foregoing it appears that if you die within the next eight years you will leave a larger estate by withdrawing your insurance now and reinvesting it. But if you live beyond eight years it will be better to continue your endowment policy.

Moline Plow Company.

O. N., Oak Park, Ill.—The Moline Plow company has outstanding $7,500,000 first preferred stock, $1,[illegible] second preferred, and $10,000,000 common. First preferred stock is callable at 115. No dividends can be paid on second preferred or common unless net quick assets of the company equal 140 per cent of the amount of first preferred stock outstanding. The company has no bonds outstanding and its first preferred stock has some of the advantages that usually belong to bonds. From 1890 to date cash dividends of nearly $8,000,000 have been paid on common stock and $8,000,000 carried to surplus. Stock dividends have also been declared aggregating $4,000,000. Dividends on first preferred are 7 per cent and second 6.

Deere & Co.

F. C. J., O. N.—The preferred shares of the old Deere company paid dividends regularly for many years and the present corporation, Deere & Co., has paid 7 per cent on its $37,828,500 of outstanding preferred stock since the company was formed, in 1911. No dividends have been paid on the $20,304,100 common stock, although, according to the last annual statement, 7 per cent was earned on common in 1913. There are outstanding $3,200,000 of bonds. Until the present company has been operating some years, to show what its earnings will be on its capitalization, its stock will not be the most conservative investment for savings.

Two Flat Building or Bungalow.

F. E.—If you buy a two flat building for $8,000, pay $500 down and $75 a month, it will take about eleven and one-half years to pay for the property if interest is at 6 per cent. You say the flats rent for $40 a month each. This will pay your monthly installments, but it will not leave enough for taxes, repairs, etc. You will have to advance considerable sums every year to make good the deficiency, and if one or both of your flats should be vacant for a time you might lose the property. Unless you plan to live in one of the flats, perform the janitor service and do most of the repair work yourself, the investment would be somewhat hazardous. If you buy a bungalow for $4,500, pay $500 down and $40 a month it will take about eleven and one-half years to clear the debt. If your resources are such that you will not be in danger of losing the property in case illness stops your salary, this plan is sound.

Business Venture.

H. P.—The plan of buying stock in a candy company and then selling its product in a certain territory is purely a business venture. If you know anything about the candy business you know the merits of the products of the company. If you do not understand the candy business, learn something about it before risking your savings.

Land Speculation.

I. H., La Harpe, Ill.—The purchase of shares in a company that has land which the government may drain at some future time, or which the company hopes to drain with money received from the sale of stock, would be a speculation. If the land is already under successful cultivation a purchase would be participation in a business venture.

WHEAT TRADE DULL BUT FIRM

Buyers Hold Off Until After Monday's Holiday; New Commitments Small.

CORN AND OATS HEAVIER

There was no change in the speculative position of the trade in wheat yesterday unless it was a general disposition toward an increase of speculative commitments and also a general desire of cash interests to postpone operations until the resumption of business next Tuesday. Final prices for the day ranged ⅛@⅜c higher. In spite of the strength the market ruled within narrow limits, with December wheat again showing the better undertone, and there was more or less quiet buying on the part of local interests, but this did not keep the general volume of trade from being exceedingly limited. The tone was influenced somewhat, it was stated, by the strength of the Winnipeg market and firmness of prices at Duluth and Minneapolis. At the Canadian point exporters were reported to be buyers of the October delivery, the intimation being that some further export business was in progress.

The undertone indicated also a further falling off in receipts in all directions. Primary arrivals for the week were about 3,000,000 bu less than those of the week before, but are over 4,000,000 bu more than for the corresponding period last year. Since July 1 the primary arrivals total 191,640,000 bu, against 136,873,000 bu last year and 133,078,000 bu two years ago.

Falling Off in Receipts.

The week's arrivals in Chicago were 1,683,000 bu and the shipments were 2,346,000 bu. Clearances for the day were 790,000 bu, including 80,000 bu bonded Canadian wheat. On account of the rain the inspection of wheat yesterday by track men was light, and estimated cars for Monday were 71. Northwestern receipts for the week were 900 cars less than the preceding week, but were 1,228 cars more than a year ago. Winnipeg received 2,060 cars less than for the preceding week and 3,715 cars less than for the corresponding week a year ago. There was considerable inquiry reported at Duluth for December delivery, springs and spot durums from exporters, but the details were not forthcoming. Cash sales were 10,000 bu.

Wet Weather Affects Corn.

Wet weather generally over the belt caused corn to drag and prices to become easier, and speculative support disappeared, together with a lack of demand from the east. Final prices were unchanged to ¼c lower. The official forecast indicated more settled weather, and this had some influence against prices, as did the weakness in oats. On account of the wet weather, track samplers brought in few cars. Estimated receipts for Monday, 49. Primary receipts for the day were 405,000 bu, against 384,000 bu a year ago. Primary receipts for the week were 2,724,000 bu, against 3,197,000 bu a year ago. Since Nov. 1 the receipts at primary points have been 223,146,000 bu, against 249,842,000 bu last year and 22,969,000 bu two years ago. The week's receipts of corn in Chicago were 1,288,000 bu and shipments were 1,096,000 bu. Cash sales were 47,000 bu and prices were ½c lower, with the outside markets showing losses from 1c lower to ½c higher. Export clearances were 3,000 bu.

Oats Tone is Heavy.

Oats developed a heavy tone and resting spots were ¼c lower. The closing rally in wheat failed to help the market to any extent, and all classes of buyers preferred to hold off in expectation of three days' arrivals on the market next week. The week's receipts here were 5,170,000 bu, against shipments of 3,527,000 bu. Primary receipts for the week increased about 2,000,000 bu over the preceding week, and were nearly double those of the same week of 1913. Cash sales were 105,000 bu. The cash situation is still the controlling factor of this market, and the car lot market was extremely heavy at the declines of ¼@½c. Estimated cars for Monday, 121. Clearances for the day, 365,000 bu.

Good Buying of Lard.

Nearly all the trade in provisions was concentrated in lard. Prices, however, were generally higher at the close, ranging 7½@20c above the previous close. Nearby deliveries were strong and higher and reflected better cash sales than at any time during the week. Hogs west for the week totaled 879,200 head, against 892,000 head a year ago and 814,000 head two years ago. A better feeling is said to exist in relation to the cash meat trade. Twenty-six thousand head of hogs are estimated for Monday and 110,000 head estimated for all next week.

Rye Market Steady.

Rye sold at steady prices, with No. 2 at 89c; No. 3, 88@91c; and sample grade, 87c. Receipts, 11 cars.

Barley was unchanged, with sales of malting at 57@68c and feed at 54@56c. Receipts, 53 cars.

Timothyseed was steady at $5.50 for October and $3.75@5.00 for cash. Cloverseed was quiet at $10.00@14.75 for cash.

Duluth flax closed ½c higher to ¼c lower, with cash on track $1.35¼; October, $1.34½; November, $1.35¼, and December, $1.36. Receipts, 38 cars. Minneapolis was ½c higher to ½c lower, at $1.33¾@1.34¼ for cash on track. Receipts, 36 cars. Winnipeg closed steady to 1½c higher, with October, $1.14; November, $1.15¼, and December, $1.15¼. Receipts, 30 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Explanation of oats weakness is found in the fact that eastern exporters as well as distributers are more than usually slow in buying. They seldom buy at any time on Saturday, but they were holding off in particular yesterday because of expectation of a big run of oats here during the two consecutive holidays, with a large supply to work on when business commences next Tuesday. Seaboard exporters are in some instances trying to buy for shipment after Oct. 20. They are pretty well clogged at the moment, as recent heavy arrivals from the west have not been clearing as rapidly as expected, although they are going to a larger number of countries than ever before known in the history of the trade.

Gregson says: "The annual adjustment of the live hog prices to the winter basis has been the main motive in provisions circles during the week. The fact that the adjustment is in point of season thirty or forty days ahead of schedule does not necessarily bring in the winter buyers of future products ahead of the usual time, and the general market, missing that purchasing power at this time, is very susceptible to selling pressure and easily declines."

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 71 cars; corn, 49 cars; oats, 121 cars; rye, 11 cars; barley, 32 cars; hogs, 26,000 head. Hogs for all next week, 110,000 head.

A Baltimore message by way of Kansas City read: "Three large British steamships have been chartered to load grain at this port for Genoa, Italy. The vessels are the Northam Thistard and the Margamabbry. Each is to take on 40,000 quarters 10 per cent oats at 5s, all for October loading on berth terms. The combined cargoes of these vessels will amount to 1,200,000 bu."

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "There is no pressure of Manitoba or winter offers and the demand from outside sources continues good, but these were offset by expectations of liberal shipments this week and the decline in Winnipeg. Country offerings both here and in France continue liberal."

What little wheat is being put in at Minneapolis in the way of hedging sales is grabbed up quickly by millers. Pillsbury and other large flour concerns are the best buyers.

Minneapolis wheat stocks increased 175,000 bu for one day. Total, 10,000,000 bu; last year, 13,296,000 bu. Flour shipments, 64,881 brls.

Leonard A. Brosseau and William S. Dugan made application for memberships on the board of trade.

Duluth stocks of wheat increased 591,000 bu for week.

Hog prices made further recovery of 5@10c, topping at $8.45, and the market closed steady, although a weaker feeling developed after the most desirable offerings were cleared. Fresh receipts were posted at only 5,000 head, and the quality was mediocre. Bulk of sales ranged from $7.35 to $8.30. All the packers were in the market for a limited number of hogs, while shippers bought 1,500 head.

Final quotations on hogs were 40@50c lower than a week ago and on pigs 50@75c lower. The general average price for the entire week's receipts was placed at $7.90, the lowest of the year to date, and compared with $8.35 last week. Receipts for the week approximated 108,000 head, against actual arrivals of 88,692 last week and 146,050 head a year ago. Shipments for six days were 22,156, against 24,010 last week and 34,062 a year ago.

CATTLE.

Beef cattle values at Chicago this week touched new low levels for the month and closed 15@25c lower than a week ago for all steers lacking in prime quality. Receipts for the period were moderate and showed a decrease from the preceding week's volume. This brought about a slight rally at the beginning of the week, but the upward tendency of prices shown at that time resulted in the curtailment of purchases and late trade requirements were scarcely equal to the supply of stock on sale. The close found the market in a depressed condition with values 25@40c lower than at the opening and the trade in low spirits. Range cattle receipts for the week showed a decrease of 4,500 head. They met with better favor from packers than the native cattle and finished the week at an advance of 15@25c. Native cows and heifers closed unchanged to 10@15c higher for the better grades, while veal calves advanced 50c. Stock and feeding steers closed steady to 10c higher than a week ago.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 197,100, against 198,400 the preceding week, 139,900 a year ago, and 237,100 two years ago. Total for 1914 to date, 4,892,000, against 5,043,000 the same period in 1913.

SHEEP.

With a more aggressive demand from packers and country buyers, the sheep and lamb market this week displayed strength and closed on a firm basis at a net advance of 10@25c for the general run. Fat and thin offerings were as promptly taken up by buyers, the breadth of the country demand for feeders being a feature of the trade. Fat lambs topped at $7.85, with the bulk at $7.25@7.75, while feeders sold up to $7.25, with few of desirable quality at less than $7.00. Fat wethers topped at $5.90 and yearlings reached $6.50. Receipts for the week showed a decrease of more than 26,000 head, and the expectancy is for continued moderation in the movement of supplies marketward. At the same time, the consumptive demand for mutton is expected to show improvement, and strong values are looked for the coming week.

BANKS APPROACH NORMAL STATUS

Conditions in New York Improving Rapidly; Cash Reserves Increased.

MONEY RATES EASIER.

Last week's statement by the New York banks shows that conditions are rapidly coming back to normal. The deficit in cash reserves was reduced by over $10,000,000 and now totals $7,791,000. This compares with a surplus last year of $6,733,000 and a surplus two years ago of $4,666,000. The deficit in reserves shortly after the declaration of war reached alarming proportions—$47,992,000 on Aug. 15—but the present deficit is small.

Further large decreases in loans and deposits during the last week was shown by the New York bank statement. The former decreased over $28,000,000 and the latter over $31,000,000. Cash increased $3,691,000.

Surplus last year, $6,733,000, against $4,665,000 two years ago.

Emergency Fund Issue.

The total amount of so-called emergency currency applied for and taken out by the New York banks reached a total on Sept. 29 of $140,798,200.

As collateral for this circulation the banks have deposited commercial paper, railroad and industrial bonds and state and municipal securities, the market value of which totals $183,500,000.

It appears that commercial paper has formed the largest part of the basis of the new bank note issue. Railroad bonds and notes follow and this item indicates the large proportion of railroad securities held by the banks of the country. Public utilities are next to the bottom of the list.

The Aldrich-Vreeland law provides that currency may be issued to an amount not exceeding 75 per cent of the cash value of the commercial paper deposited and to an amount not exceeding 90 per cent of the market value for state, city, town, county or municipal bonds.

According to one calculation the amount of commercial paper available for emergency currency has been practically exhausted. No national bank is authorized to issue circulating notes based on commercial paper to an amount of 30 per cent of its unimpaired capital and surplus. The report of the controller of the currency places the aggregate capital stock of the thirty-three national banks in New York City at $112,600,000 and the surplus fund at $120,000,000, making a total of $232,600,000.

Clearings Decrease Heavily.

Clearings for the week of the local banks showed a marked falling off as compared with the corresponding week last year. The decrease was $37,111,600, or about 5¾ per cent. Details for the week ended Oct. 10 were:

	Clearings.	Balances.

Money and Exchange.

Money in Chicago is unchanged at 7 per cent on commercial paper, 7 per cent on collateral, and 7 per cent over the counter.

Easier Money in Boston.

Boston's money market is distinctly easier. Banks are more willing to loan both for call and time. New call money has loaned at 6 per cent and highest grade commercial paper has sold as low as 6½ per cent, although the ruling rate is 7 per cent.

Effect of Antwerp's Fall.

The following was cabled from London: "The Central News says the announcement of the fall of Antwerp disturbed the undertone of home railway shares and Russian issues. Armament and oil securities were firm. Irregularity prevailed in rubber shares, the staple being reactionary in spite of good buying by America and Russia. The attendance in the street was smaller and business was not active.

"Rates for loans and bills were easy but unchanged. United States bills are increasing in supply. Treasury bills to the amount of £15,000,000 were paid for today. The Bank of England discounted pre-moratorium bills lightly. The banks are allowing 3 per cent money at notice and discount houses 3 per cent money at notice and 3½ per cent call.

"Warehousemen and retailers are organizing a big protest against a boycott of German goods purchased before the war. The lack of sale for such goods threatens to bankrupt some concerns. The government is expected to issue special stamps to cover the sale of these goods.

"The shares of the British South Africa company were not influenced by the government's decision to renew the company's charter for ten years subject to an agreement by Rhodesia."

Armor Plate Sales Large.

Some of the loss in structural steel and rail tonnage reported by the Bethlehem Steel corporation is being offset by large orders from European nations now at war and from the United States government. The company may add close to $10,000,000 to its gross business because of its being the lowest bidder on 22,120 tons armor plate for the United States battleships. Its business with European belligerents is large.

Wire Products to Europe.

Over 25,000 tons of wire products have been sold to foreign countries by Pittsburgh mills within the last few weeks. Orders have come from a half dozen nations and were mainly in small lots, but are expected to make mill schedules in the wire and nail plants in the district 80 per cent active by Oct. 15, as compared with 75 per cent active at present.

One of the largest orders, presumably for the French government, but placed through outside parties, called for 100,000 spools of barbed wire worth over $300,000 and for immediate shipment. Horse shoes and horse shoe nails have been quite active.

Fear for Plant's Safety.

No advices had been received yesterday regarding the safety of the Western Electric plant in Antwerp. If this has escaped it means that all the foreign plants have thus far escaped damage. The Antwerp factory had over 600 men employed, according to the latest cables. The Paris factory is running at 50 per cent of capacity. The Berlin plant is employing about 1,400 men, or 75 per cent of normal. Milan is operating at capacity. The English company at nearly normal capacity, and Budapest at about 80 per cent.

Uruguay's Wool Clip.

Uruguay is attempting to sell its wool clip, valued at $25,000,000, in the United States, and will spend about $10,000,000 in return, according to Consul General Richling for Uruguay. Europe took $20,000,000 worth and United States only $2,000,000 from last year.

Southern Railway Scrip Dividend.

Directors of the Southern railway company declared yesterday a semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent on the preferred stock, payable in five years' scrip bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent. The last semi-annual dividend payment was 2½ per cent in cash. Action on the current dividend was deferred several weeks ago. Directors issued a statement that the dividend had been earned, but in their judgment it was a wise thing to defer it at this time.

May Discontinue Through Rates.

Officials of transcontinental railroads threatened yesterday to discontinue all coast to coast rates and to force shippers to pay freight rates which would be totals of intermediate tariffs if the interstate commerce commission refused to suspend the long and short haul clause of the present federal commerce law.

Rock Island Tonnage.

Freight operations last week indicated a lighter volume of business being handled over the Rock Island lines by 4 per cent, as compared with a year ago, according to an official of the company. "We are experiencing a large movement in grain, flour, and mill products," he said, "and coal is of fair volume. Miscellaneous business is generally good, but merchandise is running light. Conditions of traffic, therefore, are steady."

Diamond Match Dividend.

The Diamond Match company declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent, payable Dec. 15 to stock of record Nov. 30.

Austrian Sugar Offered.

It was reported at Seabright that 12,000 tons of Austrian sugar have been offered in this country at a cost of 4.75 cents per pound, duty paid, without including the cost of war risk insurance.

Export Refined Oil Price Reduced.

The Standard Oil company of New York has cut the price of refined oil for export 15 points.

Monongahela Water Co.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Monongahela Water company will be held on Oct. 26 to authorize and ratify the sale or other disposition of part or all of the assets and property of the company and the distribution of the proceeds among the stockholders.

The United States Steel corporation reports unfilled orders as of Sept. 30 last of 3,787,667 tons, against 4,213,331 on Aug. 31 last, a decrease of 425,664 tons.

Financial News Notes.

Ferromanganese has been reduced to $95 per ton from $99 at Baltimore as the result of a light demand. Recent fears regarding the supply have disappeared.

Bordeaux cabled that French 3 per cent rentes advanced yesterday to 73 francs.

Copper quotations in London are equivalent to about 11½c per lb for electrolytic.

Receivership of S. H. P. Pell & Co. has been extended to carry on the business of the firm for thirty days.

EUROPE TO PRESS DEBTS. EXCHANGE RISE INDICATES.

Exports Grow Rapidly, but New Outlay in Enterprise Is at a Standstill, New York Reports.

New York, Oct. 10.—The burden of the country's present foreign indebtedness was indicated by the week's advance in exchange rates in the face of supplies furnished by the $100,000,000 gold pool. Large maturities of ninety day bills put out in July when money was easy in London were a factor. Cotton exports expanded materially and grain exports continued heavy. Imports at New York also seem to be well maintained.

Action of the exchange market indicates plainly that foreign creditors will press for immediate payment of all available maturities, which will be heavy for months to come. An open market will be judged unfeasible as long as this condition persists. The difficulty must grow while war continues. New outlay in enterprise is at a standstill.

United States Steel's September decrease of 425,000 tons in unfilled tonnage finds sequence in further contraction in October orders and in cancellations. Copper is pressed for sale at the lowest price in almost thirteen years. On the other hand demand for grains is unappeased and the government's increase in its corn crop estimate did not interrupt the advance in price.

September anthracite tonnage made a record. The condition of railroad properties would suffer, it is said, from long continuance of current economies and an advance in freight rates at the coming hearing by the interstate commerce commission is relied on for relief.

Domestic money conditions are distinctly improved. Rates have relaxed and interior banks lend more freely and are buying some bonds and notes.

Local monetary conditions also continue towards betterment with a steady reduction in the cash reserve deficit. This week's bank statement showed a cash gain much below general estimates, but another large loan contraction reduced that item by over $60,000,000 in the last fortnight.

Latest developments from Europe exercised a depressing influence on the London market, particularly in Russian issues. At this center the news had the effect of creating greater firmness in exchange on Berlin.

PROFIT IN BUYING COTTON

If twenty dollar gold pieces were selling for ten or twelve dollars you would be an eager buyer. It is the same thing with cotton, ordinarily worth $65.00 to $70.00 a bale, being offered at $40.00 to $45.00 a bale. A bale of cotton properly warehoused and insured is as good as money in the bank and right now it will bring you a huge profit.

MAKE FROM 50% TO 80% ON THE INVESTMENT

Jay Gould made a fortune buying American currency abroad at low prices during the Civil War and bringing it to this country after the war. You have YOUR OPPORTUNITY now in cotton. Invest a few dollars in one bale or more, properly warehoused and insured, and double your money in a short while. Records show the average price for middling cotton has been 12.9 cents per pound for years, and now you can buy it around 8 cents a pound. Can be kept any length of time without deterioration.

WE ATTEND TO DETAILS This requires quick action—for the market may go up now any time when foreign shipments begin moving. Orders from one bale up promptly warehoused, insured and receipt forwarded to purchaser. Wire or write how much you can invest and we will advise you immediately present market price and all details.

WITH the passing of each week matters in a financial and general business way are undoubtedly drawing nearer that adjustment which will approximate finally as nearly normal conditions as is possible with all Europe and parts of the orient convulsed with war, but so slow is the progress made from week to week that it is barely perceptible. Quite naturally the pessimist can see no trace even of a silver lining to the cloud which obscures the future like a dark and impenetrable wall.

Even the optimist will have to admit the prospect is not of a particularly cheerful character, so far as the immediate future is concerned, but he is cheered by the knowledge that a final adjustment is inevitable in the very nature of things, and that this adjustment will be hastened greatly if people will only realize this fact. The trouble is that too many peope do not differentiate property conditions in this country and war-swept Europe, as though this country was in some way fated to endure almost the same economic disasters as the warring nations, or at least in a large degree.

This possibly may be stating it a little too strongly, but there are undoubtedly too many people who are disposed to think that because of the cataclysm abroad this country for years to come is fated to wallow in the slough of hopeless depression and business disaster. It is a preposterous and altogether reprehensible viewpoint. What is wanted is a saner viewpoint, a better understanding of the real economic strength and immeasurable advantages which this country enjoys in the present crisis. In other words, a little more confidence in this country and its people, particularly on the part of the large moneyed interests, banking and otherwise, is needed.

These ideas were advanced by a leading real estate man last week in discussing present conditions and the future outlook, a man who has been signally successful in his business and who, withal, is a close student of economic conditions.

He dwelt particularly on the disturbed condition of the money market, which, as he said, is paralyzing the business activities of the country, and while not unmindful of the difficulties with which the banking interests have to contend, was disposed to criticise what he termed their unnecessarily conservative attitude, to which he ascribed much of the hesitating and halting tendency in all lines of business.

He declared that the persistency with which they discouraged all investment propositions, whether in business or security way, was doing much to inspire distrust both among business men, as well as those with money to invest, and he expressed the opinion this course was not warranted by the condition of the banks, which, he declared, occupied unusually strong positions. He said it was a mistaken policy, and that a little more optimism and liberality on their part would be reflected in an immediate improvement in and broadening of business.

Complaint is made by other real estate men that the attitude of the banks is seriously cutting into their sales, one prominent north side dealer saying that several investment deals in improved income property which promised to go through fell down at the last moment because the prospective purchasers had been advised by their bankers not to make the purchases at the present time.

It is possible that much of this criticism of the banks is unwarranted, and in their behalf it is insisted that no effort is being or has been made to discourage attractive investment propositions, and that their customers are being granted such accommodations as the present situation warrants. And the opinion is expressed that a material improvement is promised in the comparatively near future. This sentiment was expressed in an interview by Mr. Forgan in the early part of the week.

As regards the mortgage loan market, there is little improvement to be noted during the week. Practically no large loans are being made, despite the attractive interest rates offered. The insurance companies, from whom the bulk of the big loans come, are practically out of the market, as their surplus funds are being absorbed by their policyholders because of their inability to secure the necessary accommodations from the banks. There is a general disposition, however, to extend maturing loans, as it is realized that it is impossible for borrowers at the present time to make other arrangements for paying the same. It is difficult to quote interest rates for the reason no loans are being made to speak of, but it probably is not wide of the mark to say that 5½ per cent comes near representing the minimum.

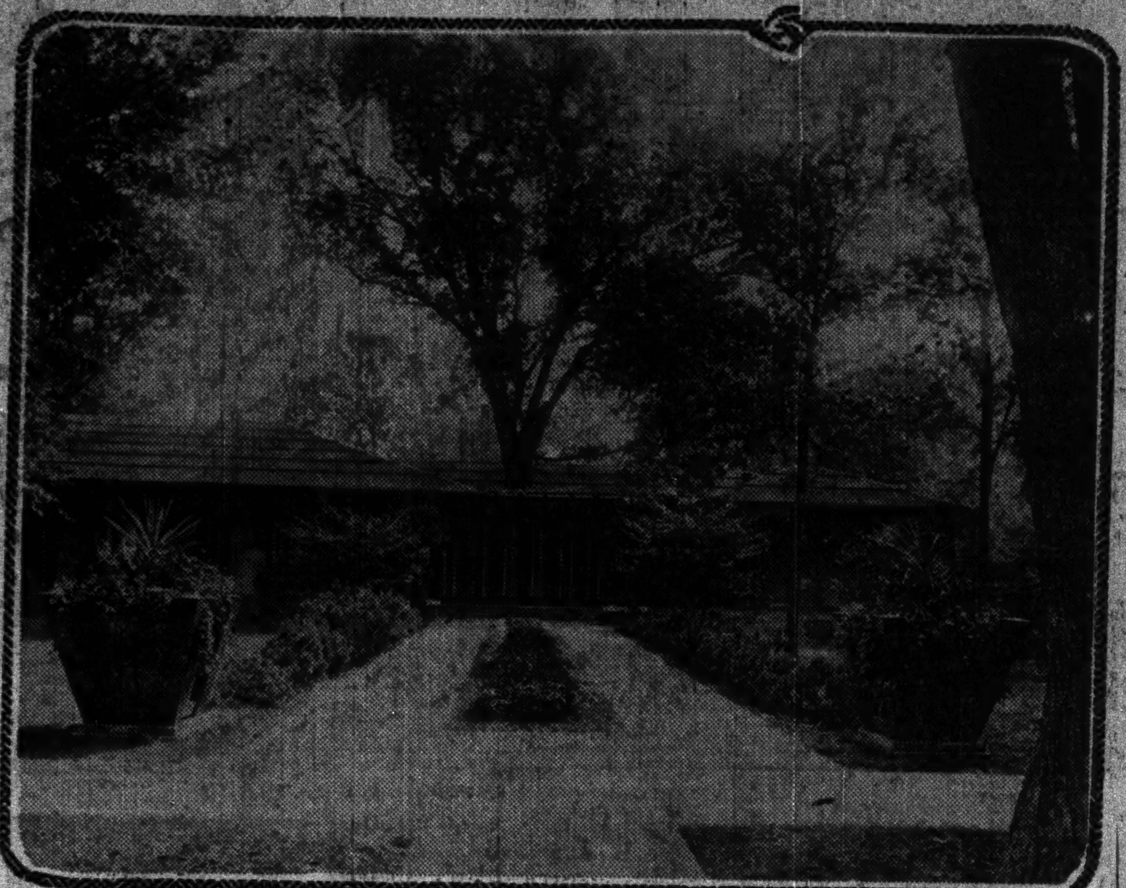
As was the case during the previous week, there is an abundance of money for small loans where the security is of a high character, with a practically established rate of 6 per cent. This permits of small building, of which there is much going on, as evidenced by the number of permits issued by the city building department.

Under these unfavorable conditions the real estate market continues to make a surprisingly good showing. The sound basic conditions which obtain are attracting many would-be investors, but the difficulty is they are all looking for bargains, that is, at sacrifice prices, of which there is little being offered. It is convincing evidence of the general confidence in the stability of Chicago dirt, even under general adverse conditions.

Kenilworth's Remodeled Assembly Hall.



The Assembly hall at Kenilworth has been enlarged and presents one of the most unique and practically arranged community buildings in this country. The plan is divided into three units, consisting of an assembly hall with a complete stage at one end, a large entry, and a library. These units can be opened into one spacious room for large entertainments and dancing purposes, 160 feet in length. The hall is fully equipped for moving pictures, with a fireproof stereopticon booth arranged on the exterior to present an artistic feature outside the hall. A modern kitchen and convenient dressing rooms also are provided.

This building is arranged to accommodate all the public needs of the village. The library is used by the Neighbors, a woman's organization in Kenilworth. It is also the village trustees' meeting place. The hall, which was designed by George W. Maher, was erected five years ago and has been enlarged to meet the demands made upon it by the growth of Kenilworth and the north shore.

OGDEN AVENUE.—Two long term leases on the southwest side were filed for record, the most notable being that upon the property at the southwest corner of Ogden and Kedzie avenues, leased by Joseph B. Tarbell from Charles Lichtenberger. The lease is for ninety-nine years from Jan. 1, 1914, and provides for an annual rental of $1,500 for the first ten years, $1,800 for the succeeding ten years, and $2,000 for the remainder of the term, seventy-nine years.

The property has a northwest frontage of seventy-seven feet and a depth of 138 feet on the east and 127 feet on the west. Capitalizing the average annual rental—$1,929—on a 5 per cent basis the property is given a leasing value of $38,580, which is equivalent to $501 a front foot for Ogden avenue. The lease provided for a new building to cost at least $15,000.

SOUTH SALES.

LAKE PARK AVENUE.—The apartment property on Lake Park avenue, opposite Forty-ninth street, extended, with a ground area of 90x213 feet, west front, has been bought by M. G. Kibbe from Henry T. Byford for a stated consideration of $70,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000.

FIFTIETH STREET.—The apartment house property at the southeast corner of Fiftieth street and Forrestville avenue, with 50.7x135.7 feet of ground, has been conveyed by John Black to William Colwell for a stated consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000.

LANGLEY AVENUE.—The apartment house property on Langley avenue, 90 feet north of East Forty-ninth street, with 100x119 feet of ground, west front, has been sold by Caroline S. Foote to Morton Kellnery, a nominal consideration being given in the transfer, which is made subject to an incumbrance of $23,000.

OAKWOOD BOULEVARD. — Another transaction in the same neighborhood made a matter of record was the sale by Samuel Davidson to Ella Meyer of the property on Oakwood boulevard, 275 feet west of Cottage Grove avenue, lot 40x176 feet, north front, with apartment house improvements, the consideration being of a nominal character, subject to an incumbrance of $42,000.

UNION AVENUE.—The property on Union avenue, 200 feet north of Seventy-sixth street, lot 80x120½ feet, east front, with improvements, has been sold by Alfred J. Paule to Frederic C. Moffat for an expressed consideration of $12,000, subject to an incumbrance of $4,500. The property had just previously been acquired by Paule from Henry J. Kistner, the consideration also being nominal.

DREXEL AVENUE.—Jasper T. Bright and Robert W. Morris have sold to Mrs. Lizzie McCurdy the property at 5519-25 Drexel avenue, lot 96x130 feet, improved with two three story six flat buildings, for a reported consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000, the sellers taking in part payment the six flat building at 4853-55 Langley avenue and the two story two flat building at 4939 Champlain avenue. Draper & Kramer represented the sellers and Larned & Blair represented Mrs. McCurdy.

EDEN AVENUE.—The property at the northeast corner of Eden avenue, formerly Aldine avenue, and Thirty-ninth street, 77x101 feet, has been leased by Grant Carpenter & Co. for the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustees for the Chicago Society of the New Jerusalem, to Burt J. Fitzgerald, for a term of 198 years. The property has one story brick store improvements and the lease provides for an annual rent of $900 for the first ten years and $1,000 for the remainder of the term. Mr. Fitzgerald, it is stated, will make extensive alterations.

TWO MOVIE HOUSES SOLD.

May Amusement Co. Gets the Drexel and Kenwood Theaters on the South Side on Long Leases.

There has been a change in the management of two large south side moving picture theaters, the Kenwood, on East Forty-seventh street, just west of Kimbark avenue, and the Drexel at 858 East Sixty-third street. The leases on both having nine and ten years to run respectively were purchased.

The May Amusement company, proprietors of Admiral and Angelus theaters, both south side, purchased from Northmann Bros. & Fischer the lease of the Kenwood for which an annual rent of $6,500 is paid. It has a seating capacity of 1,000 and it is the purpose of the new owners to exhibit only the largest film productions. The deal was negotiated by Hume & Co., who make a specialty of this class of business.

The lease of the Drexel theater also was sold by the same brokers to A. Karzas, proprietor of several theaters. An annual rent of $8,000 is paid.

BIG WEST SIDE DEAL IN REALTY SPUR TO TRADERS

More than $500,000 Involved in Sale of Western Avenue Property.

SOUTH SIDE BOOMING

Of much significance at this time of halting enterprise and timid capital was the big west side deal closed in the week involving proposed improvements to cost in excess of $500,000, and which, with the land, will represent a total investment of over $655,000. Nothing could indicate more clearly the revival of confidence as to the future, and it promises to prove a most potent factor in hastening the improvements of local market conditions.

The property involved comprises the entire block bounded by Western avenue, Fifteenth street, Fifteenth place, and the right of way of the Chicago Junction Railway company, comprising about 135,000 square feet, or about three and a half acres, and the sale is said to have been at the rate of $1.15 a square foot, or a total of $155,250.

Actual Purchaser Not Known.

The property was purchased from Frank Sturges of the Sturges & Burn Manufacturing company, title being taken by S. B. Mills & Co., who negotiated the deal. It is announced that Mills & Co. will in a short time transfer to the actual purchaser, whose name is for the present withheld.

The building, the plans for which have been finished, it is stated, will be five stories high, will cover the entire plot, and will cost, as before stated, over $500,000. It also is announced it has been leased to the Midland Warehouse company for a long term of years, and that several large concerns have arranged for space. The present location of the Midland warehouse in this district is just across Fifteenth place to the south, and the proposed new building will allow the Midland company to take care of the recent demands for space made upon it.

Frederick C. Hack of Winston, Payne Strawn & Shaw, attended to the legal details for the purchasers, and Almon W. Bulkley of Bulkley, Gray & More represented Mr. Sturges.

Big Deal on South Side.

Several deals of notable importance were also closed in outlying south side property, comprising flat, business, and vacant property, the latter to be improved.

One of these involved the property at the northeast corner of Seventy-fifth street and South Chicago avenue, which was sold by George Neeb to Frank McWhorter for a reported consideration of $100,000. The property is triangular in shape, with a frontage of 150 feet on South Chicago avenue and 201 feet on Woodlawn avenue, the apex of the triangle being on Seventy-fifth street.

The lot is improved with a two story building containing stores on the ground floor and a hotel and flats on the upper floors. It is stated that Mr. McWhorter will conduct a saloon on the property and will lease the hotel and the other stores in the building. The sale was negotiated by William F. King.

Apartment Houses in Trades.

James E. MacMurray, president of the Acme Manufacturing company, appeared as the purchaser in two large apartment house sales closed late in the week. He purchased from M. C. Hurter the high grade semi-fireproof eighteen apartment building with 176x70 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Oakwood boulevard and Vincennes avenue. The consideration is withheld, but it is understood to have been about $100,000. The building is stated to have had a gross annual rent of about $11,000.

Mr. MacMurray also purchased the eighteen apartment building at the southwest corner of Lotus avenue and Fulton street, lot 60x177¼ feet, consideration nominal, subject to $37,500, but said to be about $75,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of $10,000. Mr. MacMurray gave in part payment an improved farm of 687 acres in Newton county, Ind. W. K. Young & Bro. represented both parties.

Standard Oil Gets New Sight.

The Standard Oil company is to have a new oil station at Evanston on property which it purchased during the week from the M. Foley company along the Mayfair branch of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad company just south of Emerson street. The tract comprises about 32,000 square feet and a nominal consideration is named in the transfer.

Leases and Loans.

IT is gratifying to note that some of the banks are pursuing a comparatively liberal policy in connection with construction or building loans. As a whole the banks have been criticised sharply in some quarters because of their alleged conservatism in this field, and at a recent meeting of the Material Men's association they were scored severely because of this, the charge also being made they were exacting 7 per cent interest on these loans.

According, however, to C. S. Tuttle, manager of the real estate loan department of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, that bank has made since the 1st of August construction loans aggregating more than $500,000 and representing construction work of about three-quarters of a million. In none of these loans has more than 6 per cent interest been charged, it is stated, and the rates of commission have ranged practically the same as at ordinary times.

Several large loans were filed for record during the week.

The Central Trust Company of Illinois is trustee in a loan of $100,000. It is to the Hammond Brewery company, runs nine years, and bears 7 per cent interest, and is secured by the property of the company.

The Central Trust company also is trustee in a loan of $67,500 to Fridolph B. Ogren. It is for six years, bears 6 per cent, and is secured by the property at the northwest corner of Eastwood and Clarendon avenues, 115.8x124 feet.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $50,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, to Jacob Paquet, secured by the property at the northeast corner of University avenue and Fifty-fourth place, 112x164 feet, with new apartment house improvements.

The same trust company is trustee in another loan of $30,000 to the Golden Pheasant company, which conducts a Chinese restaurant. The loan runs for five years and bears 6 per cent interest, and is secured by the leasehold estate in the second, third, and fourth floors of the building and furnishings at 70 to 76 West Madison street, at the northeast corner of Clark street.

S. W. Straus is trustee in another loan of $45,000, running six years, at 6 per cent, to Arthur Chester, on the flat property in East Sixty-seventh street, 274 feet east of Dorchester avenue, with 153x134 feet of ground, south front.

The sale of lots in Southlawn Highlands is reported by E. B. Shogren & Co. to have so far exceeded the expectations of the owners as to make necessary the opening of four additional blocks, which will be offered for the first time today. The firm did not intend to place this part of the subdivision on the market before next spring, but the demand has been so good that it has been decided to open the remaining part of the tract at once.

Hipple & Clarke report the following among other recent sales: Residence at 1536 West Adams street for $9,500, and 12 East Walton place, four apartment building, for $12,500, to Carrie Stamets and Laura J. Parsons.

The Yale & Towne Manufacturing company, makers of Yale locks and products, have leased from Louise C. Walker the store, basement, and second floor of the building at 77-79 East Lake street for a term of years from Jan. 1, 1915, at an aggregate rental of $74,400. The premises are to be entirely remodeled and are to be occupied by the lessee company with its offices, warehouse rooms, and an elaborate sample room. The removal of this firm to this location emphasises the growing tendency of the lock and hardware industries to locate in East Lake street. P. K. Stockwell & Co. were the brokers.

BROADENS SCOPE OF WORK.

Southwest Property Owners' Association Takes In More Territory for Improvement.

At a meeting of the Southwest Property Owners' association Friday it was decided unanimously to broaden the scope of the association and take in the property south, as well as north, of the drainage canal. This was done at the request of a large number of property owners south of the drainage canal. Efforts will be made immediately to secure bridges across the canal on the section line streets one mile apart, west of Kedzie avenue, there being a stretch here of five and one-half miles without any means of crossing except by boat.

The association will advocate the immediate construction of a car line on Thirty-ninth street, running west from Fortieth, and other improvements.

LAKE GENEVA HOME

I have just acquired in a trade, a high class summer and winter home on Lake Geneva. The property consists of nine acres of ground, fronting over 300 feet on the lake in the most exclusive section. There is a large 14 room house, completely furnished, hot water heat, independent water and sewage system, electricity, telephone service; also garage, stables, gardener's cottage. The grounds are beautifully laid out with hedges, shrubbery, plants and trees. House is so located as to afford a magnificent view of the lake and surrounding country. In every particular this is distinctly a gentleman's home and will be sacrificed for an early sale. Full information with all details, pictures, views, price, terms, etc., may be had on application to owner.

BUTTER USERS SCALE VICTIMS

Losers by $8,000,000 Yearly Through Cheating Merchants, Physicist Says.

MANY FRAUD METHODS.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Nearly half the grocers and butchers' scales in the large cities of the United States shortweight customers ranging from 8 to 12 per cent. American consumers lose more than $8,000,000 on shortweight butter in print form.

These were the startling statements made tonight by Louis A. Fischer, physicist of the federal bureau of standards, on the eve of his departure for New York to attend the convention of state and city weights and measures commissioners next week.

Heavy Butter Loss to Consumers.

"Approximately 770,000,000 pounds of butter in print form are sold in the United States yearly," Mr. Fischer said. "Of course, this does not represent all the butter sold in this country, for a great deal is handled in bulk.

"Yet there is no section of the country where the print variety is not used extensively; in fact, from 25 to 50 per cent of the butter used in the eastern states is handled in this form. As our investigation showed, nearly 3.25 per cent is the average shortage in weight in print butter.

"If we take 33 cents a pound as the average price of butter, it will readily be seen that the loss to the consumer is about 25,000,000 pounds a year, or $8,250,000. Our investigation has shown that this shortage is not the result of accident, but of deliberate fraud.

Many Methods to Defraud.

"Many interesting and cleverly devised methods of thus defrauding the public were discovered by our agents. Dexterity in handling the apparatus and the unsuspecting attitude of the buyer aided the unscrupulous merchant to escape detection and charge the housewife for weight which she did not get.

"The specimens of false measures found included those having movable or false bottoms; measures having false interiors, such as were found in milk cans and measures for selling gasoline; measures having small diameters and high sides, frequently called "bottomless" measures; measures which have been altered by taking out a stave and readjusting the bottom.

"Many types of scales were found which had been manufactured purposely to deceive and defraud the buyer by a skilled manipulation of a concealed device."

SAYS AUTO TAX WAS PAID.

State Factory Inspector Asserts Machine Reported by Efficiency Bureau Is Owned by State.

State Factory Inspector Oscar F. Nelson asserted yesterday that he was in Washington at the time his automobile is alleged to have been found in the loop by investigators of the efficiency bureau of the civil service commission without a city wheel tax tag on it.

"I can't understand why my name should be listed among wheel tax delinquents," he said. "The state owns the automobile I use and looks after the licenses. City wheel tax license number 20062 was obtained by the state on Oct. 2.

"The machine was not supposed to be on the streets at the time it is alleged to have been found."

The New Peerless "All-Purpose" Car Is Here

Peerless Quality and the latest European Specifications for

$2,000

Why This "All-Purpose" Car Duplicates 39 of the Leading Makes of Europe

Made in Fours and Sixes
Sixes $250 Extra

In Europe as in America, automobiles now do over twenty-five days of utility work in city and suburban streets for every day spent in touring.

Therefore, all Europe has turned to this light, short wheel-base car—the type adopted by thirty-nine of the leading automobile manufacturers of Europe—and now introduced in America by the Peerless Company.

This car turns completely around without backing in a city street—yet is as easy riding as the longest wheel-base cars. The saving in weight, tire and fuel expense is remarkable.

In Europe, and now in America, this type of car is expected to average over three hundred miles on an ordinary sized tank of gasoline, as the car weighs from one to two thousand pounds less than older style long wheel-base cars of similar price.

The Peerless "All-Purpose" Car is designed to interest experienced buyers familiar with and desiring all the improvements and comforts of a $5,000 car for $2,000. It is not a $1,400 car built to supplant a $1,600 car.

Come and see $5,000 comfort for $2,000!

Note These Unusual Features

Remarkable System of Spring Suspension on Chassis produces an ease of riding heretofore found only in the longest and heaviest cars made.

$5,000 Equipment!—such as tire pumps, mohair top with cover, two-unit lighting and starting system, ammeter, dash light, speedometer, rear gasoline tank and tires, one-man top, divided front seats, full-carpeted floor, all regular Peerless quality.

Style and Beauty Obtainable Only in Aluminum Bodies—as used in the Peerless "48-Six" and all other makes of $5,000 cars. The first car of its price in which this material is used.

Spiral Bevel Rear Axle Gear—the same as used heretofore only in the highest priced cars sold in America, identical in design with the 1915 Peerless "48-Six."

Divided Front Seat—with full-carpeted floor from dash to rear seat, improving ventilation of front compartment, gives more room for driver's right arm, promotes sociability and convenience.

Extra Large Wide-Opening Doors—Three-Abreast Rear Seat—and many other comfort features found heretofore only in $5,000 cars—Actually duplicating in comfort the Peerless "48-Six."

MAROONS BEAT PURPLE TEAM BY 28-0 SCORE

Losers Make Hard Fight But Fail in Efforts to Count.

STAGG'S LINE STRONG

BY RING W. LARDNER.

It is a pleasure to announce that they're building a roof over the press stand at Stagg field.

It is also a pleasure to announce that Northwestern has a fighting football team. This fighting football team was licked 28 to 0 yesterday at Stagg field, where they're building a roof over the press stand. But if the team keeps on fighting it won't be licked very often during the balance of the fall. Nor need it feel disgruntled at losing to the Maroons, most of whom are far more experienced football players than the wearers of the deep purple.

Although there are only six points difference between the scores made by Chicago against Indiana and Northwestern, the latter appears to be twice as classy and four times as determined as the Hoosiers. Even when there was no chance on earth for the Purple to catch up, it kept trying. Its athletes would have been happy if they could have scored, and so strenuously did they work to this end that even the Midway was sorry their efforts were unavailing.

Hightower Near Score.

Capt. Hightower, who is a bit better than his fellows, had a chance in the second period to count three points for his side. He had, a few moments previously, caught a Maroon forward pass and followed it with a run, variously estimated at twenty-five, thirty, and thirty-five yards. Whatever the length of the run, it brought the ball to the vicinity of the Chicago twenty-five yard line and was a dandy run, made possible by speed and much wriggling and dodging.

Three Purple rushes failed to net first down and Hightower tried a drop kick. It missed its target and Northwestern's best opportunity was gone. We, for one, would have been glad to see it register. The Northwestern captain deserved something for his great battle against odds.

"Northwestern fights" was the legend of a pennant which hung in front of the Purple rooters' section. There isn't any doubt that the pennant was telling the truth and, as we said before, if Northwestern continues to fight it will get results.

Poor Start for Purple.

However, Northwestern wasn't quite ready to fight when the game began and seemed to be only semi-conscious during the first period. Taking advantage of this, the Maroons scored two touchdowns right off the reel, to use a colloquialism. The first seven points were marked up less than three minutes after the first kick-off, causing human beings in the stands to turn up their noses and say, one to another, "Good heavens!"

Following kick-off No. 2, Chicago again swooped down the field toward the more or less coveted goal line, but was stopped two yards out. Patterson, the Purple kicksman, attempted to kick out of danger from behind the line. The attempt wasn't what might be termed a howling success. Gray caught the ball on the thirteen yard mark and three jiffies later the Maroons had doubled their score.

Then Northwestern came to and began to fight, as already recorded. At times in the next three periods the north shore gang played Stagg's pets to a standstill. The Maroons had to work for the rest of their scores and probably got the best practice they have had this year.

Maroons Show Improvement.

As for the Midwayites, as they are sometimes called, they looked much better than against Indiana. They worked better with each other and there were half backs besides D. Gray to carry the ball, including Schafer, H. Coutchie, and Louis Berger, the little Irishman, who helped Wisconsin win the conference title in 1912. Berger was wearing the Maroon varsity uniform for the first time and it fit him. He didn't get away for the sort of runs that has, or have, become a habit with Russell and Gray, but he crashed off the tackles with good results and appeared as hard to down as a good half back should be.

Both Flood and Acker, alternating full backs, showed improvement. So did the entire Chicago line, which blocked and broke through more effectively than against Indiana, and also protected Russell better on his passes and kicks. It may be stated here that Pat O'Dea's punting records will never be threatened by Mr. Russell.

Des Jardien in Game.

Before too much of the lead is written, something should be said about "Shorty" Des Jardien, who is 1914 captain of the Maroons, and who participated for six or seven minutes. Des Jardien was out of the Indiana game and most of yesterday's with an injured hip or knee or something. Growing envious of John Albert, the noble captain horned in during the closing period, and when he had hurled his long carcass against the Purple line a few times the Northwesterners were heard to remark that his hip or knee or something couldn't have been as sick as reported.

Still, in justice to John Albert, it is necessary to state that when he was supplanted the Maroons were well on their way to a fifth touchdown. Shortly after Albert's enforced removal, they lost the ball. If Albert has a mean disposition

HARVARD WINS BY SINGLE POINT

Just Noses Out Washington and Jefferson in 10-9 Gridiron Game.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Not until late in the game was Harvard's crippled eleven able to penetrate Washington and Jefferson's line and succeed in nosing out its rivals by one point, the final score being Harvard, 10; Washington and Jefferson, 9.

Harvard was severely handicapped by the absence of Capt. Brickley, who will probably be out of the game for the rest of the year. Brickley was operated on for appendicitis today. With Mahan and Logan out with injuries, the Crimson attack was badly crippled.

Washington and Jefferson fairly amazed Harvard by its wonderful passes, its first score in the second period resulting after three successful attempts from midfield. Fleming scored the point when he caught Goodwin's throw on the goal line.

Goal from Placement.

Washington and Jefferson's other score immediately followed when Fleming kicked a pretty goal from placement from the thirty yard line.

Harvard's first score came in the first period, after Watson made a fair catch on Washington and Jefferson's thirty yard line. Hardwick Washington and Jefferson's forty yard line. A series of rushes brought the ball to Washington and Jefferson's six yard line, where Hardwick skirted the end for a touchdown. He immediately kicked the goal.

Fleming Carried Off Field.

Fleming, who was carried off the field injured, was the bright star for Washington and Jefferson. Lineup:

NOTRE DAME PLAYERS RUN AMUCK; BEAT POLY 102 TO 0.

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—In a game featured by many long runs and fierce line plunging, Notre Dame swept Rose Poly off its feet today, winning, 102 to 0. Many long runs by Finegan, Cofall, and Kelleher netted the regular 75 points in the first half. Eichenlaub and Capt. Jones made their first appearance in a game this season, their presence adding much strength to the team.

In the second half Notre Dame placed an entirely new team on the field. Bergman made his initial appearance at quarter back, and besides running the team in fine style showed great ability as an open field runner. The game was played in a rain and on a muddy field. Lineup:

OPERATE ON BRICKLEY, HARVARD GRIDIRON STAR.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 10.—Capt. Charles F. Brickley of the Harvard football team was stricken with appendicitis today and was operated on immediately. Dr. F. H. Nichols of Boston, who performed the operation, tonight said there was just a chance the crack player might be in condition to play against Yale at New Haven on Nov. 21.

SOX AND CUBS REST ON ARMS; RAIN CAUSE

Delay Helps Bears by Giving Pitchers Extra Day to Recover.

AT WEST SIDE TODAY

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Another bit of baseball luck favored the Cubs yesterday in their annual combat with the White Sox. The fourth game of the series was postponed on account of much rain and mud, thereby giving the west side pitching staff an extra day of needed rest and forcing the eager south side hurlers to remain idle. The game will be played off today at Cub park.

While Manager Callahan has pitchers to spare in the contest, the Cubs are relying on the prowess of two or three men. By being idle yesterday it makes it possible for Hank O'Day to send Big Jim Vaughn back at the Sox today after having enjoyed three full days of rest. Vaughn has shown better results all season by having three days between games, and today should be as strong as he was in the opening game Wednesday.

Called Off at Noon.

A little before noon it was decided that a game would be impossible. Umpires Eason and Quigley of the National league and O'Loughlin and Chill of the American league were at the grounds with Judge Kavanagh, who represents the national commission in the local series. At the time it was raining and the field was like a swamp from the downpour of the night before.

The officials decided it would be impossible for the athletes to perform at their best even should the sun get in a couple of hours of work on the field, so after consulting the presidents of both clubs they ruled the game was postponed and would take place at the west side today.

Delay Helps Cubs.

The ruling undoubtedly played right into the hands of the Cubs. The pitching staff, with the exception of a couple of hurlers, is not as strong as that of the Sox, who have five or six men apparently in form. Consequently the added day of rest will permit more service from the two west side stars, for it will give Jim Vaughn the extra day of rest he wanted and give another day for Humphries to recuperate from his battle of Friday.

The chances are Vaughn will be on the slab today, though Manager O'Day may decide to send Lavender or Pierce to the mound, taking chance on a victory. In that case he would have Vaughn in fine fettle for the Monday game, with a good chance of finishing the entire struggle. Callahan had both Eddie Cicotte and "Red" Faber in trim for battle yesterday, and they didn't need the extra day of rest. It is likely that one of the two will be on the mound today, and whichever one it is is likely to have a harder contest to win than he would have had yesterday.

White Sox Face Crisis.

Many of the experts predict now that the Sox must win today or they will be beaten in the series. If Vaughn is on the slab and works as well as he did on the opening day the Sox will have to summon up a lot of reserve strength to win. A victory for the Cubs today would make the third for them, with only one for the Sox, and under those conditions O'Day could take a chance on either Lavender or Pierce making it four games on Monday. If either failed he would have Humphries to shoot at the south siders for the Tuesday game.

Manager Callahan was disappointed in the postponement but declared that he still felt confident of beating the Cubs. If his men can turn the trick against Vaughn they will then be in a better position to get the title than the west siders, for a victory today would even up the series, and with it even Callahan's superior strength in the pitching department would give him a slight advantage in the extended series. The longer it lasts, the better chance the Sox have to win.

"Breaks" Favor Bears.

While the class of baseball displayed by the Sox and Cubs in the three games played has been below the customary standard, there is no doubt that the luck and "breaks" so far have favored the west siders more than Comiskey's tribe and if the same conditions continue the Cubs undoubtedly will conquer.

In the opening game the Cubs got two runs, which decided the game, when a bounding ball got in the sun and escaped for a base hit. The Sox won the second battle with little aid from any outside forces. One close decision at the home plate went their way, but the decision looked right to nearly everybody. The third game went to the Cubs because two bad breaks spoiled things for the Sox. Once a ball thrown to the plate hopped over Schalk's head, letting in the winning run for the Cubs and once a close decision at first took two runs away from the Sox.

HERE'S EXAMPLE OF WAY PLAYER PENS BALL STORY.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—The scribe who has been sentenced to write "Home Run" Baker's criticisms of the world's series described today the interview with the star player-writer out of which he had to fake a column last night. Here's the dope:

"Hello, Bake?"

"Howdy?"

"Well, what did you think of it, Bake?"

"We got licked plenty. Pretty good pitcher, that fellow. Gowdy hit the ball on the snoot. Don't knock anybody else."

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 10, 1914. Steve well Steve I got the bigest kind of a supprize for you and here it is Im going to stay here in Chi all winter and not comeing home at all like I thot & heres how it come off. I was up to the girls house after the game yest. & I says well I wont be here much longer & I says what you going to do with your self when I aint here no more & what do you think Steve she busted out crying & couldent say nothing & I says what are you crying a bout though I knowed all the wile what she was crying a bout. finely she quit blubering & says she couldent bare to think a bout me going a way & what would she do with out me & I says yes I know but I cant stay here all winter on your acct. because it costs me to much money to live here & then she says would you stay here if you had a good job & I says yes if it was good enough & she says wait a minute & what does she do but go to the phone and call her old man up down to the brewry & I couldent here what was it she said because she was in the other rm. but finely she come back & says your going to stay here all winter because I got a job for you & I says what is it & she says your going to sell bear for the old man. what do you think of that for a job eh Steve. Im going to get $25.00 & no-100 dollars per wk. & all as I will half to do is go a round to the diffrent saloons and sell them the beer that the girls old man makes & it aint no good but I dont half to drink it my self only say that I like it & drink some thing else & I will get expence money so as I can drink all I feel like & it wont cost me nothing. pretty soft eh Steve.

well Steve Im sorry on acct. of not seeing the boys at home but you see how it is & they aint no job at home where I could get $25.00 dollars per wk. or ½ that much & besides I will be here in the same town with the girl & pracialy in her family because I will be selling there beer & it works out fine all the way a round & may be if I sell a hole lot of the beer the old man will take me in to pardner ship & then I can tell Hank O'Day & the hole bunch of them to go take a jump in michigan Lake.

the little girl is tickeled to death & if shes tickeled to death why shouldent I be & I bet theys a lot of ball players including ty Cobb whod be glad to be in as good is I am & have a rich man like the girls old man so stuck on me.

Im going to work for him as soon is the city serious is over tho as far as me getting in to any of the games I might just is well go to work for him now but if I was to quit the team now they might not give me no split of the money tho I guess theyd half to do that any way & if they dident I would higher a atty. in law & make them come a crost. But I feel sorry for this here bues & Fisher & mcConnell & them fellows that was promussed a split of the money & garry Herrmann told pres. Thos. that all the new men would be cut in for a small share but now garry Herrmann says the comishon for got to make no rule like that so it is up to the players if these new men will get a share or not & chances is they wont get nothing tho pres. Thos. thinking they would be a rule promussed them new men that they would get some thing. garry Herrmann knowed just as much a bout it as he did a bout leting them new men take part in the serious & I guess his team dont know no more a bout playing base ball than garry Herrmann knows a bout being the chair Man of the comishon.

at that Steve them new men aint going to be cut out of so much money because the crowds aint been as big is they use to be & we aint going to get no wheres near as much money as I figured but I should worry eh Steve with a $25.00 dollar per wk. job drinking beer & a big stand in with my girls old man. Im going to spend all my untire share of the serious money on close & if I should hapen to come home xmas or some other time I will be drest up like a horse & may be you wont know me but I guess youd know me even if I come home with nothing on. But I got aquaneted with a taylor here & he says he would be wiling to give me my close for ½ price because my shape would show them off so good that people would want to know where did I get them & when they found out they would go & get him to make them some close but of corse most people aint got no shape like I got but the taylor dont care how them other people looks just as long is he sells them the close.

well Steve I supose the girls a round home will be disappointed when you tell them the bad news but I cant help it Steve & when I got this chance I cant a ford to monkey with no bush league girls.

you been reading the paper & know what we been doing in the serious & both teams is so roten that its a wonder the mare of Chi dont have them arested for stealing the money.

I will write & let you know how I get a long. yours respy. BILL.

New York, Oct. 10.—[Special.]—The third game of the city championship series at the Polo grounds this afternoon resulted in a tenth inning victory for the Giants, 6 to 5, and gave them a two to one edge over the Yankees for Manhattan's crown.

The unexpected manner of victory recalled Thursday's opening, which was clinched by the Giants in much the same fashion. Mike Donlin, through his fine pinch triple, retrieved apparent disaster. Fred Snodgrass mistook this little quarrel for a world's championship scrap and pulled one of his own copyrighted muffs that almost precipitated the beans.

Umpire Hart Knocked.

Umpire Hart, who has been more roundly cursed all season than any other dozen arbiters, gave the anvil chorus plenty of exercise, while Old Doc Cook's innate awkwardness was responsible for the Yankees' only error.

It was a merry little party, all right, crowded chuck full of the scintillating and the ludicrous so cleverly linked that interest never once flagged until the winning run was scored. At times Rube Marquard flashed all the skill and cunning that earned him a world's record of consecutive victories, and then again he would lapse into the desultory demeanor contracted through a long chain of losses at the fag end of the National campaign.

Fisher's Support Weaker.

Ray Fisher was in much the same boat, though, barring the one Snodgrass specialty, his support was the weaker, even if the box score does not indicate the fact. Score:

What Managers Say.

BY GEORGE STALLINGS.

I have nothing to say more than that I am the most satisfied man in the world, and I am fully convinced that the greatest pitcher in the game today just stepped off the hill a victor. We'll not come back to Philadelphia, as we will finish the series in Boston.

BY CONNIE MACK.

They pitched great ball. They played great ball. But the champions are still good.

World's Series Notes.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Third game in Boston Monday.

Catcher Hank Gowdy was presented with a traveling bag and a bunch of flowers by a young woman before the game began.

Few tickets for the game were in the hands of the speculators when the hour for the staging of the contest arrived today.

The crowd was good natured and cheered the visitors as well as the home folks in the batting and fielding workouts.

The Athletics are considerably less than overconfident, while the Braves are a lot more than superconfident.

So far in the series the Players' fraternity and Manager Stallings have been thoroughly vindicated.

Schang's throwing was something frightful to behold in a world's series. Once before the ninth inning Deal got away from him after being caught flatfooted between bases.

There seems to be only one answer to the question: "What can the Brave pitchers do to the Athletics?" and that answer is "Almost any old thing they please."

The Royal Rooters and their band again paraded around the field after the game, and there was an unmistakable ring of triumph in their cheers.

President Shibe of the Athletics passed a short distance in front of the stand just before the game started, but apparently was not recognized by any of the fans, as there was not a single hand clapped.

The builders of miniature grandstands on housetops overlooking the grounds scored in a legal tilt with the police and building inspectors when it was discovered that they could not be forced to tear down their stands.

Rudolph and James have done their share, and it will be up to Tyler in the third game beyond question. Mack has used his two best cards, and will have to select one of his youngsters for the fierce test of the third game.

Byron's decision on bases were not up to world's series standard, and he was unmistakably nervous about them. Each side kicked occasionally on his work, but Hildebrand's work at the plate scarcely drew a murmur of protest.

The attendance was exactly the same as yesterday, showing that the capacity of the grounds was reached on both days. One seat has been removed since last year for the attendance in the 1913 world's series reached 20,563 at one game.

One Athletic fan felt so desperate after the first game last night that he hit a policeman on the head with a brick, just to assert his independence. The policeman fired a salute, and the bullet hit Frank Gallagher, a 23 year old fan, in the thigh.

The coppers in the upper grandstand refused to help the ushers take foul balls away from the bugs who wanted them for souvenirs. One copper, after catching a foul fly, handed it to a woman sitting near his station, and was applauded by every rooter in sight.

The Braves have a chance to wind up the world's series on Tuesday by taking four straight games, and they declare they are going to do it easily. The Athletics need four games to win, and have as yet shown no signs of the fighting spirit which so desperate a situation needs.

Barry played an erratic game at short, his throwing being particularly off color. McInnis saved him several slips and almost saved him the one charged to the shortstop on the eighth. McInnis stabbed that wide peg with one hand and actually won the decision from Byron, but the ball slipped out of his mitt and gave Whitted a life.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—When a little low fly from Mann's bat slipped safely off the flexible tip of Collins' mitt, with two out in the ninth inning of the second game of the world's series today, it gave big Bill James a richly deserved victory over the great tribe of Athletics and put Boston's Braves within two notches of the world's pennant of 1914.

That elusive scratch hit scored Deal from third base with the only run Boston needed to beat the Mackmen, 1 to 0, and the Braves departed tonight for home supremely confident that two more battles will be all they need to cop the big end of the coin and the title of champions of the world. They left in their wake a pall of black gloom so thick you could cut it with the blunt edge of a wheelbarrow.

James Hurls Masterful Game.

James pitched a wonderful game against the no longer proud Athletics. He held them to two hits, one of which was a mere scratch that Collins owed to the goodheartedness of Umpire Byron, according to the majority vote. Those chesty world beaters, who are supposed to feast on speed, found themselves completely baffled by the dazzling stuff this slatlike youngster fed them. From start to finish they were like dough in the hands of an expert delicatessen baker. From white elephants James changed them into monkeys almost at will. From sluggers he made them look like easy marks.

Eight of them struck out in the face of this terrific fire, sometimes swinging at the ball after it was in Gowdy's mitt and sometimes whaling away at what they thought was speed, but turned into a curve. Twice only did this kid pitcher who never faced a world's series test before, show signs of wabbling.

Braves Come to Rescue.

At the start James was painfully nervous and after passing the first man to face him made a wild throw to first base. But quick work by his supporters converted those two slips into an out and from there to near the finish James was as steady as a clock. Then after the Braves had won the game for him, the big fellow seemed to be overcome by the proximity of the big pennant and lost control again.

Two bases on balls in the last half put a pair of Mackmen where a long hit meant defeat and a short hit a tie in the score. Here Rabbit Maranville came to the rescue with a brilliant double play which wound up the combat in a dazzling blaze and which was made in spite of a most determined effort to block the squelching play.

Plank a Worthy Foe.

Against this sensational slabbing Plank worked with all his old brilliance and pitched a game which deserved to be crowned with victory. The Gettysburg veteran pitched with his head and pulled himself out of several bad holes by a splendid nerve and an apparently perfect knowledge of the hurling art. His work surpassed in this display of ability to stave off defeat that of his younger rival because Eddie was in trouble a lot of the time, while Big Bill seldom was.

In every other respect James outpitched Plank. The Braves tagged the southpaw for seven safeties, all except two of them unsullied, and he issued four bases on balls besides hitting one man. James gave only three passes and should have escaped with one hit.

"Break" Scores Only Tally.

So evenly matched, however, were these two slabmen by the exercise of their different kinds of ability that it required two acts of Providence and a bone play to decide the issue. Up to the ninth inning it looked as if James and Plank could go on till dark without letting in a run. There always was the chance that some batsman would catch a fast one on the trademark and whale it over one of the comparatively short barriers in right or left field, but aside from that it did not seem as if either team could count.

Maranville, first up in the eventful period, went down on a grounder to Barry, who was saved an error by a splendid catch by McInnis. Deal lifted a long fly to center. Strunk misjudged it in the sun, stammered with his feet for a brief instant, then started back uncertainly. Too late he spotted the winged messenger of defeat and failed to come up with it, in spite of a tremendous burst of speed at the end. The ball went over him safely for two bases. It would not have been an easy out, but one that Strunk could have negotiated nine times out of ten if he had gauged the ball aright.

Deal Tears for Third.

James, who already had whiffed three times, tried to bunt so as to advance the runner and missed the ball. Deal was caught flat footed twenty feet off second base and apparently helpless. Schang bluffed a couple of throws, then fired to second, and the instant the ball left his hands Deal tore for third, landing there in safety. If Schang had made the play any other way they might have been batting yet. James then completed his fourth whiff and the Athletic infield went back to lay for the third out.

Mann caught a curve near the handle of his bat and sent a low, twisting fly toward right. Collins raced back, turned, and jumped, reaching the ball with his left hand, but failing to hang on to it. It dropped safely behind him, and Deal scored from third with the run that not only decided the game but probably the world's series of 1914.

Second Base Nearest Home.

Previous to the ninth the Braves had not a man beyond second, but they had men on bases in every inning except the seventh. Four times they pushed a runner as far as second, but only once before there were two out, and every time Plank was there with the goods. Three times in the earlier innings Deal, who scored the only run, came up in a pinch with a runner on second and fell down with the stick. Fortune repaid him in the end by making him the subhero of the day.

The Mackmen had three chances to win the game. In the first inning James was so nervous he could not get them across for Murphy and walked him. Then he made a wild peg to first that got away from Schmidt, and Murphy tried to make second, but the awkward first baseman recovered and made a lightning throw that nipped the runner by a hair. That steadied James, and he went through five brilliant innings before a safe hit was made off him or any one else reaching first.

Schang Poles Two Bagger.

Schang in the sixth inning peeled off the only real Athletic hit, a clean double along the left foul line. There was only one out, but Schang tried to make third on a short passed ball and was nipped by a hair. In the last half of the ninth, with the game won, James stuttered and passed Barry. He struck out Schang trying to sacrifice, but Gowdy dropped the third strike, letting Barry to second.

Walsh batted for Plank and James also passed him. It looked as if the strong pitcher was going to break with victory already in his grasp. But he made Murphy hit, and a sizzling bounder to Maranville was converted into a double play.

Everywhere in every department of the game the Braves outplayed the Athletics, and while they had to have the breaks in that ninth inning to beat Plank, they deserved the triumph, for the Athletics never were in the game at all by comparison.

Ideal Day for Contest.

The weather bureau again got its wires crossed and instead of the showers that were predicted delivered the finest kind of baseball conditions. The skies were cloudless and the temperature almost up to the midsummer mark. Not only on the bleachers but in the pavilions and grand stand as well there were shirtwaist brigades.

The crowd was late in arriving again, as everything was sold by reserve coupon except the 4,000 seats in the open bleacher, and those were exhausted half an hour after the gates opened, leaving long lines of disappointed fans, some of whom had stood in line since before daylight.

The supply of reserved seats in the hands of the speculators was so nearly exhausted that their dollar tickets were held at $7, and sometimes $7.50, while $5 tickets were so scarce that $12 and $15 were asked for them. There were few takers at those prices and after the noon hour the quotations slumped to double the face value of the pasteboards.

ST. LOUIS TEAMS DIVIDE PROGRAM

Browns Take Opening Game 2-0 When James Allows Four Bingles.

SECOND TO CARDS, 2-0.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—After the Browns had won the first game, 2 to 0, the Cardinals took the second contest of the city series this afternoon by the same score. Darkness ended the second game at the end of the fifth inning. The Browns have won three of the four games played.

Bill James held the Cardinals to four hits in the first game of the double header, not a hit coming after the fourth inning. Three passes were issued, but he pitched well in the pinches.

Thirteen Off Perritt.

The Browns found Perritt for thirteen hits, but scored only two runs. The first came in the opening round. Shotten started with a single, moved to third on Austin's sacrifice, and crossed the plate on a wild pitch.

The second and final run came in the fourth. With two out Williams doubled to right and advanced on Howard's scratch single. They negotiated a double steal and Williams tallied.

Two Runs in Fifth.

Dan Griner had the better of the pitching argument with George Baumgardner in the second game. No scoring was [illegible] fifth inning, when Wilson strolled and scored on Cruise's triple. Beck followed with a single and Cruise scored. Two games will be played tomorrow. Scores:

RUDOLPH HERO AT FORDHAM.

New York, Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Fordham university celebrated Rudolph night last night. It was while the Athletics' tamer was a 17 year old wonder at Fordham that he learned the batting weaknesses of the then collegians, Jack Barry of Holy Cross and Eddie Collins of Columbia.

Inquisitive Fans.

Des Moines, Ia.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Please inform me through your inquisitive fan column what became of Shortstop Joe Tinker, who with Evers formed the great middle works of the once famous Cubs; also is the Hal Chase now playing first for the Columbus Jr. [Ia.] team the same Chase that once was a Yankee? I am a close follower of our great American game, but those two players seem to have slipped by us out here. However, we're proud possessors of Frank Isbell and Eddie Hahn.

J. CASSEL.

We imagine this is an attempt to kid us, but we will take it seriously enough to suggest that if Mr. Cassel will ask the newsboy on the nearest corner he will ascertain that Joe Tinker is manager of the Chicago Federals and that Hal Chase is with the Buffalo Federals.

Hampton, Ia.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—1. When batter hits ball and it "lays" on home plate and catcher picks it off from plate is it a fair or foul ball? 2. When batter hits ball and bounds from home plate straight up in air over home plate and is caught by catcher, it is fair or foul? FAN.

1. If it "lays" on the plate it naturally would be suspected of being a "fowl." A batted ball which settles on home plate before touching a fielder or batter is a fair ball. The foul lines constitute the outer edges of the home plate. 2. We don't know the answer when the batsman "hits the ball and bounds from home plate straight up in air." A batted ball which did that would be foul or fair according to whether it was over foul or fair ground when the catcher touched it.

Frank Caswrella, Melrose Park, Ill.: C. W. Murphy won the toss and the first game of the 1913 series was played on the Cubs' park.

P. J. Ryan, Chicago: The infield fly rule does not apply unless there are less than two out and runners on first and second or first, second, and third bases, as is made plain by section 5 of rule 51.

L. E. Barnes, Hobart, Ind.: "The Tribune" does not decide bets, but attention may be called to rule 56, section 8, which makes it imperative for a base runner to avoid an infielder attempting to field a batted ball, no distinction being made as to whether or not the fielder touches the ball.

WELCOME SIGN OUT FOR BRAVES ON RETURN TODAY

Rooters With Band to Receive Team as It Comes Back from Triumphs.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Boston is to give the returning Braves as vociferous a welcome tomorrow morning as the Massachusetts blue laws, strained to the very limit, will permit. Mayor Curley made arrangements tonight for a reception at the South station at 10 o'clock in the morning when the Federal express arrives with the Stallings crew and two Elephant pelts tucked in their belts.

Band to Play "Tessie."

A band of seventy pieces will play "Tessie" for half an hour before the train arrives and as often thereafter as the bandmen are able. After Mayor Curley, silk hatted and accompanied by the official mace bearer of the city, greets Stallings by the hand he will make a speech in the train shed and give the miracle man and his "Injuns" what little part of the city their climb from the bottom of the ladder to the top has not entitled them to already.

With the mayor will be the city's official guests who are here for the Columbus day celebration, including Minister Pezet of Peru, Congressman Montage of Virginia, and Edward Albes of Alabama. Speeches will be made by the visitors.

Many Rooters at Welcome.

Several thousand stay at home rooters are expected to be in the train shed, and their voices will join those of the 300 royal rooters who accompanied the team to Philadelphia and back, in cheers for the victors. The rooters, led by former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, will escort the players' automobiles to their hotel.

HAMILTON, HURT IN MIXUP, MAY NOT PLAY BALL AGAIN.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 10.—Earl Hamilton, pitcher for the St. Louis Americans, probably never will be able to play baseball again. This opinion was expressed tonight by physicians who attended the literally bruised, battered, and broken player at St. Mary's hospital in East St. Louis, Ill., where he was taken, together with five women, all of whom were injured when his automobile was wrecked on Eads bridge early this morning.

A broken collar bone, two broken ribs, a fracture of the left arm, a laceration puncturing his right cheek, and probable internal injuries sum up Hamilton's condition. In addition, his machine was demolished. The police are holding the injured persons at the hospital while trying to place the blame for the accident, and Hamilton is threatened with prosecution for exceeding the speed limit.

Miss Pearl Kelly, one of the women who had been in Hamilton's machine, is in an even more critical condition, and physicians have given up all hope of her recovery. Miss Kelly was thrown off the bridge by the impact of the automobile's collision with part of the bridge structure and fell head first into the railroad yards below. Her skull is fractured, her right leg broken, and she suffered internal injuries.

BRAVES RULE FAVORITES TO WIN WORLD PENNANT.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Betting on the world's series as the result of the second victory for Boston today switched to the Braves and small odds were asked and given late this afternoon on the series. After yesterday's game the odds on the Athletics changed to even money and about $10,000 was put up by enthusiastic fans before the start of today's contest.

Many of these bets were made by Athletic partisans who had given hefty odds earlier in the week, and were trying to even up on their wagers. Also, many who had bet on Bender's ability to win the first contest yesterday were out to recoup by putting up their coin on the chance that the Mackmen would "come back."

Although the prevailing price quoted today was even money on the Braves to win the series, yet in reality the Athletic supporters were giving 4 to 3.

RUDOLPH PAPA ONCE MORE.

New York, Oct. 10.—Up at the Bronx borough home of Dick Rudolph, pitcher for the Boston Braves and winner in yesterday's first world's series battle, there was a new arrival today. It was a girl, the second child of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph. The couple's other daughter is 14 months old. A double celebration of Rudolph's victory in Philadelphia and of the advent of the little stranger in his home is being planned by the twirler's friends of college days at Fordham university.

Chicago Boy Wins Daughter of Connie Mack for His Bride.

MISS MARGARET V. McGILLICUDDY

ROBERT F. McCAMBRIDGE

CHICAGO'S White Sox cannot defeat the Philadelphia Athletics on the diamond, but a Chicago fan has entirely eclipsed the fans of Philadelphia with a diamond, and its recipient is Miss Margaret V. McGillicuddy, daughter of Manager Connie Mack of the American league champions. On Nov. 2 in Philadelphia Miss McGillicuddy will become the bride of Robert F. McCambridge, who lives at 1467 Foster avenue. After their marriage the young couple will reside at 1436 Winona avenue, where a furnished apartment already awaits its new occupants. The romance dates back six years, when the young people were 15 years old. McCambridge lived near his present fiancée in Philadelphia, and pressed his suit by throwing snowballs at her on the way home from school. This manifestation of affection, not unusual at that age, was never forgotten in the intervening years. McCambridge is employed by the Hanchett Bond company of this city. The honeymoon trip will be to New York.

CUE CHAMPIONS HERE THIS WEEK

Willie Hoppe and Inman to Meet in American-English Match.

START PLAY TUESDAY.

William F. Hoppe of New York, the greatest balkline player the world ever has seen, and Melbourne Inman, who is supreme at the English style of play, will play the second series of their international billiard match this week.

The contest, which will be at 6,000 points, will be half at 18-2 balkline and half at English billiards. The carom games will be played on an American table 5 by 10, and the English games on the regulation 6 by 12 English table, which has six pockets similar to those on pocket billiard tables.

The match will be played in the gold room of the Congress hotel, starting tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock and continuing each afternoon and night the rest of the week. As in the New York match, the principals have a side bet of $1,000.

Conditions of Match.

The experts will play six blocks each of 500 points at balkline and five blocks each of 600 points at English billiards. Americans are familiar with the counting at balkline, at which each carom counts one point. At the English style of play a carom counts two, while going into a pocket off the opposing ball also counts two. Going into a pocket off the red ball counts three, and putting it into a pocket also counts three.

By making a carom, going into a pocket, and "potting" the other two balls it is possible to make ten points at one shot. This is seldom done, as when the opposing ball is pocketed it is out of play, leaving the player in hand only the red ball to shoot at.

Similar Play in 1893.

The last match at English billiards was played in Chicago in 1893, when the late Frank Ives defeated John Roberts, the English champion, at Central music hall.

Inman is known as a wonderful money player, and as is usually the case with men of that type, has little to say. He believes, however, that he can defeat Hoppe under the conditions of the present match. Whichever player wins, the fans will see the two best players in the world at their respective styles and will see some phenomenal cue work.

CHANCE MARRIED TEN YEARS.

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 10.—Frank Chance and his wife celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary in Iowa City while marooned here nearly forty-eight hours because of storms. Mr. and Mrs. Chance entertained at a local hotel. This morning the baseball star and his party started towards California in their big touring cars.

YOST WARRIORS GOOD 'MUDDERS'; WIN IN RAIN, 23-3

Vanderbilt Gets Lone Score by Field Goal in Opening Quarter.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—With rain falling during the greater part of the game, Michigan defeated Vanderbilt today by a score of 23 to 3. Vanderbilt drew first blood when fumbles by Quarter Back Hughitt and a fifteen yard penalty put the ball within twenty-seven yards of the Wolverine goal, from where Left Tackle Cody sent it over the bar by a drop kick.

Maulbetsch, Splawn, and Hughitt were the individual stars for the Wolverines. Maulbetsch plunged through the southerners' line for long gains time after time. In spite of a wet, heavy ball, Splawn scored one goal by the drop kick route and punted well. Hughitt's work was marred by fumbles, but in carrying the ball he was always good for gains, and he ran the team with splendid judgment.

Before the end of the third quarter, which was played in a rain, the field was ankle deep in mud. Fumbles lost Michigan many yards in this period.

Twice in the last quarter Michigan fumbled, once right on the goal line. Just at the end of the game a fumble prevented a touchdown after Maulbetsch had carried the ball forty yards by line plunges.

First Quarter.

Cody of Vanderbilt kicked off to Hughitt, but a penalty of fifteen yards assessed against Michigan for holding forced Splawn to punt. An exchange of punts gave Michigan the ball on its fifty yard line, but Hughitt was tackled so fiercely he fumbled and Vanderbilt recovered. A few moments later Cody drop kicked a goal from Michigan's twenty-five yard line.

The feat aroused the fighting qualities of the Yost men. Michigan quickly forced Vanderbilt to punt and Maulbetsch tore off a thirty-five yard end run, putting the ball on Vanderbilt's fifteen yard line. Hughitt went over and then kicked goal. Score: Michigan, 7; Vanderbilt, 3.

Second Period.

Penalties for offside play set back both teams during the second period. Michigan's attack was versatile. Forward passes brought good gains, and two well executed fake kicks fooled the southerners. Hughitt finally carried the ball to Vanderbilt's seven yard line by a twelve yard sprint. Maulbetsch made the touchdown, but Hughitt missed goal, the oval striking the crossbar and bounding outside.

Long runs by Maulbetsch helped carry the ball to Vanderbilt's twenty-seven yard line, where Splawn dropkicked a field goal. Score end first half, Michigan, 16; Vanderbilt, 3.

Rain in Third Quarter.

It was raining heavily when the third period began. Maulbetsch and Catlett each tore off a twenty-five yard gain. Soon Michigan was on Vanderbilt's thirty yard line. Splawn attempted a field goal, but a poor pass prevented the play. Michigan quickly recovered the ball, but lost it on a fumble near the enemy's goal.

A punting duel, followed by a series of fumbles, gave Vanderbilt the ball in Michigan territory. Sykes punted to Hughitt and Michigan began splashing toward the center of the field, when the period ended. Score: Michigan, 16; Vanderbilt, 3.

Fourth Quarter.

The gridiron was covered with puddles when the last period began. Yost's men battered their way to Vanderbilt's one yard line, where a fumble cost them the ball. More punting followed, after which Michigan, with Maulbetsch leading the offense, carried the ball to Vanderbilt's one yard line.

Carmen replaced Cody. A forward pass, Hughitt to Spiawn, was fumbled across the goal line and a Vanderbilt player fell on the pigskin. A few moments before the game ended Maulbetsch made a touchdown and Hughitt kicked goal. Final score: Michigan, 23; Vanderbilt, 3. Lineup:

QUAKERS AND LAFAYETTE BATTLE TO SCORELESS TIE.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 10.—Lafayette college held the University of Pennsylvania football eleven to a scoreless tie in the gridiron struggle here today. In the four quarters Pennsylvania had four distinct chances to get the pigskin over the Lafayette goal line, but lacked the punch at critical periods, and the Boshand kicked the pigskin out of danger.

Pennsylvania's trick double pass worked early in the game for long gains around the ends, Vreeland and Tucker passing the ball to Murdock or Urquhart, but Lafayette soon solved this play and held. End runs were effective.

Capt. Dick Diamond, Furry, and J. Diamond were the stars for Lafayette, while Journey, Moffet, Ballou, and Vreeland excelled for Pennsylvania. Lineup:

HAMILTON PROVES STAR

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Minnesota displayed remarkable improvement today, defeating Ames, 26 to 0. The Gopher line was impregnable, and the defense against Ames' attempts at forward passing in the last quarter also was effective. Three fumbles by the Gophers in the first quarter, under the goal posts, once behind the line, did much to keep down the score.

Hamilton's open field work was the feature. Minnesota was successful both with the forward pass and the famous shift formations. Ames tried nothing but forward passes in the last period. None was successful. Capt. Rosenthal blocked a punt and carried the ball over the Ames line in the second period. Solen made two place kicks in four attempts. Lineup:

AMHERST AND BROWN TIE.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 10.—Amherst held Brown to a 0 to 0 tie today. The Brown players did not get inside their opponent's twenty-eight yard line. DRAKE BESTS GRINNELL, 20-7

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 10.—Staging a game comeback after Grinnell had scored a touchdown in the first quarter, Drake outplayed its opponents in the first stiff football game seen here this season and won, 20 to 7. The visitors had a superior line, but the broken field running of Donald and lone end runs by Shearer, coupled with several successful forward passes brought Drake its scores. Donald, Blackburn, and White scored for Drake, while Hammond made the Grinnell touchdown.

LAWRENCE BETTER MUDDER.

Appleton, Wis., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Scoring more than half its points in the last quarter, Lawrence college defeated Lake Forest on a field ankle deep in mud, 19 to 7. Abrahamson of Lawrence was the particular star, scoring twelve of the nineteen points. Lake Forest was dangerous only in the second quarter.

MAROONS BEAT FIGHTING PURPLE.

he can harp on this fact the rest of his life.

As some of you may have suspected, it rained most of yesterday morning. It was still raining on the Midway at 1 o'clock. It finally stopped raining, but not until the grounds were rendered almost null and void. Thus it was extremely difficult for the athletes to keep their feet and feet are things which all people, including athletes, love to keep.

Athletes Slip on Grass.

We started out to say that while the Purple was in a state of coma a great deal of the tackling which it should have done was done for it by the very wet grass. Dolly Gray twice in the first period eluded all tacklers except Williams and the slippery grass, and twice oozed to the ground before he got close enough for Williams to get him or miss him. Perhaps Williams would have nailed him if the grass hadn't. We will never know. The moisture was sponged up by the players' suits as the game progressed, and in the second half there seemed to be little slipping.

The battle convinced us that the "Yale system of coaching" is going to work at Northwestern when Murphy and McDevitt have had more time to teach what they know. There is room for improvement in Northwestern's tackling and in other things. The team brings down penalties on its head too often; its teamwork is faulty and its forwards seem to wait for something to happen instead of starting something themselves; too much defensive work is left to the secondary line.

But the Purple is not a joke, and when it has had more practice its spirit combined with its increased knowledge of football will make it a team worth while. Moreover, Murphy has a good man on his squad, named Pissozstowski, whom he was unable to use yesterday. The field was too narrow.

Good Crowd Turns Out.

That football is in for a popular season was shown by the size of the crowd. In spite of the weather, which was threatening, to say the least, the Chicago stand was well filled and the bleachers at both ends of the field likewise. There was a solid section of Evanston bugs in the east stand. It was noticed that they cheered louder than the Maroon fans did when the result of the ball game at Philadelphia was announced. Thus do we cities of culture together stick.

The following space is reserved for a few lines about the bands, the cheering, and the first appearance of the rival squads:

The Game in Detail.

After that Capt. Hightower won the toss and chose the north goal. Northwestern received the kickoff and failed to show much of an attack. Patterson punted and, as related before, the Maroons got a touchdown in short order. There is no need of repeating the stuff about how that score and the next were made.

The second period was under way when Hightower grabbed a Chicago forward pass and, on the next play, we believe, executed his cute run of twenty-five, thirty, or thirty-five yards. Three plays failed to make substantial gains, and a drop kick missed connections. Perhaps the reason the three plays failed was that Stagg substituted several hundred pounds of Redmon for Fisher during their progress, or lack of it. The Maroon backs drove down to the Purple ten yard line, but at that point Northwestern's defense lived up to the name and got the ball on downs. Patterson punted, and the half ended as Gray caught the ball, or shortly afterward.

March of Staggs Halted.

The Maroons opened the second half with another match toward the Northwestern goal, but were halted while still thirty-three yards out. Then Northwestern took a turn at gaining, and, with the aid of two Chicago penalties for offside, rushed 'er back to the Maroon forty yard mark. Hightower and Iddings carried the ball for most of the distance. The Evanston correspondent says he thinks this Iddings is Harold's brother. Perhaps he is.

On their forty yard line the Maroons held and Northwestern punted. Russell caught the ball on his own five yard mark and stood there for several moments in deep meditation. The Northwesterners stood and watched him, unwilling to break the current of his thoughts. The spirit at length moved Peter to run with the ball, but didn't advise him which way to go. He dashed first to the west side of the field, then to the east, and then, with his mind fully made up, started south. He was tackled and thrown after a brief romp of forty yards.

Encouraged by this slight success, Pete gave the signal for a forward pass and heaved the ball to Whiting, who, when his headgear falls off, looks as if his name should be Redding. Whatever his proper name, he caught the pass, and the Maroons were thirty yards closer to a touchdown than if he had missed it.

Berger Goes Across.

The Maroons lost the ball again, but the third touchdown was just a question of time. Berger made it shortly after the opening of the fourth period. As Schafer was not in the game at the time, Shull kicked the goal. Gordon was now playing quarter for the Maroons and he perpetrated a thirty-five yard run back of a punt which gave the Maroons a start toward their final score. Gray followed it with a twenty-three yard dash and then counted the touchdown. Shull again spruced up and kicked goal. As hinted, Chicago was about to tally again when John Albert gave way to Des Jardien at center and it was all off.

With one exception the players of both teams wore numbers on their backs. The exception cut in at Whittle's place on the Purple team. If the exception wants his name in the paper he will buy himself a number. Lineup:

M. A. C. CRUSH ALMA TEAM.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Alma proved easy picking for the Michigan "Aggies," who made up for their poor work of a week ago by defeating the Presbyterians, 60 to 0, this afternoon. Capt. Julian was the big ground gainer for the "Aggies," who played straight football throughout. The Michigan scouts learned nothing that will help U. of M. in the battle with the M.A.C. next week.

IOWA DOWNS CORNELL, 49-0.

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—The weakness of Cornell collegians, rather than Iowa's special strength, featured today's game, which the locals won, 49 to 0. The Hawkeyes' line was impregnable, and the visitors rarely made first down. Donnelly, Gross, and Parsons starred for Iowa with smashes and runs. Peterson's tackling was the best work by Cornellians.

Champion, 13; German College, 10.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Champion defeated Dubuque German college today 13 to 10. Champion scored twice on end runs. Trick plays by Plams, Capt. Clifford, and McKenna netted big gains for the winners.

Notes of Maroon Game.

Coach Hawley's fleet Hawkeyes will entertain us next Saturday.

Patterson of the Purple cut loose several punts that were beauties; also one that was not.

It is the general belief around the Midway that Stegeman has won himself a regular job in the Maroon line.

Later—This Mr. Iddings is Henry and he is Harold's brother. He was at Purdue for a while and this is his last year of football.

The real rain ceased two hours before game time, but a slight drizzle came to frighten the bugs between 2:30 and 3 o'clock.

Coach Stagg thought the grounds were bad enough without any assistance from him; hence Flood was damaged in the first half.

Northwestern has a Gray who is Dolly's cousin. He did not perform yesterday, believing, no doubt, that the family was doing its full share without him.

The atmospherical conditions were not conducive to peppery football playing. Prof. Stagg spoke to this effect after the game, so we print the statement without fear of a comeback.

There promises to be a warm fight among Coutchie, Schafer, and Berger before the ownership of R. H. B. is settled. So far as can be determined with the naked eye, Dolly Gray will continue at the other half unless he drops dead of exhaustion.

Stagg is not looking forward to the Iowa game with much pleasure. The Hawkeyes were formidable before last season ended and they have many of their stars back on the job. The game should be a corker. We don't get anything extra for writing this.

PIN LEADERS MEET TODAY.

The annual meeting of the Chicago Bowling association has been called for 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Hotel Planters. All officials of the association are said to be slated for reëlection. President Frank Pasdeloup and Secretary Jake Mueller are 100 to 1 shots for their present jobs, and no rival candidates have shown up for the positions held by Treasurer William Diener or any of the members of the executive committee. It is expected that the officials will decide whether entries to the annual tournament will be allowed from teams which roll in unsanctioned leagues.

W. and V., 31; Lombard, 7.

Aledo, Ill., Oct. 10.—William and Vashti easily defeated Lombard, 31 to 7. The game was fast for the muddy condition of the field. Lombard's score was made on a forward pass.

PURDUE WHIPS RESERVE, 26 TO 0

Boilermakers Have No Trouble in Beating Visitors from Cleveland, O.

HANDICAPPED BY MUD.

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Playing in a sea of mud and water, the Purdue team this afternoon disposed of Western Reserve of Cleveland, O., in easy fashion, the score being 26 to 0. It would have been much larger but for the mud, which prevented the Boilermakers' backs from getting started. Most of the time was spent in exchanging punts.

The visitors never got close to the Purdue goal, but just before the game closed they rallied and made two twenty yard gains on passes. Purdue played straight football, not wishing to disclose any of the new formations to the Chicago and Wisconsin scouts in the grand stand. Van Aiken made two spectacular runs for touchdowns. Lineup:

BROTHERS BEAT HASKELL.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 10.—The Christian Brothers' college football team won, 6 to 0, a closely fought game with the Haskell Indians here today. The scoring was done in the third period, when Quarter Back Giligher carried the ball to Haskell's ten yard line and a forward pass was put over for a touchdown.

Sporting News Notes.

The Lexington A. C. football team will travel to Dauphin park today to meet the Billikens.

H. W. Kiplinger, Rensselaer, Ind., will book football games for the Rensselaer A. C. club.

The Chicago M. A. C. association will attend the Michigan-Michigan Aggies football at Lansing on Oct. 17 in a body. A private car will leave Chicago Friday night at 11 o'clock, arriving at Lansing Saturday morning.

The Hinsdale football team is anxious to arrange games for Saturday afternoons. The team averages 150 pounds, and will pay expenses of fifteen men. Phone Schmidt, Wabash 2870, between 9 and 4:30.

The Calumet and the Bricklayers soccer teams will play their match in the preliminary round of the national amateur championship on Oct. 18. Washington Heights and Joliet will play their league game of Nov. 15 on that date.

BADGER ELEVEN SPEEDY; DOWNS MARQUETTE, 48-0

Wisconsin Displays Class in Game; New Stars Come to Light.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—In a game which emphasized Marquette's weakness more than Wisconsin's strength, the Badgers this afternoon ran over their opponents in the second game of the season, piling up a score of 48 to 0. At no time during the game did Marquette have a chance against their superior adversaries.

The Wisconsin machine was rather slow in getting off at the start, their advance being marred by fumbling, in which all members of the starting backfield figured. A touchdown came after ten minutes of play, resulting from a series of dives by Bellows, Cummings, and Krenz. Smith went over for the score.

Bellows Kicks Field Goal.

The real thrill of the game came in the second period, when Bellows booted a drop with excellent aim from the forty-five yard line. During the course of the game Juneau replaced the entire team three times, and the reserves did heavier scoring than the so-called "regulars." Freeman, after today's exhibition, takes his place as one of the best driving backs on the squad. Taylor won rounds of applause time and again with startling snake runs.

Smith twice went over the goal, and Cummings, Freeman, Taylor, and McMasters counted once apiece. Bellows and McCrory swelled the score with 3 and 2 goals, respectively, and four points resulted from two safeties.

Mucks Proves Star.

Arlie Mucks, in his first exhibition on a Badger team, proved himself a line terror. Three periods of the game were played in a light drizzle. A crowd of 5,000 witnessed the game, 500 of whom were in the Marquette section. Lineup:

LANE VICTOR OVER OAK PARK AFTER 5 YEARS

High School Team Found That Is 19-7 Superior to Suburbanites.

BY PREP.

Oak Park has fallen.

Brawn, skill, and spirit gave way to superior brands on the gridiron yesterday when Lane Technical of the Chicago league administered a decisive beating, 19 to 7, to the Suburban league champions at Phipps field. Oak Park succumbed to a superior foe, and the two touchdown margin showed the difference in the class of the two elevens.

For the first time in five years the western suburbanites bowed to a high school team. During that same period Oak Park had dropped twice to defeat, once at the hands of Morgan Park academy, early in 1910, and once before the onslaughts of the Maywood A. C., composed of a number of collegians. For five years Oak Park ranked among the leading teams of the country, once going west to defend successfully its claim to the national title and once traveling eastward with the same result.

To Blueitt, the wonderful colored player, Lane owes the greater part of its success. Without this brilliant back the Tech team probably would not have achieved the glory of victory. Five times he dashed through broken fields, each time registering runs of forty yards or more. Once his dash terminated in a touchdown. Sharing the glory, but in lesser degrees, were Capt. Huber, who proved a star defensively, and Baer and Paden, who featured with line plunges.

Lane Scores First.

Lane opened its rush for a touchdown in the opening period and by a series of short dashes and off tackle plays advanced the ball to the one yard line, where Oak Park resisted stubbornly, getting the ball on downs. Immediately after the punt Lane began another march and this time succeeded in forcing Paden over the line. Huber failed at goal.

Oak Park showed a flash of its championship form in the second period. Forward passes, mixed with end runs and line plunges, placed the ball in position for Phelps to go over. Royal kicked goal, and with the close of the half Oak Park led, 7 to 6.

Lane forged to the front in the third session, when Blueitt from a forward pass ran forty yards for a touchdown. This score was increased in the final fifteen minutes, when Paden scored the last touchdown, after which Huber kicked goal. Lineup:

Evanston-Phillips Game Monday.

The Evanston High school team, aspirant for the Suburban league championship, and Wendell Phillips, runner up in the Chicago league last season, were unable to play their contest at Northwestern field yesterday morning because of the driving rain and the uncertain footing of the gridiron. The game was advanced to tomorrow afternoon, as Monday is Columbus day. Because of the strength shown in early games this year the contest will give an idea of the comparative power of both elevens.

ALLOW FOUR SEATS FOR YALE-HARVARD CONTEST.

For the first time in the history of the Havard vs. Yale football game applicants will be allowed to apply for more than two tickets. The great capacity of the new bowl at New Haven, in which the game will be played this fall, makes possible this radical change. Four instead of two will be the maximum, and they may not be "for personal use."

ARMY BEATS RUTGERS, 13-0.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 10.—The Army defeated Rutgers in a hard fought game, 13 to 0. Rutgers used the mass play with poor results during the first half, but the stiff defense put up by the Jersey men kept the Army at a respectable distance. The Army's game was nearly all straight, old fashioned football, the cadets using the forward pass only four times, all of the attempts proving failures.

LAKE FOREST "PREPS" LOSE.

East Division of Milwaukee defeated Lake Forest academy by a score of 7 to 0 at Lake Forest yesterday. The game was played on a muddy field. Lake Forest had the ball on East Division's one yard line, but was penalized. The playing of Glueck of Lake Forest and Shulz of East Division featured.

DARTMOUTH, SLOW TO START, BEATS WILLIAMS NEAR END.

Williamstown, Mass., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—From the middle of the second period until the beginning of the fourth Williams had an advantage of three points over Dartmouth in the game with the Green eleven this afternoon, but the visitors won, 21 to 3. Wonderful football was displayed by both elevens and none of the many misplays which marred the play of Williams against Vermont a week ago was in evidence. The Dartmouth team found the weak places in the Purple's line during the last part of the game, when Gerrish, Curtiss, and Tuck all had little difficulty in making first downs on successive bucks. RUSHES BY YALE DEFEAT LEHIGH

Elis Come Strong in Second Period, Winning by 20 to 3 Score.

BEHIND AT START, 3-0.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Lehigh spoiled Yale's spotless slate this afternoon and led 3 to 0 when the first half closed, but Yale rallied and finally won, 20 to 3.

There was no scoring in the first period, but in the second Lehigh was given the ball on a penalty at the Yale forty yard line. A forward pass, Cahill to Sawtelle, netted twenty yards, and Cahill kicked a goal from the twenty-one yard line.

Taking the ball in the third period at its thirty-five yard line, Yale rushed the ball for a touchdown without being held. A forward pass, Guernsey to Ainsworth, for thirty yards was Yale's best play. Ainsworth made the touchdown and Guernsey kicked goal.

Yale scored another touchdown in the middle of the final period when Jim Sheldon intercepted Cahill's forward pass and raced thirty yards to the Lehigh twenty yard line. Four Yale plunges and Legore scored a touchdown. Guernsey kicked goal.

PRINCETON WINS IN HARD BATTLE

Syracuse Eleven Puts Up Great Fight and Holds Tigers to 12-7 Score.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Princeton defeated Syracuse today, 12 to 7, but failed to show much strength in the open game. In fact, Syracuse outplayed the Tigers in both the second and third periods. In the first quarter Law kicked a goal from the eighteen yard line for the first score of the game. Later in the same period Ames went over for a touchdown.

In the second period Syracuse opened up with a series of double passes in the backfield, which played havoc with the Tiger defense. Seymour scored a touchdown after the ball had been advanced on forward passes and Wilson kicked the goal, making the score 9 to 7.

Neither team scored in the third period. In the final quarter Law again kicked a goal from the twenty-five yard line, and the game ended, 12 to 7.

Syracuse gained 230 yards by rushing to Princeton's 108. In forward passing Princeton gained sixty-three yards to Syracuse's eighty-nine. In only one department of the game did Princeton show superiority, and that was in punting, in which it covered 350 yards to 310 by Syracuse. Lineup:

ILLINI DEFEAT INDIANA, 51-0, WITH ROLLER

Macomber and Schobinger Feature the Attack at Urbana.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Urbana, Ill., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—That Illinois will be a contender for the western conference championship beyond all question of doubt was shown today when the Orange and Blue warriors defeated their old rival Indiana, on Illinois field, 51 to 0.

Although Coach Zuppke's machine did not hit on all cylinders in the first two quarters it certainly chugged at a merry clip during the last two periods when most of the points were scored.

In the second half the Hoosiers were unable to stop the varied attack of Capt. Chapman and his warriors. Forward passes, some of which were thrown as far as thirty yards, were executed accurately. Line plunges, in which Eugene Schobinger, the Chicago player, carried the ball off tackle drives with Macomber, the former Oak Park athlete, and Pogue finding holes for large gains.

Clark Star at Quarter.

In addition to this sterling trio of backs, Zuppke has uncovered a great player in Clark, the quarterback. This little warrior not only ran his team with rare judgement, but he carried the ball on end runs for long gains, and seldom failed to bring punts back a considerable distance. The line from tackle played a steady game, and few gains were made through the forward wall.

If any weakness can be found in the Illinois team as it played today it is defensive work of the ends, but the wing players are a power of strength on the offense. Both received long forward passes and assisted the backs in many other ways to advance the ball.

Hoosiers Show Slow Offense.

Indiana employed the same slow, cumbersome offense as it did against Chicago a week ago. This attack may win some games, but it never will gain against a team of Illinois' strength. On defense the Hoosiers played to the limits of physical endurance, and in the closing period Indiana was represented by an entirely new team. Some of the players tackled well, but, in general the defensive work was ragged. Capt. Erehart was the Indiana star. He carried the ball for good gains and he was all over the field on defense.

Generally speaking Illinois will be a 50 per cent better eleven when Minnesota is met at Minneapolis on Oct. 31. The team has possibilities, and the local mentor will make the most of them. The aggregation is drilled to perfection in rudimentary football, and as soon as the players have had enough practice to smooth out the plays Illinois will make a stubborn fight for the 1914 big nine title. RAIN BALKS TITLE COMBAT; AMATEURS PLAY TWO TODAY

Manchester Earns 'Big Chief' Honors at Golf Powwow

Captures Three Big Titles in Scouting Around Lake Forest.

BRAVES FEAR RAIN

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Percival Manchester, for whose name there is no equivalent in the Indian language, proved the "big chief" of the ninth annual pow-wow and golf tournament of the Onwentsia club by capturing three prizes in his two days' scouting around the Lake Forest trail.

Yesterday he scalped Charles W. Leland of the Lake Geneva reservation in the final duel for the But-tis-foot-slipt cup, the main prize in the flight battles. He also took home the prize for the best choice score on Friday, and with Chief Douglas Smith of Indian Hill won the prize for the best ball for member and guest on the opening day.

Even Braves Fear Rain.

Modern Indians do not possess the weather resisting qualities to roam the forests defying atmospheric conditions as did the red men of bygone days and the copious downfall of water drove most of the braves who competed on Friday back to the big Ontwentsia tepee, which once was wet, but now is dry. Only thirty-five players hit the trail yesterday, and nearly half of them carried home trophies from the watery chase.

The Gia-ju-poyn-duss trophy went to W. R. Kirk of Onwentsia and G. R. Robertson of Hinsdale, who had a best ball total of 296. The Pah-roh-croh-nis prizes for the best ball of a member and guest for yesterday's thirty-six holes handicap also went to Kirk and Robertson with a card of 163—11—152.

For the best choice score yesterday J. O. Hinkley of Midlothian won the Beetaum-too-wit prize with 79—9—70. The Yirs-cant-dow-nim prize went to W. W. Willetts with 175—15—160. M. P. Noyes of Skokie had best combined score for four rounds at the sixteenth [baby] hole, twelve strokes, and won the Win-sin-wuns-tep prize. C. W. Leland of the home club did the twelfth hole in twenty strokes for four rounds and won the Hee-jess-vol-pleyns prize.

Other Flight Winners.

Winners in the other flights were:
Pung-kap-roh-chiz—D. R. Forgan defeated W. W. Willetts, 2 and 1.
Wos-sunt-crang-tup—S. T. Chase defeated Douglas Smith, 5 and 3.
Luv-stoo-sly-sum—J. O. Hinkley defeated A. B. Eaton, 1 up.
Bug-zis-iss-owt—I. T. Hartz defeated G. McLaughlin, 4 and 2.
Fan-zan-then-sum—R. A. Ferguson defeated J. W. Blakeley, 3 and 1.

Fee-lin-fuz-zee—T. Prindiville defeated J. Witherspoon, 1 up.
Balz-go-fun-nee—C. W. Folds defeated R. H. Donnelly, 1 up.

The Gosh-eye-wun-nit prize went to E. A. Bancroft, who took the highest gross score for seventy-two holes during the two days. W. A. Alexander won the Feel-zis-ote-sum prize offered for the best net for thirty-six holes made on the first day, registering a total of 149.

A. J. Kasper and L. E. Sauter captured the four ball foursome prize at Edgewater, 185—16—169. J. W. Moulding and F. L. Macomber had best gross total of 179—9—170. Results of the semi-finals for the club championship were: G. M. McConnell defeated S. J. Minster, 5 and 4; H. H. Districh defeated E. E. Beach, 4 and 3.

Troxell Jr. won the 1913 S. & P. cup with a score of 206—80—126. His score of 104—40—64 yesterday also gave him the handicap prize.

MOTOR CLUBS SPLIT HONORS IN FALL TEST

C. A. A. Shows Fewer Penalties and C. A. C. Better Scores.

BY REED L. PARKER.

Motor teams from the Chicago Athletic association and the Chicago Automobile club divided honors in their fall reliability run to George Ade's farm and return yesterday, the former winning the Albert S. Ray trophy for having the fewer penalties and the latter taking the Carlton White trophy for having the largest number of drivers to return perfect scores.

The Automobile club finished with a net total of 244 demerits, against 277 of the C. A. A. The C. A. C. secured a total of 145 points from perfect scores, against 85 for the C. A. A. The greater part of the match was run through driving rain.

Sixty Cars on Trip.

Thirty-seven cars started for the Automobile club and twenty-three for the C. A. A. Of the Plymouth court team nineteen finished perfectly, while only thirteen of the Michigan avenue club's team came through with no demerits. Only three cars were forced to leave the run. C. R. T. Forrester had unusual bad luck, the gasoline tank of his Packard being rammed by the front spring hanger of L. C. Erbe's car. The impact was so terrific that the tank was punctured. Erbe was attempting to evade hitting a horse which galloped in front of his machine.

William H. Rankin, who drove a Cole, had trouble the nature of which was not reported to the officials. F. R. Hosmer in a Hudson was the only member of the C. A. A. team to be disqualified. Rear axle trouble put him out of the run on the return trip.

De Palma and Dawson Drive.

Two of the three professional motor drivers entered started. They were Ralph De Palma in a Chandler and Joe Dawson in a Marmon. Both had perfect scores. Dawson's appearance at the wheel of a car was his first since he was injured in an accident in the 500 mile race at Indianapolis on May 30. The conduct of the drivers mounted in touring cars was watched throughout the run. Together with A. J. Banta the Locomobile branch manager, they had a merry time striving for leading positions.

The entertainment at Ade's farm surpassed expectations. The Daughters of Ruth served a dinner. On the return trip the contestants were greeted by a band and a large crowd at Hammond. Flowers were given the drivers by the First National bank.

The run finished at the South Shore Country club, where a banquet was served to contestants and their guests. The run generally is conceded to have been the best ever engaged in by the two clubs.

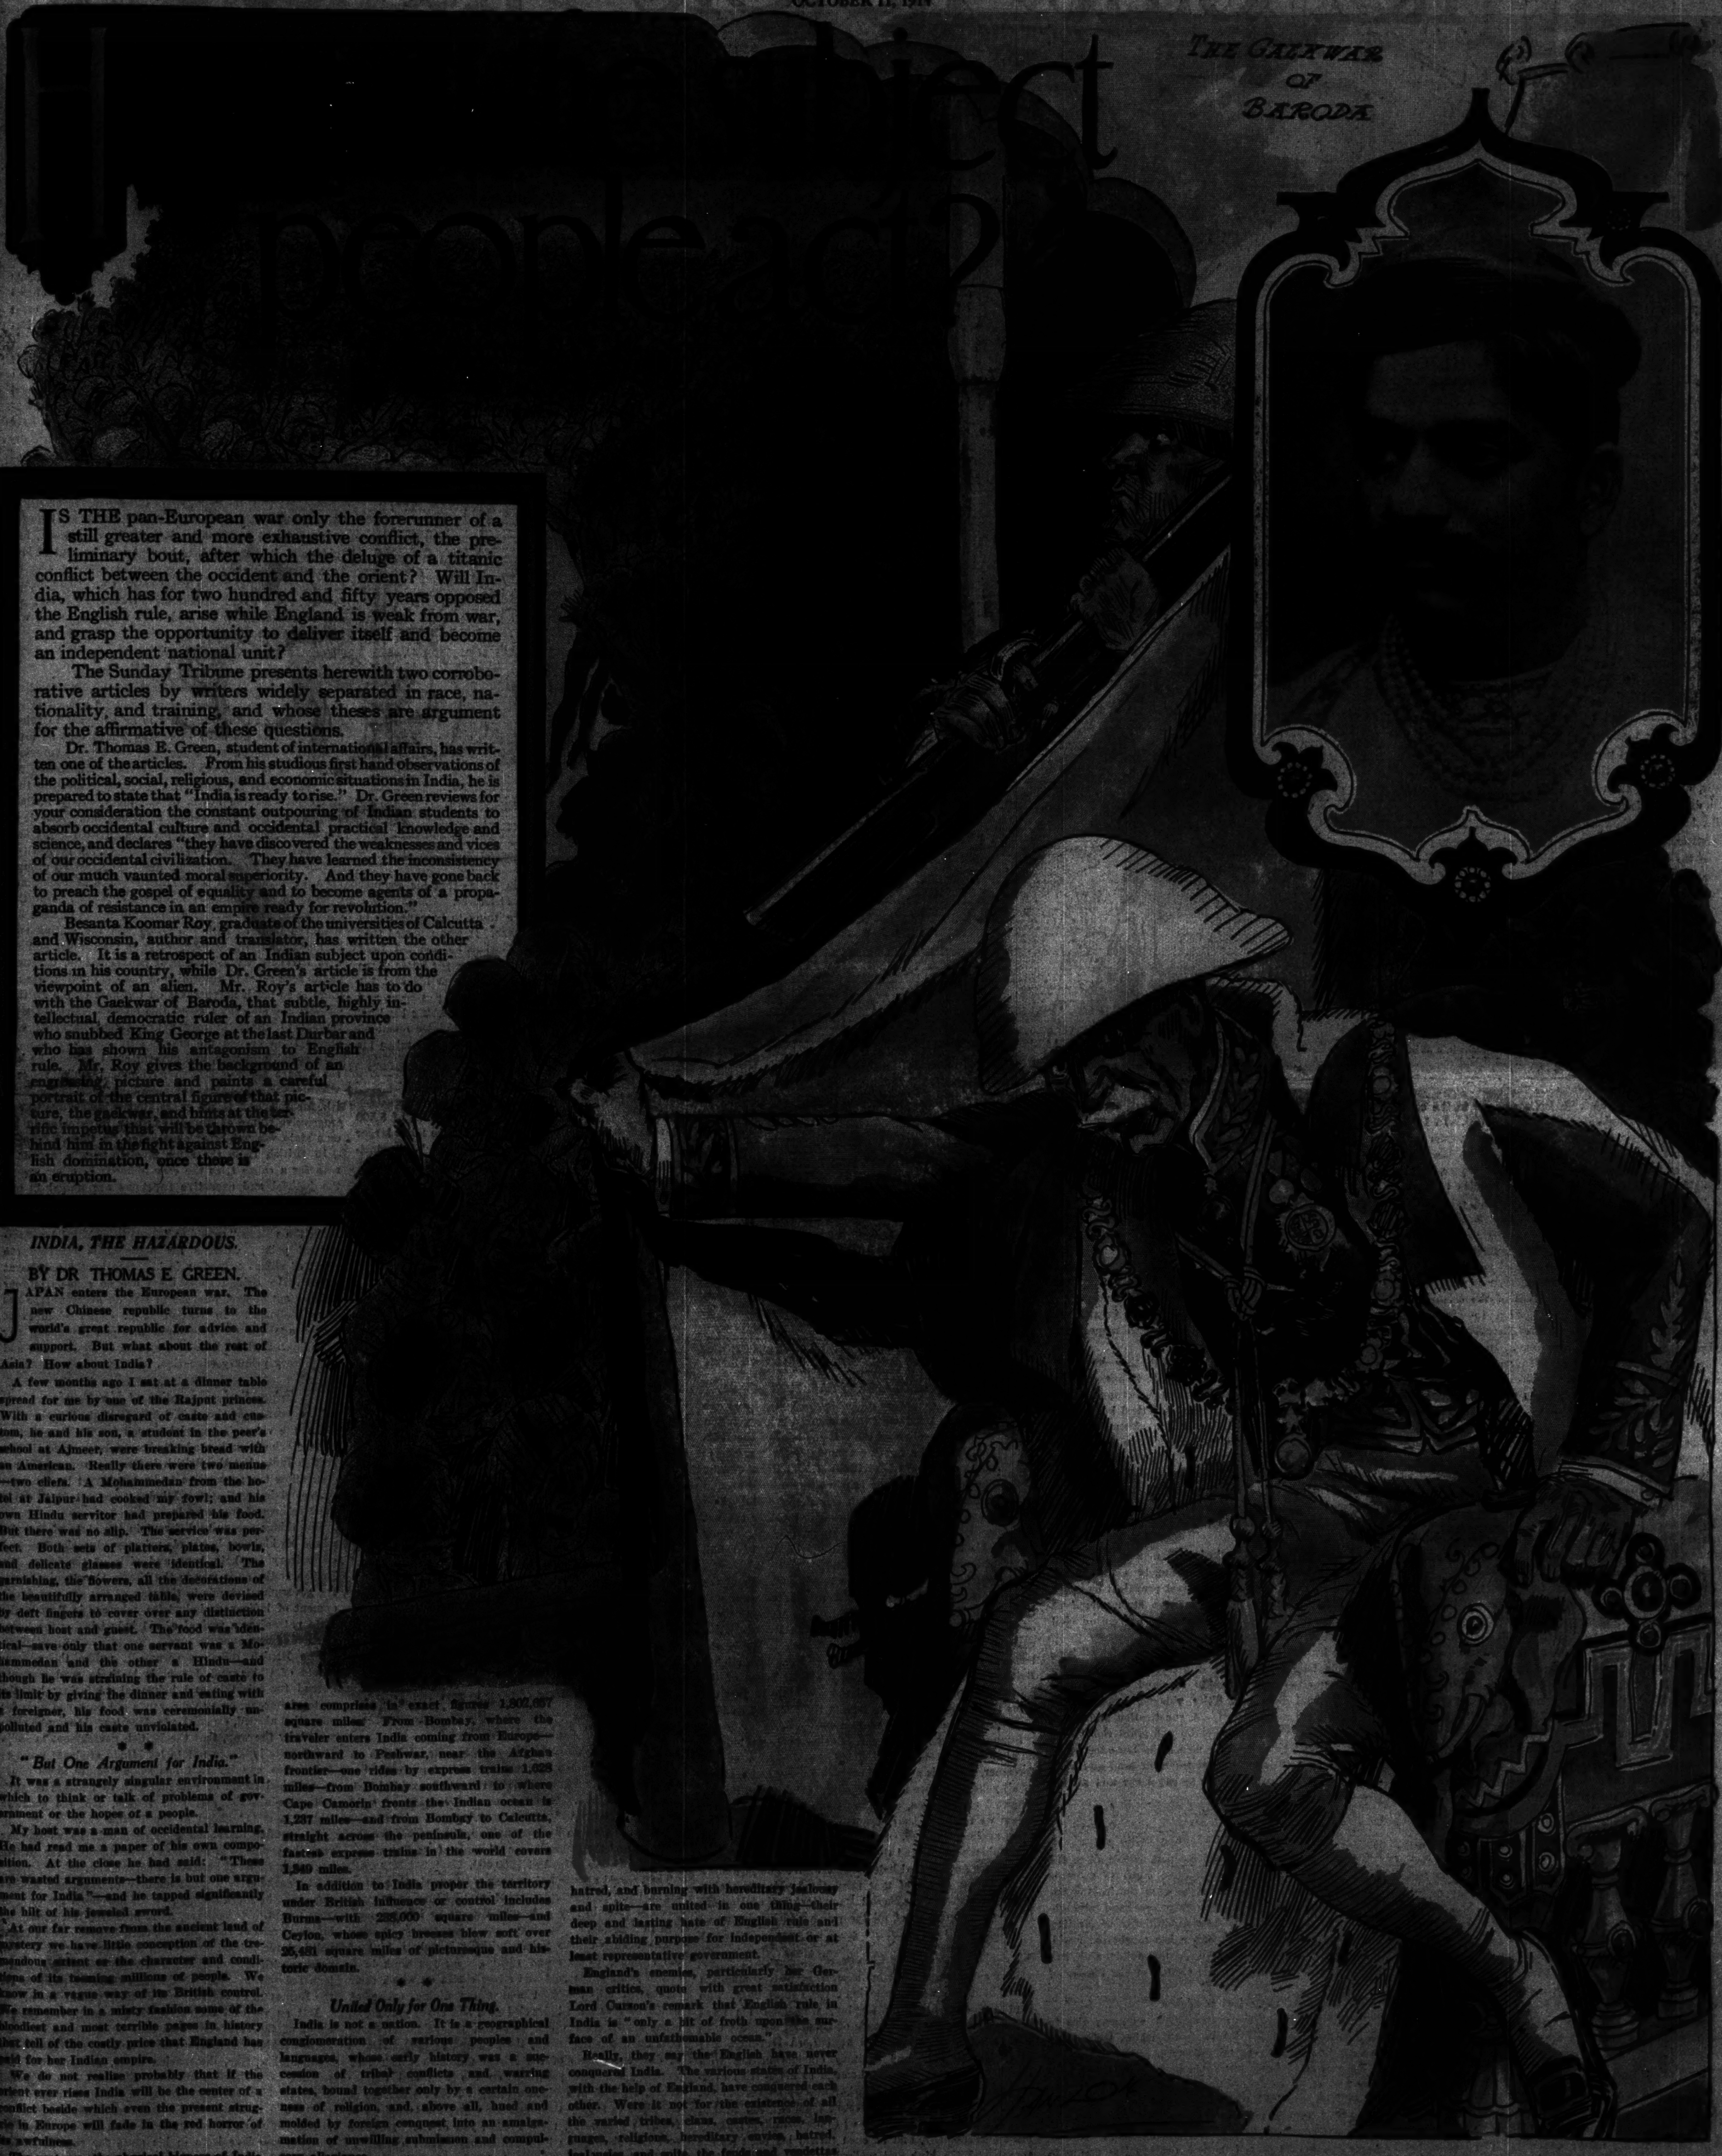
[illegible]ject people act?



IS THE pan-European war only the forerunner of a still greater and more exhaustive conflict, the preliminary bout, after which the deluge of a titanic conflict between the occident and the orient? Will India, which has for two hundred and fifty years opposed the English rule, arise while England is weak from war, and grasp the opportunity to deliver itself and become an independent national unit?

The Sunday Tribune presents herewith two corroborative articles by writers widely separated in race, nationality, and training, and whose theses are argument for the affirmative of these questions.

Dr. Thomas E. Green, student of international affairs, has written one of the articles. From his studious first hand observations of the political, social, religious, and economic situations in India, he is prepared to state that "India is ready to rise." Dr. Green reviews for your consideration the constant outpouring of Indian students to absorb occidental culture and occidental practical knowledge and science, and declares "they have discovered the weaknesses and vices of our occidental civilization. They have learned the inconsistency of our much vaunted moral superiority. And they have gone back to preach the gospel of equality and to become agents of a propaganda of resistance in an empire ready for revolution."

Besanta Koomar Roy, graduate of the universities of Calcutta and Wisconsin, author and translator, has written the other article. It is a retrospect of an Indian subject upon conditions in his country, while Dr. Green's article is from the viewpoint of an alien. Mr. Roy's article has to do with the Gaekwar of Baroda, that subtle, highly intellectual, democratic ruler of an Indian province who snubbed King George at the last Durbar and who has shown his antagonism to English rule. Mr. Roy gives the background of an engrossing picture and paints a careful portrait of the central figure of that picture, the gaekwar, and hints at the terrific impetus that will be thrown behind him in the fight against English domination, once there is an eruption.

INDIA, THE HAZARDOUS.

BY DR THOMAS E. GREEN.

JAPAN enters the European war. The new Chinese republic turns to the world's great republic for advice and support. But what about the rest of Asia? How about India?

A few months ago I sat at a dinner table spread for me by one of the Rajput princes. With a curious disregard of caste and custom, he and his son, a student in the peer's school at Ajmeer, were breaking bread with an American. Really there were two menus—two chefs. A Mohammedan from the hotel at Jaipur had cooked my fowl; and his own Hindu servitor had prepared his food. But there was no slip. The service was perfect. Both sets of platters, plates, bowls, and delicate glasses were identical. The garnishing, the flowers, all the decorations of the beautifully arranged table, were devised by deft fingers to cover over any distinction between host and guest. The food was identical—save only that one servant was a Mohammedan and the other a Hindu—and though he was straining the rule of caste to its limit by giving the dinner and eating with a foreigner, his food was ceremonially unpolluted and his caste unviolated.

"But One Argument for India."

It was a strangely singular environment in which to think or talk of problems of government or the hopes of a people.

My host was a man of occidental learning. He had read me a paper of his own composition. At the close he had said: "These are wasted arguments—there is but one argument for India"—and he tapped significantly the hilt of his jeweled sword.

At our far remove from the ancient land of mystery we have little conception of the tremendous extent or the character and conditions of its teeming millions of people. We know in a vague way of its British control. We remember in a misty fashion some of the bloodiest and most terrible pages in history that tell of the costly price that England has paid for her Indian empire.

We do not realize probably that if the orient ever rises India will be the center of a conflict beside which even the present struggle in Europe will fade in the red horror of its awfulness.

The vastness, the physical bigness of India is something we scarcely grasp. In dimension, in area, in the discordant disparity of its population, it is a world in itself. Its area comprises in exact figures 1,802,657 square miles. From Bombay, where the traveler enters India coming from Europe—northward to Peshwar, near the Afghan frontier—one rides by express trains 1,628 miles—from Bombay southward to where Cape Camorin fronts the Indian ocean is 1,237 miles—and from Bombay to Calcutta, straight across the peninsula, one of the fastest express trains in the world covers 1,349 miles.

In addition to India proper the territory under British influence or control includes Burma—with 238,000 square miles—and Ceylon, whose spicy breezes blow soft over 25,481 square miles of picturesque and historic domain.

United Only for One Thing.

India is not a nation. It is a geographical conglomeration of various peoples and languages, whose early history was a succession of tribal conflicts and warring states, bound together only by a certain oneness of religion, and, above all, hued and molded by foreign conquest into an amalgamation of unwilling submission and compulsory allegiance.

Three hundred and fifty million of heterogeneous humanity—of diverse and contending creeds, divided by caste and clan and tribal hatred, and burning with hereditary jealousy and spite—are united in one thing—their deep and lasting hate of English rule and their abiding purpose for independent or at least representative government.

England's enemies, particularly her German critics, quote with great satisfaction Lord Curzon's remark that English rule in India is "only a bit of froth upon the surface of an unfathomable ocean."

Really, they say the English have never conquered India. The various states of India, with the help of England, have conquered each other. Were it not for the existence of all the varied tribes, clans, castes, races, languages, religions, hereditary envies, hatred, jealousies, and spite, the feuds and vendettas bequeathed from generation to generation, that have filled India with a perpetual tumult of discord, treachery, and betrayal, her enemies allege that England would have never obtained the overlordship of Hindustan.

England, on the other hand, insists that her Indian policy has been humanitarian in the last degree, and if not disinterested, which her stoutest advocate could scarcely claim, has at least kept constantly in view the uplifting and development of her millions of Indian subjects.

She points to the fact that she has, first of all, given to the native princes of India the benefit of experienced "residents," experts in every line of governmental method, who have taught these rulers modern business methods, how to levy and collect taxes, utilize and husband revenues, how to enact laws and administer justice.

She has, besides this, trained the native soldiery and developed to an extreme the military pomp and ceremony so dear to the heart of an oriental potentate.

She has introduced modern invention and system into the industry of the country; or, rather, by such introduction she has developed industry and productiveness. By irrigation and by scientific agriculture she has marvelously increased the yield of the land and in a far more lasting fashion than by charity or relief has largely eliminated the famine that was the constant, haunting menace of India's sun baked soil. By sanitation, and alike by hygenic teaching and legislation, she has reduced the constant peril of plague and pestilence.

She has developed the ancient arts and crafts of the people, and upon them as a basis has built a fabric of up to date manufacturing.

She has popularised education, reduced illiteracy and superstition, and by all these and such means has improved the condition of the people.

She has built modern cities, founded great civic institutions, established universities, constructed and is operating 33,000 miles of modern railways and over 70,000 miles of telegraph wires and cables.

All of these things and innumerable others of like value England has done in India. Even her most violent critics and enemies cannot underestimate her stupendous accomplishment. But to the Indian revolutionary, or "reformer," as he calls himself, all these things are built, not into the native life, but upon it. India's constant grievance is that she is being exploited for Britain's gain.

Commercial Enterprises Launched.

England's first contact with India was, as in the case of most of her dominions overseas, commercial. In 1601 Queen Elizabeth issued a charter to "The Governor and Company of Merchants of London, trading to the East Indies," and ten years later the mogul emper, Shah Jahangir, proclaimed permission to the English to establish "factories" at Ahmedabad, Surat, and other cities in his domain. In accord with the immemorial custom of England, these "companies" of royal charter, in return for governmental shares in profits, were entitled to the protection of royal might on land and sea.

Portugal and France, both mighty then as sea powers, and as contenders for the rich spoil of the orient, had established themselves in like fashion in Hindustan. For a century and a half the wars of Europe were fought on Indian soil and in Indian waters. In 1748 a treaty at far away Aix-la-Chapelle gave Madras to the victorious English as spoil from France. Then, as now, England was mighty, because of her sea power, and England's dominancy in India today is largely the fruit of her naval ascendency.

Of her dealings with Indian rulers and peoples there are many chapters that make stern and unpleasant reading.

From the decline of the mogul power at the beginning of the eighteenth century until the close of the Sepoy rebellion in 1858, when the government of India passed from the East India company to the British crown, the history of India was one constant succession of warfare and bloody struggle.

In human life and in actual expenditure, England has paid for every acre of blood stained India over and over again. Aside from the multitudes of British soldiers who "stained the marble palaces of India vermilion with their blood," there have always been the thousands of native warriors willing to serve for pay and prestige. The orient develops the professional soldier—whose "trade is blood"—and the presence now in the great war in Europe of regiments of Sikhs and Ghurkas is by no necessity a proof of their sentimental loyalty to England. Under changed conditions they might as cheerfully fight against England as for her.

England's rule today in India is strongly guarded by her military establishment. Of British troops she maintains a force of 75,897 of all ranks (Statesman's Year Book, 1914), its units assigned for fourteen years of continuous Indian service. Of native troops, whose superior officers are all British, there are 165,000, together with a volunteer, or militia, establishment of 40,000—almost entirely European or Eurasian—that is, half breed. Of the native army 35 per cent are Mohammedan and 65 per cent are Hindu.

But India's army is but a small fragment among her teeming millions. It is the masses of the people who are dissatisfied, and it is in obedience to the will of these masses that England faces the constant menace of disloyalty on the part of her native soldiery.

India's grievance is the time old one of subject peoples. She might easily subscribe our declaration of 1776.

Empire Ripe for Revolution.

More recent years have brought a change. The civilization of the west has been transplanted in the east. Bombay and Calcutta are great European cities, aside from their teeming native quarters. The largest hotel in the world is in Bombay. The tremendous railroad systems of India are as finely equipped as any on earth. Telegraph and telephone wires reach the uttermost corners of native states. Electric lights gleam in temple courts, and among the mud huts of squalid villages. The native newspaper is everywhere, and in no place save Japan have I seen more book shops.

All this England has done—but in the doing she has stored up wrath to come. The "magic" of the occident has become a twice told tale.

Another thing England has done, and in the doing has hatched peril. For years thousands of young men, Hindu and Moslem, have been coming to Europe for study in its universities and training in its great technical schools. They came with a natural respect for occidental superiority and prowess.

They have acquired liberal training—they have become the most dangerous of all possible things—a combination of oriental shrewdness and unscrupulous sagacity, with intellectual culture and practical knowledge. But they have discovered, too, the weakness and the vices of occidental civilization. They have learned by actual experience the inconsistency of much of our vaunted moral superiority. And they have gone back to India, thousands of them, to preach to their people the gospel of equality, and to become the agents of a propaganda of resistance in an empire ripe for revolution.

A few months ago I talked with men in India representing every phase of its strangely contradictory life. All admitted deep seated unrest prevalent on every side. English officers argued for the strong hand of military control as alone the means of preventing civil war between classes and castes.

Native leaders told me that India's "prosperity" kept its people half famished in destitution, while it paid great profits to stockholders in England. And I saw sights in mud huts and filthy villages, whose awful squalor I shall never forget. A constitution and a native parliament these leaders claim will grant rights now denied. They say that white men make laws for white men. Big companies own vast tracts of land and keep thousands at starvation wages to pay large and attractive dividends.

Silence Genius of the Orient.

The thing that England, and for that matter all of the great powers of Europe, would give much to know is whether there is any concordat between the leading nations of the orient. That secretiveness and absolute taciturnity are most valuable characteristics of strategy is the one great lesson that Japan has taught the world. Witness the grip of the censor on the unfortunate war correspondent and the hermetic closure of the theater of battle.

The genius of the orient is silence.

It is scarcely conceivable that with so many ties to bind them the nations of Asia should neglect the esoteric organizations of an oriental zollverein.

By reason of her remarkable advance and her military and naval success, Japan is the natural leader in oriental unrest. With all Europe at war Japan's veterans and India's regiments of trained native soldiers might easily sweep Asia into absolute control. It only needs the genius of a twentieth century Tamerlane to turn a new page in human history.

The German emperor startled the world with his cartoon warning against "the yellow peril." It is the irony of fate that he should feel the thrust of its challenge.

Is the orient ready to rise against the west? A day changes the front of the world. Only the event can decide.

THE GAEKWAR OF BARODA.

BY BASANTA KOOMAR ROY.

EXACTLY two score and seventeen years ago our fathers in Hindustan were engaged in a revolution to rid themselves of the octopus hold of the British Raj. The fighting cannibals—for warfare is nothing short of civilized cannibalism—fought well. The revolution on the Hindu side centered around Bahadur Sah, the Mohammedan emperor of Delhi. The common enmity of the British brought together the not too friendly Hindus and the Mohammedans. They fought side by side to safeguard the integrity of Delhi, a city of sacred memories to both.

The revolution failed, for some Hindu princes and the Sikh soldiers sided with the British. The emperor was banished to Burma, where he died. The Mohammedans of India a few years ago petitioned the British-Indian government for permission to bring back to India the bones of the buried Emperor Bahabur Sah. The mighty British Raj was afraid even of the dead bones of the Mogul emperor, so he rejected the petition. In just the same spirit they sent out to Burma the bones of Buddha discovered in India a few years ago.

Suppose there is another revolution in India today—another attempt to free India from the yoke of the foreigner, which is generally supposed to be the heaviest of all yokes; suppose the impending "peril of the British empire" materializes, and the Hindu revolutionaries of whom we read and hear so much about actually take up arms against England. Suppose again that the Hindus, the Mohammedans, and the Sikhs unite and make a common cause for national independence. Who do you think would be the center of that revolution? Most probably his royal highness Sir Sayoji Rao, Gaekwar of Baroda, the most progressive of all the princes of Hindustan.

Slights King George at Durbar.

It was this prince who caused such a commotion throughout the world, who kept the cables busy, who kept the cinematograph playing, who kept his most gracious majesty King George of England sleepless with a sense of humiliation, who kept Lord Hardinge and other British civil and military officials boiling with rage by not properly doing homage to his British overlord during the last royal Durbar at Delhi. He did not salaam his majesty in true court fashion. He walked jauntily, swinging a cane, bowed to his Britannic majesty most perfunctorily, and at once turned his back on the throne and the king and walked to his seat in a right royally dignified mien.

Such an insult could not be pardoned. The British people and the papers were indignant, and cried out curses on the maharaja. The high British officials in India and England seriously thought of deposing him. But they at once remembered that his highness was the most popular of all the princes in India; that if he were deposed the Indian revolt that seemed to be brewing would be hastened by many years. They thought it would be better to force him to apologize. Consequently Lord Hardinge pressed him for an apology.

The gaekwar couched the language of his forced apology in a very diplomatic way. The supposed insult he attributed to "nervous confusion," and the people of Hindustan smiled.

The London Times added fuel to the flames of British rage by reminding its readers that at various periods since attaining his majority—the gaekwar received his ruling powers in 1881—his highness has shown a tendency to disregard the duties imposed upon himself by the relations of the state of Baroda to the supreme government. But it is only since 1905—the year of the beginning of the present troubles in India—that his conduct has been open to very serious strictures.

Nervous confusion was not a thing to be expected in so fearless a man as the gaekwar. It was reported that in the earlier stages of the Durbar he insulted Lord Hardinge, the viceroy, as well, for when the latter drove into the arena this maharaja "rose from his seat for barely a moment, as his excellency's carriage passed, and then reseated himself, ostentatiously stretching his legs, while every one else in the vast amphitheater remained standing till the governor general had himself taken his seat."

Poor Boy Becomes a Croesus.

The Gaekwar of Baroda rules over an area of 8,500 square miles; that is, an area of 185 square miles larger than that of the state of Massachusetts. The principality has a population of about 2,000,000 people.

The gaekwar, as a boy, was a very poor man's son, remotely related to the house of the gaekwars. But it so happened that his predecessor Malhar Rao, was deposed for having made an attempt to poison Col. Phayre, the British official "resident" in Baroda, with a cup of pomelo juice mixed with ground diamonds. After the deposition the widow of the deposed maharaja's brother was given the right of adoption, and she adopted the present gaekwar, then a boy of only eleven summers.

By careful tutoring and training that poor boy has risen to be the most progressive of all the potentates of Hindustan, and he has an annual revenue of $6,000,000 at his absolute control. In other words, he has an income of about $18,000 a day. But out of this sum of $6,000,000 he takes about $400,000 a year for his household expenses; the rest, minus expenses, he spends on making improvements in his state and in bettering the economic and intellectual condition of the people under his charge.

This is the maharaja that can help you to materialize your dreams of the Arabian Nights tales in his Laxmi Vilas palace in the city of Baroda. This is the most prominent of all his many palaces scattered in the different parts of his state and of India. Here, amid incredible pomp and splendor, he spends his days with his royal consort, Chinnabai, and a family of three sons. His only daughter, Princess Indria, is married to the Maharaja of Coochbehar.

The gaekwar has hundreds of servants; corps of wrestlers, musicians, jugglers, nautch girls, and professional entertainers of other kinds. He occasionally indulges in seeing elephant, buffalo, or bull fights. But his humane instincts do not allow any of these to grow sanguinary.

Has "Arabian Nights" Palace.

As you walk towards the palace your attention is bound to be attracted by the cannons that glitter in the sun. You, no doubt, would take them to be gold plated. But they are not. These cannons are made of solid gold. And they weigh 280 pounds each. The companions, the wagons for ammunition, the harness for the bullocks, and the ramrods, are all made of sterling silver. The cannons are valued at $500,000.

Then would appear before your eyes a majestic palace, larger, more profusely decorated, and with more delicate carvings than in any palace in Europe or in any mansion in America.

The beauty of the palace without is only a hint of the splendor to be found within. As you walk in a dream you see the gold and silver chairs on which their highnesses sit, the gold and silver dining tables at which they eat, the bejeweled gold and silver plates and other dishes from which they eat, the gold and silver beds on which they sleep, the gold and bejeweled images of different deities of the Hindu pantheon which they worship, the rare paintings on the wall and the invaluable pieces of sculpture brought from all corners of the globe to satisfy their esthetic taste, the trappings of fabulous prices—all these remind you of the "gorgeous east that showers on its kings barbaric pearl and gold."

His highness owns one of the rarest collections of jewels and precious stones—his family heirloom. The total value of the Baroda state jewels has been variously estimated at between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000. There are swords and scabbards set with precious stones; there are robes and turbans made of pearls and diamonds and sapphires. There are three huge pearls worth $100,000. The pearl necklace of her highness the maharani is valued at about $1,000,000. Her sash of one hundred rows of pearls with a tassel of emeralds and pearls is worth about $500,000. The diamond necklace of his highness, in which is to be found the famous 125 carat "Star of the South" stone that once belonged to Napoleon III., is valued at $1,200,000.

When his highness is in full official regalia the jewels on him from crown to slippers are worth not less than $3,750,000. To crown all, there is the famous pearl carpet made by Khande Rao, one of the former gaekwars of Baroda. It is ten and one-half feet long and six feet wide, with an eleven inch border. The central design is made of diamonds, and the carpet is woven of strings of pearls of varied colors to bring out a marvelous color effect so characteristic of the oriental designers. It took the best artists three years to finish the carpet, the price of which is estimated at between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000. Khande Rao, gaekwar, had this made, it is rumored, to be sent as a present of love to a certain Mohammedan woman in Mecca who infatuated him. But the scandal of the Hindu prince falling in love with a Mohammedan woman was so great and it was aired so far and wide that the carpet was never sent out to Mecca.

Gaekwar Loved by His People.

His highness, the present gaekwar of Baroda, lives amidst all these things of luxury, but he himself is not luxury loving in the least; nor is he attached to things that constitute his daily life. The things that he loves the most are books and magazines, and he is a voracious reader. It is not his pomp that elicits admiration for the man, but it his political and economic idealism that has captivated the hearts of the progressively inclined millions of men and women of Hindustan. And it is his antagonism, direct or indirect, to British supremacy that has enshrined him in the hearts of the people.

This antagonism is nothing more than just an antagonism of principles. The British raj still seeks and expects to keep India in medieval darkness. But this enlightened and modernized potentate wants to flood her with the light of both the rising and the setting sun. So his conflict with the British is as the conflict of light with darkness. Wherever light can penetrate, darkness has to seek relief in absorption or total extinction. Hence there is so much nervousness on the part of the British officials and statesmen about this modern mahajara who refuses to cringe in sycophancy before imported emperors from beyond the seas.

In social, economic, and governmental reforms he has set a pace for the British government. The reforms which the Hindu politicians have been begging the British for the last thirty years, but without avail, this progressive prince of Baroda has been introducing in his own state without being even asked for them.

In British India the same magistrate who arrests a man for a crime tries the case himself; in other words, the judicial and executive functions are united in one person. The gaekwar has separated these two functions for efficient administration of justice. In British India the village "republics" have been killed by shortsighted policy, whereas his highness is reviving the spirit of village autonomy in his state by the panchayat system. In British India there are no schools in four villages out of five, whereas in Baroda every village has its schoolhouse. In British India eighty children of school age out of a hundred are going without any schooling at all for lack of a system of free schools and compulsory primary education.

Prince Seeks Education of His People.

Two years ago Gopal Krishna Gokhale introduced a bill in the viceroy's imperial council for the introduction of free schools and, gradually, compulsory education in British India, but the British Indian government did not even allow the proposition to be considered by the committee, claiming that the Hindus were not fit to enjoy the blessings of free schools.

But things are quite different in the state of Baroda, where his highness has made primary education free and compulsory for both boys and girls of the state. In British India, as it was in the North American colonies, the government stands in the way of the rise and development of indigenous industries, whereas in Baroda the state patronizes a revival of old industries or the introduction of new ones.

The British Indian government, unlike the governments of China and Japan, is loath to send students abroad for scientific and industrial education; but the state of Baroda, every year, sends out boys and girls for education abroad, especially to America. It may be mentioned, by the way, that the British government in India is using its influence not to let Hindu students come to America—a country that has some definite ideas about monorchical forms of government. In matters of agriculture, education, and land reform, too, the gaekwar maharaja is far ahead of the British raj.

No wonder that such a ruler should be so popular with the people of Hindustan; no wonder that the British government should hesitate to depose him.

The gaekwar is a great admirer of American institutions, and he looks to America for lessons in the form of government. He believes, as most of the intelligent and informed men of India believe, that, in case of significant political reconstruction of that vast country of diverse races, multitudinous creeds, and varied languages, American federalism would be the only effective solution for the formation of the future United States of India.

But as we cast an optimistic glance in the roseate scroll of the future we feel that at any rate the way he is working for India's national unity, advocating one national language, denouncing caste, and uplifting the pariahs to a higher plane of civilization, the impartial way in which he is employing in his state men of all castes and creeds from all parts of India, the way he is advocating an industrial revolution, the way he is reforming marriage laws in his state for eugenic betterment, and, above all, the way in which currents of thought are changing these things and forging ahead throughout India, it is easy to predict that he may yet be spared to play a nobler and a more patriotic part on a gigantic scale to change the trend of world politics.

Mountainous waves of liberty and democracy are dashing all over India. Who else but the Almighty can stem the tide of such waves, and the signs are quite plain that he is with us.

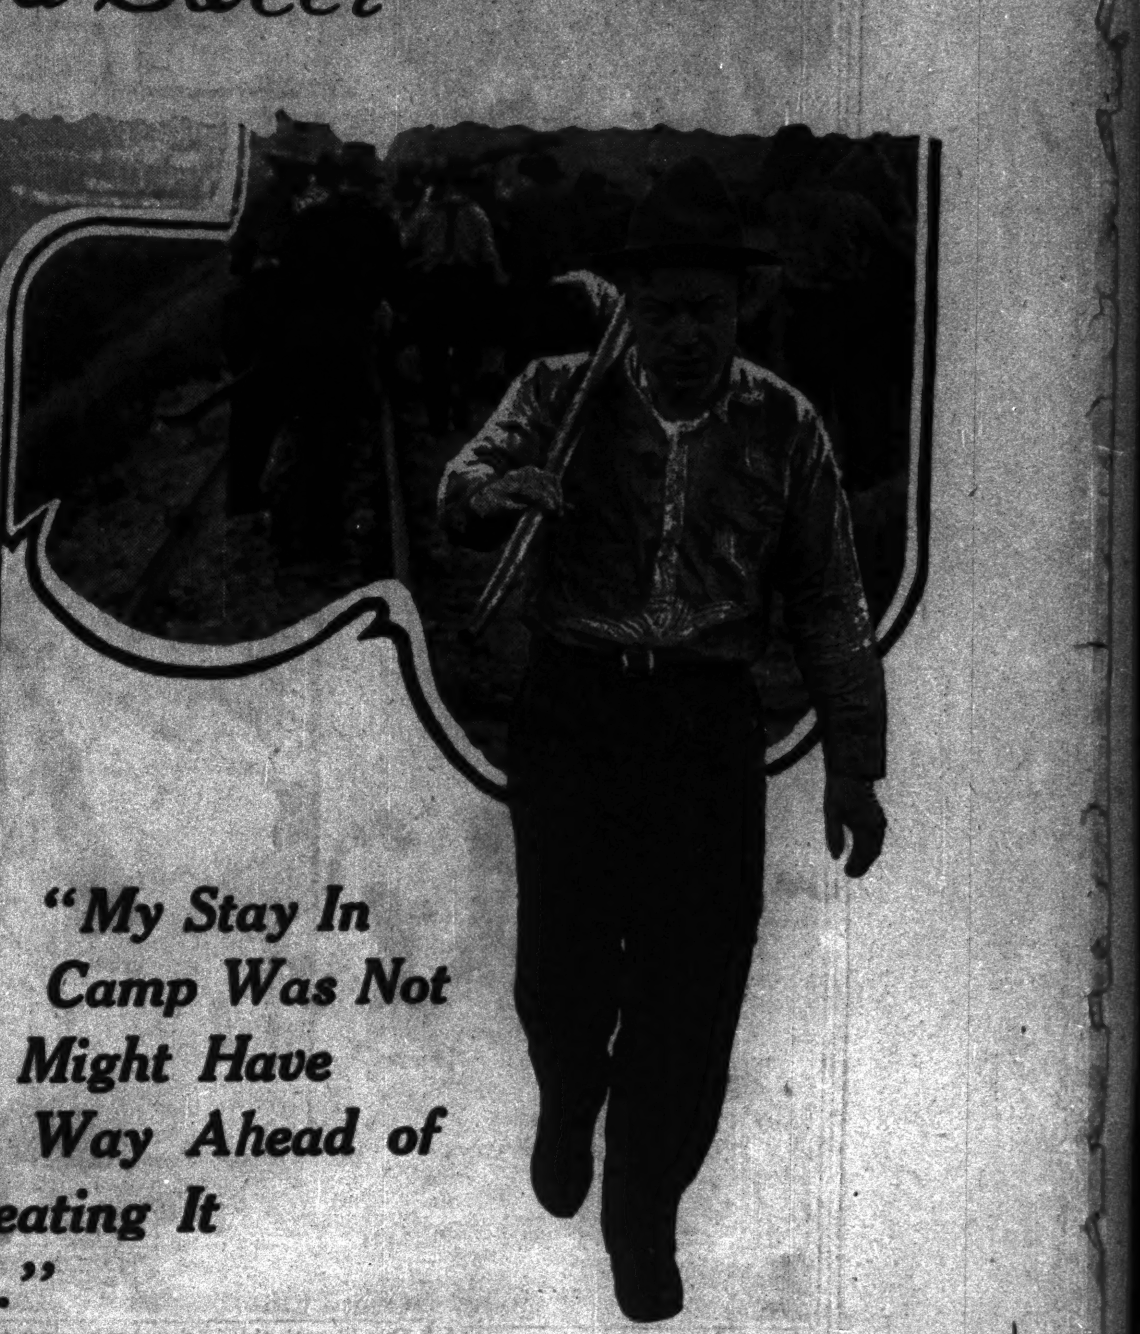
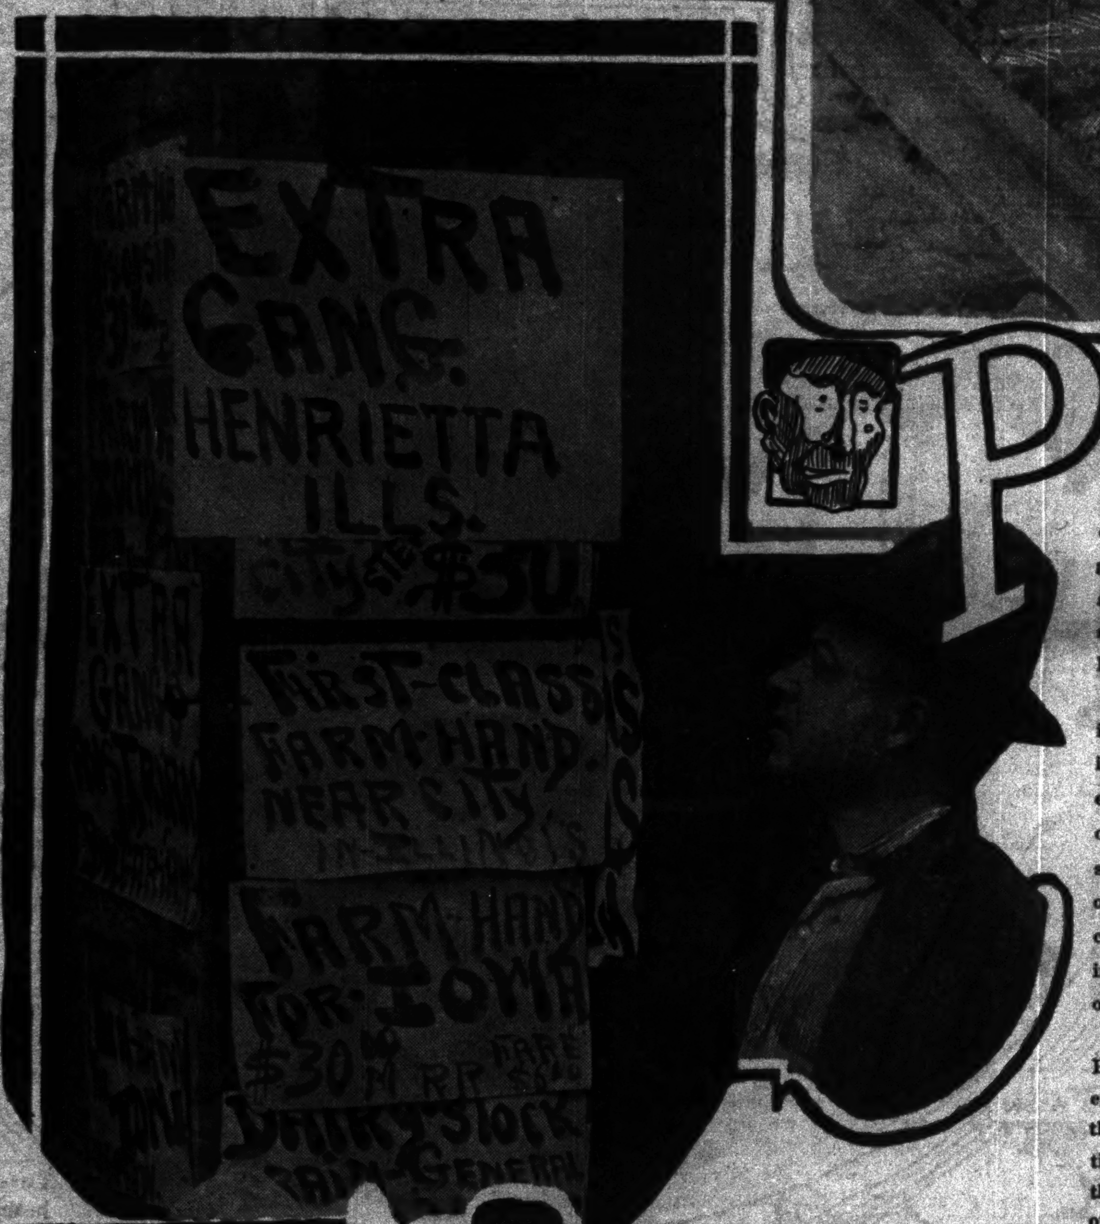
"Shipping out" with a Gang

by Oney Fred Sweet



"My Stay In Camp Was Not as Long as It Might Have Been. I Was Way Ahead of the Rest in Beating It Back to 'Chi'."



EXTRA GANG. HENRIETTA ILLS.
FIRST-CLASS FARM-HAND NEAR CITY IN ILLINOIS
FARM-HAND FOR IOWA $30 M RR FARE DAIRY STOCK
GENERAL

"YOU'VE GOT TO EARN YOUR DOLLAR SIXTY A DAY."

PETROGRAD did not "ship out" with our gang. I did not encounter him among the groups studying the pink and green, rough lettered signs in front of the Canal street employment agencies. He was not with our bunch that listlessly filled the car to capacity as the train pulled us "somewhere west." Petrograd was aleady busy with pick and crowbar when, after passing through farming country, with stops every six miles or so for small towns, we at last arrived at Henrietta, Ill.

It was when we chanced to be working side by side in removing a steel rail that Petrograd started jabbering at me. I glanced up to see an expression of interest in his eyes—his eyes that match the pale blue color of his faded jumper. I looked on down the track to see if the object of his interest might be there, and saw only the autumn touched fields of peace and the dull, clouded sky. I was the cause of Petrograd's jabbering in a foreign tongue, and, not being able to make out one word he was saying, it bothered me.

I think it was half toothless "Hobo Mike" who gave Petrograd his nickname. Of the seventy-one gaunt eyed, stubby bearded men in the gang, 50 per cent of them native born, with a sprinkling of various other nationalities, Petrograd was the only representative of the land of the czar. He was a big fellow, with hair of about the same shade as the dusty goldenrod that had scattered itself among the slough grass a'ong the right of way. Somehow the sun and the wind had failed to put any tan into his white face, and on his upper lip there was a whitish mustache that apparently had never yet been given a setback with a razor. There in the quiet of the Illinois prairie he made one think of Cossacks and wolf chased sleighs.

It was the passing of trains that made trying the work that we men were doing—we men hitherto unknown to each other, who had been attracted by the same pink sign in front of a Chicago employment agency, and were now to be thrown together, and know only each other's companionship, for a matter of weeks. The coming of a train meant the hurrying into place of a block long strip of steel. You have ridden along in your seat "on the cushions" and seen us waiting on either side of the track as you whissed by. My stay with the gang was not as long as it might have been, and it was Petrograd who was to blame.

We were no less listless upon our arrival at Henrietta than we had been on our ride out from Chicago. Aside from the low roofed depot there is in Henrietta but one house and a coal shed. Against the boards of the coal shed, that had become black from lack of paint, there fluttered the tattered remnants of lithographs that early in spring had announced a circus in a neighboring town. The poster was that of a beautiful girl in pale green tights hanging by her knees from a trapeze. With the frost on the surrounding cornfields she looked a bit chilly in her costume, but, looking up from the supper table that night—the oil clothed supper table in the box car on the side track—I could not help but speculate on what an influence she would have among the seventy-one isolated men, could she get down off her trapeze, put on a few clothes, crawl under the barbed wire fence, come over, and, going from cup to cup, pour out our coffee.

We worked about a mile and a half down the level right of way from where our row of hotel box cars stood sidetracked.

"I see this is the first time you've been out with a gang," said the foreman close beside me, as we began to scatter out. "An old timer at this game'll pick up the tool that he is used to the minute he gets on the job. I hope you ain't one of those guys that's shipped out just to get free carfare. You got your number at the commissary, didn't you? I guess I'll get you busy adzing the old ties off. No loafing, now!

The foreman waited until I got started, and then passed on down the track, where for the distance of a block backs were bent busy at bolting and spiking the newly laid steel.

"Yes," commented "Pittsburgh Slim," who worked next to me, "and when this three weeks' job is up, this boy'll have several little dollar and sixties saved up."

"What then?" I asked.

"What then?" he poohed at my unsophistication. "Why, I'll beat it back to Chi."

No Future; No Worries.

I was somewhat behind the rest of the gang when the water carrier came along. He was not an old man, but his uncombed hair was gray. In spite of the stories that all "floaters" tell about the high places they once had in life, on the rare occasions when you can get them to talk, there was something about the man with the two pails of water, balanced across his shoulders with a stick, that instinctively gave one the impression that he had indeed seen far better days.

"Have a little H2O?" he invited, as he paused in front of me.

He understood the questioning look in my eyes as I handed the tin cup back to him.

"Don't say it," he demanded, his original pleasant smile vanishing. "I know what you were going to say. Every new timekeeper and foreman has asked me the same question since I have been out with these floater steel gangs, and I've been out with 'em for the last ten years. You were going to ask me how I happened to be working at such a job. That's my business. Maybe I might be asking the same question of you, but I won't."

"Ten years," I echoed. "This is my first experience. Is this gang pretty much like all the others?"

"All just alike," he answered. "A bunch of what you might call defeated, but more or less reconciled human beings, without any home ties whatsoever. We never know what it is to mix with any of the people in the towns where we are sidetracked for a month or six weeks at a stretch. There is no future before us—there can't be. This winter we probably won't have anything to do at all except shovel a little snow. It just means drifting from one gang to another. 'Shipping out,' blowing in our money, and 'shipping out' again. We may not get much out of life, but at least we've quit worrying. We leave that to the president of the road."

The Retreat from Petrograd.

It was nearing quitting time when, with a grove of sycamores for a picturesque background, we strung out like an army of soldiers, resting on picks and crowbars, waiting for a train to go by. A flock of crows "cawed" just above us. A prosperous farmer in a distant pasture could be heard calling to his stock. The foreigners of the gang—finding it difficult to become Americanized—bunched by themselves and talked about—well, you can search me. Some one sitting on the tool car pulled from his pocket a newspaper two days old, and I saw Petrograd start to crowd up about the quickly formed circle of readers.

"What you crowding up for? There's only one picture to look at," kidded one of the men as he pushed the paper outside Petrograd's line of vision, and then the man who held the paper began philosophizing on the European conflict. It was his final opinion, I remember, that the whole thing was "a mere money transaction." The causes of the war were argued in detail, and I guess they were as correct in their conclusions as any bunch of men is apt to be.

There was a darkness over the cornfields by the time we reached our box car homes. Inside the box car dining room the old fashioned lamps attached to the side of the wall had to be lighted. It was after supper and "Detroit Dick" had risen from the table to roll a cigaret in the peculiar way that "Detroit Dick" has of rolling cigarets—manipulating the tobacco and paper between his fingers without even glancing in the direction of the process—that the seventy-one "floaters" seated themselves in groups in the various box car hotel lobbies. It was at one of these groups that I suddenly came upon Petrograd as the center of interest. The men's backs were toward me, and I was in the shadow of the smoky chimneyed lamp. From beneath the blankets of his bunk Petrograd had excitedly pulled forth a newspaper.

"Well, come on," muttered one of the men. "I'm anxious to see what you've been jabbering about all day."

From my unnoticed position I saw the brilliancy in the Russian's eyes as he unfolded the newspaper and pointed to the picture thereon. Just for the instant I saw what the paper contained and the picture to which he pointed. It was the story of one of my previous adventures!

There was a minute or two of silence as the men clutched for the paper to give closer inspection.

"I'll be damned if he ain't right," exclaimed one of the men. "That's the same guy that joined camp with the bunch today. O, just wait till he gets out on the job with us tomorrow!"

"What car's he in now?" burst in another.

What else was said as the result of Petrograd's discovery I am not in a position to record, for I had slipped out of the side door and had permitted myself to be swallowed up by the darkness. When, three long hours later, I entered another box car it was not of the sidetrack variety. It was moving along in the direction of Chicago.

Of All Our Social Institutions MARRIAGE Is The Most Maligned

— Says —

DORIS BLAKE

IS married life worth living, or, as modern novelist and playwrights would have us believe, is marriage the door that leads poor, deluded mortals back to earth? Is Hymen a hangman? And his henchman, Cupid—is he an evil spirit roaming the world corralling unsuspecting souls and leading them in hordes to be slaughtered on the matrimonial scaffold? Is marriage, as matrimonial anarchists claim, an invention of the devil, or is marriage not the most maligned social institution on earth? Is it not our most neglected profession?

Do we not allow statistics on divorce to provoke pessimism that blinds us to the fact that the numbers of those who do not become divorced and are happy in marriage are a huge majority? Are not the scandalous proceedings in the "smart set" responsible for the cloud of doubtful happiness on the matrimonial horizon? Yet, aren't these favored of fortune who behave like silly and wicked youth an extremely small minority?

Since the days of Adam's honeymoon the problem of married life and happiness has been the subject of lively controversy, the butt for the satirist, and the target for the humorist.

Despite its flaws and failures marriage is a glorious institution. It is love's opportunity, not its burden. The marriage bond is not the death blow to courtship—and it is possible to be happy though married.

Nearly All Would Marry Again.

Proof of this I received in abundance when I conducted the contest recently on "Would I marry my mate again?" Out of thousands of replies there were less than 100 dissenting voices. These letters were human experiences, impressions from life itself, singularly free from the monotonous and depressing note of the creatures of imagination of modern playwrights and authors. From human experiences alone true light is thrown on any phase of life. These thousands of human experiences prove beyond a doubt that marriage is a maligned institution; that it is possible to be happy though married if the golden rule "to bear and forbear" be not forgotten.

When marriage is a failure it is only when the great law of self-sacrifice that runs through all nature is ignored by one or both in the marriage contract. You cannot expect blessedness from receiving and never giving. Instead of reckoning in matrimony that you have a right to so much care, service, tenderness, and devotion ask how much service, tenderness, and care you are willing to bestow. That is the secret of conjugal felicity, according to the thousands of testimonies I received and according to every successful marriage that has ever been recorded.

Another truth—a greater one—illuminates these human testimonials. It is that the preservative against marital disaster—one that somehow has gone out of fashion with too many of our young married couples—is religion. Where no account whatever is taken of that tremendous factor which looms so large in the successful marriage there is no means of disentangling difficulties without having recourse to violence against the laws of nature and of God. Religion is the one force that is able to transmute human nature without destroying it.

That the short cut out of the difficulty—divorce—with the searchlight of happiness turned squarely upon it, reveals a condition similar to that of the man who tried to get out of his debts by cutting his throat scores of letters from divorced persons bear undeniable evidence.

"If I had my married life to lead over again," writes one unhappy divorcee, "I would look upon the marriage bond as eternal. Then I would make an effort to avoid quarrels, or, having made them, to make up. With the knowledge that the bond is loose I, like most of my unhappy sisters, quarreled readily and easily, without realising every little quarrel tends toward the dissolution of marriage when the bond is loose. The knowledge that the marriage bond is loose deprives us of that self-restraint and mutual forbearance which builds up character. Twelve miserably unhappy years separated from the man I vowed to love have taught me that out of marriage you get only the happiness you give in it."

Nothing is more true than that measure of happiness in marriage is exactly in accordance with its deserts. Marital happiness, like everything else worth having, must be worked for—must be earned by patient endurance, self-restraint, and loving consideration for the tastes and even for the faults of him or her with whom life is to be lived.

It is the power to make others glad which lights up our own face with joy. It is the power to bear another's burden which lifts the load from our own heart. To foster with vigilant, self-denying care the development of another's life is the surest way to bring into our own joyous, stimulating energy. If you bestow nothing, you will receive nothing. Bear no burden of others and you'll be crushed under your own.

"No man e'er gained a happy life by chance,
Or yawned it into being with a wish."

No magic powder for happiness lies hidden in the marriage certificate, as some young married persons believe, if we may judge by their selfish preoccupation and their utter lack of desire to take any trouble to make happiness for themselves.

Love making would not end with courtship if the practice of courtesy, unselfishness, and thoughtfulness of the engagement period were extended through the years of matrimony. The wife should court her husband's admiration with the pretty wiles that furnished him love dreams. Instead of lessening her charms she should double them in order that home may be to him who has paid her the greatest compliment within his power, the dearest and brightest spot on earth. And he should not only love his wife dearly, but he should tell her he loves her, and tell her often. Of course, the enthusiastic, tempestuous love of courting days will not remain, as a rule. A married couple gradually get to feel toward each other like two partners in a business who are at the same time old and tried friends.

If the science of living harmoniously together were better understood to be the adaptation of the golden rule "to bear and forbear," to bestow rather than to receive, to help bear another's burdens and not to be a burden, it would mean death to the time worn controversy "Is life worth living?"

From Those Who Know.

Is married life worth living? For answer read the following letters from flesh and blood people—men and women who have lived the married life and know whereof they speak:

"Yes, my child! Tell the whole world that I would marry my husband again. Side by side we were for fifty-odd years, through light and shadow, sickness and health, poverty and plenty. Had I the power I would not change one word or act of his. He left me one year ago for the better land. I, in my helpless widowhood, can only sit by my window and live over the happy past. I, alone, can unlock the golden casket that contains such precious memories. Yes, my dear child, tell the world for me that marriage is no failure. I'm nearing the eightieth milestone and I know. "M. M. H."

"You want to know whether I would marry my husband again. For years I have asked myself that question every day. I think by this time I know my mind on the subject. I have asked the question when the day was full of the sunshine of love and happiness. I have asked it when the clouds in the sky of my domestic life seemed filled with tears, and I have even stayed awake nights reviewing all his faults so that I could justify a change in my opinion of him—but all to no purpose. My answer is always: 'I would. Not because I am blind to his faults, nor am I of a clinging, dependent nature. It is because I have not had forty years of close association without finding in him qualities that completely eclipse his shortcomings. I have only to think back over the years I have known to satisfy myself that for every fault he committed there was beside it a compensating virtue.' He couldn't say that much for me even though he loves me dearly. "LYDIA G. W."

"I married her thirty years ago. I've traveled since then in almost every state and in all those thirty years and in all the states I've never seen one that could take her place. She's more my sweetheart today, if possible, than thirty years ago. As a wife, none better! As a mother, a true noble being. And as down life's stream we sail our bark and old Father Time with his sickle and scythe will make our life's journey 75 she and I will still be lovers. 'Until death do us part' she'll be my only sweetheart. So much for a good, true, noble woman. L. L."

"I have just laid my husband to rest after forty years of life together. In all those forty years I never knew when he left the house how he would come back—whether as his own affectionate, intelligent, manly self or the wretched, maudlin monster that drink made him. For days he would go on like other men, attend to business, and be all a wife could ask. Then an evening would come when he would not come for dinner. Then would begin my all night vigil, when he would come stumbling up the steps in the small hours of the morning, when—but I draw the curtain. He had a brilliant mind and would have attained great heights in his profession—that of law. As it was he never had more than enough and often not that. I was forced to give up friends. His own people advised me to leave him. Am I happy that I did not? Because I took him for better or for worse I did not leave him. And because we loved each other. And because he would have sunk to unfathomable depths if I had deserted him. And that is my reward—he made a better fight with my help than he would have without me. And I believe that in the final judgment it's the fight that counts. MRS. T. D."

"Would I marry my husband again? I most certainly would. Why? Because I love him; that's the only reason in the world anybody ought to get married. If they really love the man they marry the thought of life without him is unbearable. No, I'm not still on my honeymoon. We have been married thirteen years; we've raised colicky babies, and we've lost money; we've moved seven times and have had the 'in-laws' (on both sides) live with us at times and seasons. So you see it's the real thing, for even after all this it still is a thrilling experience to go off on a day's trip with my John. And I am still so glad to have him come home at night that he stays when he gets here.

"Of course' he's not perfect, but neither am I, and when the cloudy days come and everything seems to go wrong and you feel a sneaking desire to be a lone, lorn school teaching old maid again, just ask yourself this: 'How would you feel if you knew you'd never see John again?' The first thing you know you'll be in the kitchen making biscuit for his supper and you'll take time to slip into the blue dress he likes.

"The way to be sure you're going to love your husband always is to have him for your friend a long time before you realise the rest. Then such things as separate pocketbooks and the word 'obey' in the marriage ceremony and jealousy and divorce and 'another man' are unknown language to you. 'Would I marry him again?' Yes, if it were necessary, but it isn't. I married him for life and love like ours goes on through eternity. MRS. P. L."

"We have been married eight years this summer and I thought when I married him I loved him as much as any one could, but as the years have unrolled I find our love has grown deeper and broader. I know that he loves me and has always tried to do all he could to make me happy. When I am washing, ironing, and mending I often think what a fortunate woman I am that I am privileged to work for such a man. He never drank and never would go out evenings unless I went with him. When we had been married a month I said, 'Well, we have been married a month today,' and my mother said, 'I have been married thirty years,' and I jokingly said to my husband, 'O, have I got to live with you thirty years?' and now over half that time has gone and it doesn't seem long. It just seems as if I had always had him, that he was a part of my whole life. He has many faults, but so have I. In all our married life we have never had a quarrel. He isn't the 'scrappy' kind, nor am I. We find kindness and a lot of common sense will bridge over the roughest places we have found to cross. C. O. L."

"I would live my married life again because my husband never forgets, although we have been married a long time, that a woman still likes to be told by her husband he loves her even though she knows it; because all the little attentions that were accorded me before we were married are still forthcoming; because I get all the deference I deserve and more; because we have come through hard times and good together, and because I know that, come what may, through the dark or the light, still he will hold my hand and I will not fear, for he, even as my God, will go with me through the valley and the shadow. And in return for all of the above I will give and feel it a privilege all the best that is in me and count it nothing beside the greater love that he hath shown. He is ambitious and I will help him; he is a Christian, and by living with him I will become the better and the stronger. ELIZABETH."

"Would I marry my wife again? Yes, emphatically so. I married her twelve years ago and if I did not love her more, infinitely more, than I did when I married her, I am to be pitied. Love grows and does not stand still. So it has been with me. I could not and would not part with my wife now for anything in the wide world, unless it would be for her happiness, and I say without boastfulness and false pride that it is only with me that she can be truly happy, for she says so. I feel that she is my world. As Hall Caine has said in "The Eternal City,' 'without her I can do nothing.' I sometimes wonder how in one person can there be so many, many things, indeed everything that I love and hold dear. But so it is, she is life and joy and everything to me. I have never asked myself the question 'Would I marry my mate again?' I have thought often that if I could have my present mind and heart full of experiences put in a young body and could live life over again with my wife there would be many, many things I could spare her and many pitfalls could be avoided. I have been happy, exceedingly so, beyond my deserts, I know, but nevertheless dear to me is the happiness I have gotten. BEN J."

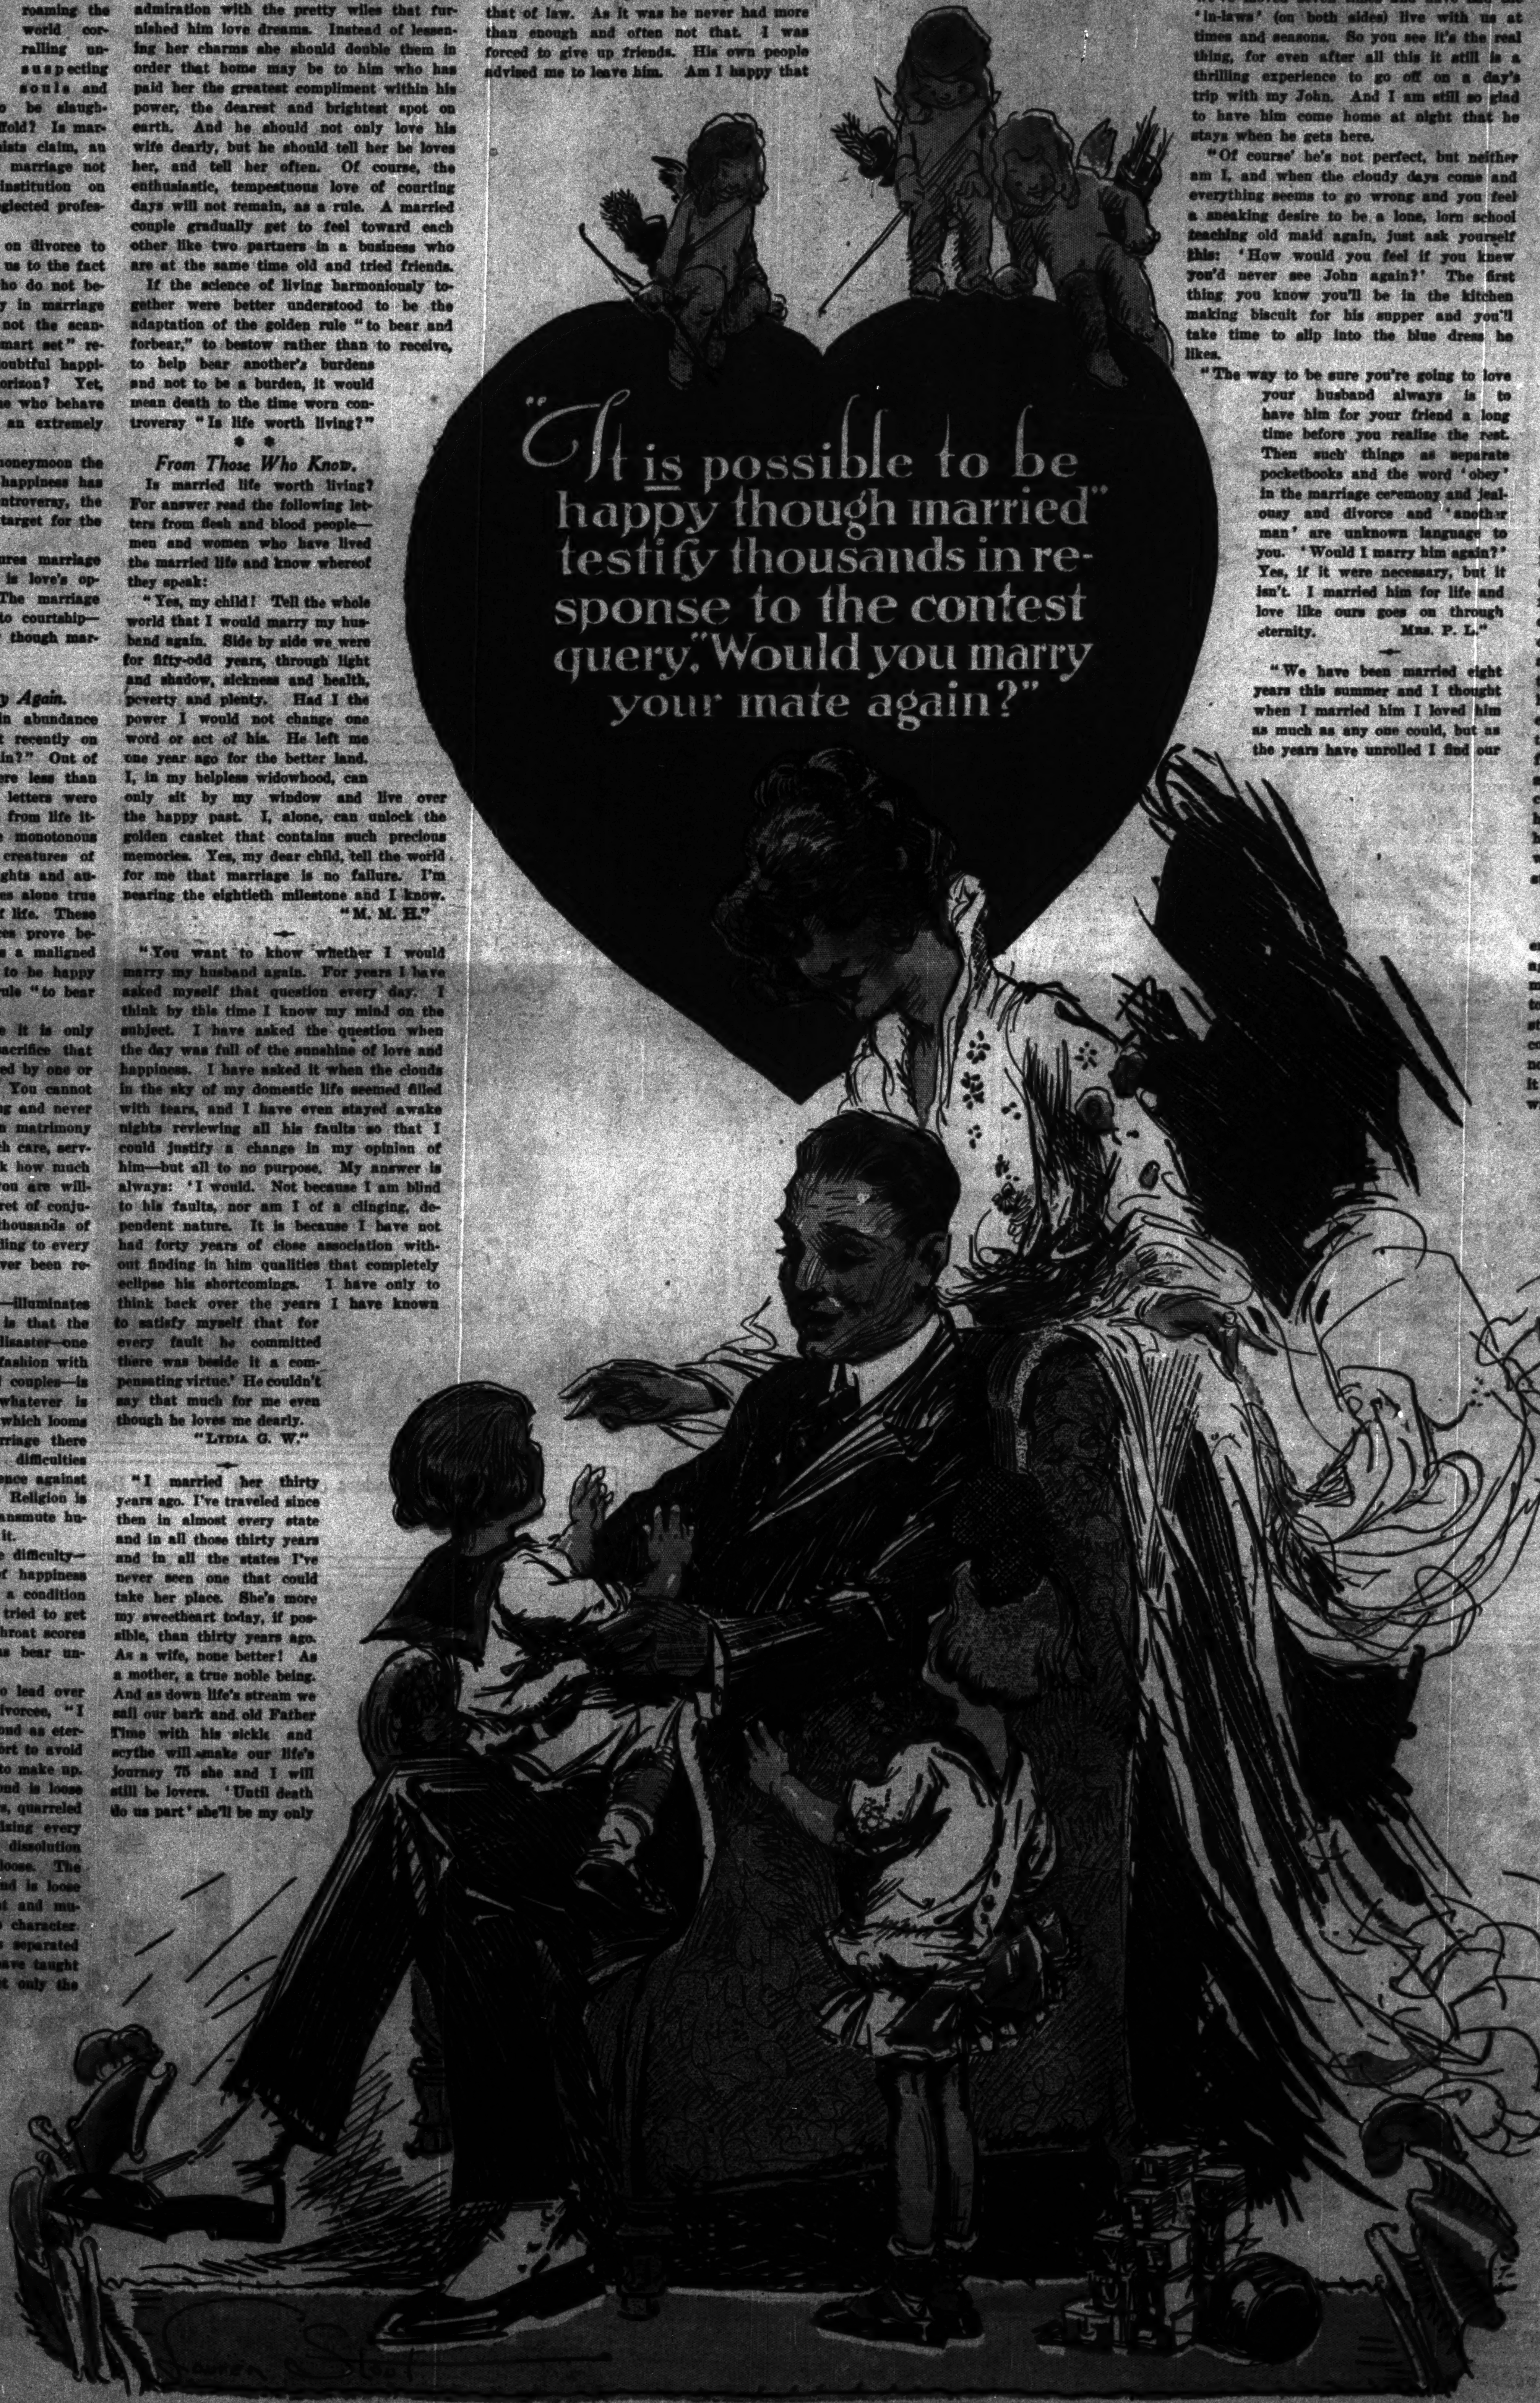
"A few months after we were married my husband was seriously hurt in a runaway. He is practically an invalid. Can you picturet the change which came to those dreams? I must give eight hours a day to office work. The evenings must be spent in ironing, baking, and doing one hundred and one other things always found to be done. I have no time for music, no time for reading, no time for entertaining. My husband suffers intensely, and yet is so patient and so kind. He is sad because I must work. I try to keep up courage, to be brave, and, above all, to be cheerful and hopeful in his presence. The doctors give no encouragement for the betterment of his condition. But I can honestly say that I would marry him again, because we married for love and our love remains unchanged. When there is love in the heart and in the home no sacrifice can be too great. "I. J."



"It is possible to be happy though married" testify thousands in response to the contest query, "Would you marry your mate again?"

READ THE CONDITIONS.

THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE prints today another installment of "The Million Dollar Mystery," a mystery story for the solution of which a prize of $10,000 will be given by the Thanhouser Film corporation. The story will run twenty-two consecutive weeks in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. As each chapter appears in THE TRIBUNE a two reel film corresponding with it may be seen in the various moving picture theaters. By this arrangement with the Thanhouser Film corporation it will be possible for TRIBUNE readers both to read the story and see the moving picture of it as it progresses from week to week. The first film was released on June 22. Each week another will be released until Monday, Nov. 16. The last chapter of the story will appear in THE TRIBUNE on Sunday, Nov. 22.

CONDITIONS GOVERNING THE CONTEST.

The prize of $10,000 will be won by the man, woman, or child who writes the most acceptable solution of the mystery, from which the last two reels of motion picture drama will be made and the last two chapters of the story written by Harold MacGrath.

Solutions may be sent to the Thanhouser Film corporation, either at Chicago or New York, any time up to midnight, Jan. 14. They must be received not later than that date. This allows eight weeks after the first appearance of the last film releases and seven weeks after the last chapter is published in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE in which to submit solutions. The Chicago address of the Thanhouser company is 166 West Washington street and the New York City address is 71 West Twenty-third street.

A board of three judges will determine which of the many solutions received is the most acceptable.

The judges are to be Harold MacGrath, Lloyd Lonergan, author of the scenario, and Miss Mae Tinee of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The judgment of this board will be absolute and final. Nothing of a literary nature will be considered in the decision nor given any preference in the selection of the winner of the $10,000 prize. The last two reels, which will give the most acceptable solution to the mystery, will be presented in the theaters having this feature as soon as it is possible to produce same. The story corresponding to these motion pictures will appear in this newspaper coincidentally, or as soon after the appearance of the pictures as practicable. With the last two reels will be shown the pictures of the winner, his or her home, and other interesting features.

Solutions to the mystery must not be more than 100 words long. Here are some questions to be kept in mind in connection with the mystery as an aid to a solution:

No. 1—What becomes of the millionaire?

No. 2—What becomes of the $1,000,000?

No. 3—Whom does Florence marry?

No. 4—What becomes of the Russian countess?

Nobody connected either directly or indirectly with "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be considered as a contestant.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Stanley Hargreave, millionaire, having joined what he believed to be a great social movement, finds that in reality he has been trapped by the Black Hundred. After a miraculous escape from the den of the brilliant thieves he lives the life of a recluse for eighteen years. One night, surrendering to a restless spirit of rebellion, Hargreave enters a Broadway restaurant and there comes face to face with the Black Hundred's leader, Braine.

After the meeting, during which neither man openly recognizes the other, Hargreave hurries to his magnificent Riverdale home and lays plans for making his escape from the country. He writes a letter to the girls' school in New Jersey where, sixteen years before, he had mysteriously left on the doorstep of the institution his tiny baby daughter—named "Florence Gray" by the note attached to the basket—and arranges that she be sent to him at once. He also pays a visit to the hangar of a daredevil aviator.

Braine and members of his band surround Hargreave's home at night, but as they enter the house the watchers outside see a balloon leave the roof. The safe is found empty—the million which Hargreave was known to have drawn that day was gone. Then one of the men outside announced that he had punctured the balloon and sent it to the bottom of the ocean.

The next day Florence arrives from the girls' school and is greeted by the butler, Jones, whom Hargreave has taken into full confidence. She is later visited by Countess Olga, Braine's companion, who claims to be a relative. Two bogus detectives call, but they find themselves thwarted by Norton, a newspaper man, who happens to be on the scene at the right moment.

Later Florence is lured from home by the band, but succeeds in freeing herself from their clutches. The next day Jones removes a box from its hiding place and, pursued by Braine's men, rushes to the water front. A race in motor boats ensues and Jones drops the box into the sea.

Concealed above the rendezvous of the Black Hundred, a man learns of the recovery by a sailor of the box Jones dropped into the sea and of its subsequent return to the sea, and he quickly communicates the fact to Jones. A duplicate box is planted and later secured by the band, but before its contents are examined the box mysteriously disappears.

Following a telephone message Jones receives from a mysterious person whom he addressed as "sir," Florence is again lured from her home and taken out to sea. Through Norton's daring and skill as an aviator she is rescued and returns to her home in time to confront an agent of the Black Hundred.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE maid stole into the house, wondering if she had been seen. She wanted to be loyal to this girl, but she was tired of the life; she wanted to be her own mistress, and the small fortune offered her would put her on the way to realize her ambition. What had she not seen and been of life since she joined the great detective's force! Lady's maid, cook, ship stewardess, flash woman, actress, clerk, and a dozen other employments. Her pay, until she secured some fat reward, was but twelve hundred the year; and here was five thousand in advance, with the promise of five thousand more the minute her work was done. And it was simple work, without any real harm toward Florence as far as she was concerned. The whole thing rested upon one difficulty; would Jones permit the girls to leave the house?

One day Florence found Susan sitting in a chair, her head in her hands.

"Why, Susan, what's the matter?" cried Florence.

"WHY SUSAN, WHAT'S THE MATTER?" CRIED FLORENCE.

"I don't know what is the matter, dear, but I haven't felt well for two or three days. I'm dizzy all the time. I can't read or sew or eat or sleep."

"Why didn't you tell me?" said Florence, reproachfully. She rang for the detective-maid. "Ella, I don't know anything about doctors hereabouts."

"I know a good one, Miss Florence. Shall I send for him?"

"Do; Susan is ill."

Jones was not prepared for treachery in his own household; so when he heard that a doctor had been called to attend Susan he was without the least suspicion that he had been betrayed. More than this, there had been no occasion to summon a doctor in the seven years Mr. Hargreave had lived here. So Jones went about his petty household affairs without more thought upon the matter. The maid had been recommended to him as one of the shrewdest young women in the detective business.

The doctor arrived. He was a real doctor; no doubt of that. He investigated Susan's condition—brought about by a subtle though not dangerous poison and instantly recommended the seashore. Susan was not used to being confined to the house; she was essentially an out of doors little body. The seashore would bring her about in no time. The doctor suggested Atlantic City because of its mildness throughout the year and its nearness to New York.

"I'm afraid she'll have to go alone," said Jones, gravely.

"I shan't stir!" declared Susan. "I shan't leave my girl even if I am sick." Susan caught Florence's hand and pressed it.

"Would you like to go with her, Florence?" asked Jones, with a sly glance at the strange doctor. The sly glance was wasted. The doctor evinced no sign that it mattered one way or the other to him.

"It is nothing very serious now," he volunteered. "But it may turn out serious if it is not taken care of at once."

"What is the trouble?" inquired Jones, who was growing fond of Susan.

"Weak heart. Sunshine and good sea air will strengthen her up again. No, no!" as Jones drew forth his wallet. "I'll send in my bill the first of the month. Sunshine and sea air; that's all that's necessary. And now, good-day."

All very businesslike; not the least cause in the world for any one to suspect that a new trap was being set by the snarers. The maid returned to the sewing room, while Florence coddled her companion and made much of her.

Jones was suspicious, but dig in his mind as he would he could find no earthly reason for this suspicion save that this attribute was now instinctive, that it was always near the top. If Susan was ill she must be given good care; there was no getting around this fact. Later he telephoned several prominent physicians. The strange doctor was recommended as a good ordinary practitioner and in good standing; and so Jones dismissed his suspicions as having no hook to hang them on.

His hair would have tingled at the roots, however, had he known that this same physician was one of the two who had signed the document which had accredited Florence with insanity and had all but succeeded in making a supposition a fact. Nor was Jones aware of the fact that the telephone wire had been tapped recently. So when he finally concluded to permit Florence to accompany Susan to Atlantic City he telephoned to the detective agency to send up a trusty man, who was shadowed from the moment he entered the Hargreave home till he started for the railway station. He became lost in the shuffle and was not heard from till weeks later, in Havana. The Black Hundred found a good profit in the shanghai-ing business.

Susan began to pick up, as they say, the day after the arrival at Atlantic City, due, doubtless, to the cessation of the poison she had been taking unawares. The two young women began to enjoy life for the first time since they had left Miss Farlow's. They were up with the sun every day and went to bed tired but happy. No one bothered them. If some stray reporter encountered their signatures on the hotel register, he saw nothing to excite his reportorial senses. All this, of course, was due to Norton's policy of keeping the affair out of the papers.

Following Jones' orders, they made friends with no one. Those about the hotel—especially the young men—when they made any advances were politely snubbed. Every night Florence would write to her good butler to report what had taken place during the day, and he was left to judge for himself if there was anything to arouse his suspicions. He, of course, believed the two were covertly guarded by the detective he had sent after them.

When Braine called upon Olga he found his doctor there.

"Well, what's the news?" he asked.

"I 'ad better run down and inquire how the young lady is progressing," said the doctor, who was really a first rate surgeon and who had performed a number of skilled operations upon various members of the Black Hundred anent their encounters with the police. "I've got Miss Florence where you want her. It's up to you now."

"She ought to be separated from her companion. We have left them alone for a whole week, so Jones will not worry particularly. A mighty curious thing has turned up. Before Hargreave's disappearance not a dozen persons could recollect what Jones looked like. He was rarely ever in sight. What do you suppose that signifies?"

"Don't ask me," shrugged the man of medicine. "I shouldn't worry over Jones."

"But we can't stir the old fool. We can't get him out of that house. I've tried to get that maid to put a little something in his coffee, but she stands off at that. She says that she did as she agreed in regard to Florence, but her agreement ended there. We have given the jade five thousand already and she is clamoring for the balance."

"Have you threatened her?" asked Olga.

Braine smiled a little. "My dear woman, it is fifty-fifty. While I have a hold on her, it is not quite so good as she has on me. We are not dealing with an ordinary servant we could threaten and scare. No, indeed; a shrewd little woman who desperately wanted money. And she will be paid; no getting out of it. She will not move another step, one way or the other, after she receives the balance. Hargreave will have a pretty steep bill to pay when the time comes."

"She has no idea where the million is?"

"If she had, she's quite capable of lugging it off all by herself," said Braine.

The doctor laughed.

"Olga," went on Braine, "you must look at it as I do; that it is still in the middle of the game, and we have neither lost nor won.'

"How do you know that Hargreave may not have at his beck and call an organization quite as capable if not as large as ours?" suggested the physician.

"That is not possible," Braine declared without hesitation.

"Well, it begins to look that way to me. We've never made a move yet that hasn't been blocked."

"Pure luck each time, I tell you; the devil's own luck always at the critical moment, when everything seems to be in our hands. Now, we want Florence, and we've tried a hundred ways to accomplish this fact and failed. The question is, how to get her away from her companion?"

"Simple enough," said the doctor complacently.

"Out with it, if you have an idea."

The doctor leaned forward and whispered a few words.

"Well, I'm hanged!" Braine laughed and slapped the doctor on the shoulder. "The simplest thing in the world. Mad dog wouldn't be in it. I always said that you had gray matter if you cared to exert yourself."

"Thanks," replied the doctor dryly. "I'll drop down there tomorrow, if you say so, ostensibly to see the other patient. It will make a deuce of a disturbance."

"Not if you scare the hotel people."

"That is what I propose to do. They will not want such a thing known. It would scare everyone away for the rest of the season. But, of course, this depends upon whether they are honest or in the hotel business to make money."

Again Braine laughed. "Bring her back to New York alone, Æsculapius, and a fat check is yours. Nothing could be simpler than an idea like this. It is a fact; no man can think of everything, and you've just proved it to me. I've tried to do a general's work without aids. Olga, does any one watch me come and go any more?"

"No; I've watched a dozen nights. The man has gone. Either he found out what he wanted or he gave up the job. To my mind he found out what he wanted."

"And what's that?"

"Heaven knows!" discouragedly.

"Come, doctor, suppose you and I go down to Daly's for a little turn at billiards?"

"Nothing would suit me better."

"All aboard, then! Good-night, Olga. Keep your hair on; I mean your own hair. We're going to win out, don't you worry. In all games the minute you begin to doubt you begin to lose."

That same night Norton sat at his desk, in his shirt sleeves, pounding away at his typewriter. From time to time he paused and teetered his chair and scowled over his pipe at the starlit night outside. Bang! would go his chair again, and clickity-click would sing the keys of the machine. The story he was writing was in the ordinary routine; the arrival of a great ocean liner with some political notables who were not averse to denouncing the present administration. You will have noticed, no doubt, that some disgruntled politician is always denouncing the present administration, it matters not if it be Republican or Democratic. When you are out of a good job you are always prone to denounce. The yarn bored Norton because his thoughts were miles southward.

He completed the story, yanked out the final sheet, called for a copy boy, rose and sauntered over to the managing editor's door, before which he paused indecisively. The "old man" had been after him lately regarding the Hargreave story, and he doubted if his errand would prove successful.

However, he boldly opened the door and walked in.

"SMALLPOX!" EXCLAIMED THE DOCTOR.

"Humph!" said the "old man," twisting his cigar into the corner of his mouth. "Got that story?"

Norton sat down. "Yes, but I have not got it for print yet. Mr. Blair, when you gave me the Hargreave job you gave me carte blanc."

"I did," grimly. "But, on the other hand, I did not give you ten years to clear it up in."

"Have I ever fallen down on a good story?" quietly.

"M', can't remember," grudgingly.

"Well, if you'll have patience I'll not fall down on this one. It's the greatest criminal story I ever handled, but it's so big that it's going to take time."

"Gimme an outline."

"I have promised not to," with a grimness equal to the "old man's." "If a line of this story trickles out it will mean that every other paper will be moving around, and in the end will discover enough to spoil my end of it. I'll tell you this much: The most colossal band of thieves this country ever saw is at one end of the stick. And when I say that counterfeiting and politics and millions are all involved, you'll understand how big it is. This gang has city protection. We are running them all into a corner; but we want that corner so deep that none of them can wriggle out of it."

"Umhm. Go on."

"I want two months more."

The "old man" beat a tattoo with his fat pencil. "Sixty days, then. And if the yarn isn't on my desk at midnight, you——"

"Hunt for another job. All right. I came in to ask for three days' leave."

"You're your own boss, Jim, for sixty days more. Whadda y'mean counterfeiting?"

"Those new tens and twenties. If I stumble on that right, why, I can turn it over without conflicting with the story."

"Well, go to it."

"I'm turning in my regular work, day in and day out, and while doing it I've gone through more hairbreadth escapes than you ever heard of. They have been after me. I've dodged falling safes; I've been shanghaied, poisoned; but I haven't said a word."

"Good Lord! Do you mean all that?"

"Every word, sir."

"I'll make it ninety days, Jim; and if this story comes in I'll see that you get a corking bonus."

"I'm not looking for bonuses. I'm proud of my work. To get this story is all I want. That'll be enough. Thanks for the extension in time. Good-night."

So Florence received a long night letter in the morning.

And the doctor arrived at about the same time. And called promptly upon his patient.

"Fine!" he said. "The sea air was just the thing. A doctor always likes to find his advice turning out well."

He glanced quizzically at Florence, who was the picture of glowing health. Suddenly he frowned anxiously.

"You need not look at me," she laughed. "I never felt better in all my life."

"Are you quite sure?" he asked gravely.

"Why, what in the world do you mean?"

He did not speak, but stepped forward and took her by the wrist, holding his watch in his other hand. He shook his head. He looked very solemn, indeed.

"What is it?" demanded Susan with growing terror.

"Go to your own room immediately and remain there for the present," he ordered. "I must see Miss Hargreave alone."

He opened the door and Susan passed out bewilderedly. He returned to Florence, who was even more bewildered than her companion. The doctor began to ask her questions; how she slept, if she was thirsty, felt pains in her back. She answered all these questions vaguely. Not the slightest suspicion entered her head that she was being hoodwinked. Why should she entertain any suspicion? This doctor, who seemed kindly and benevolent, who had prescribed for Susan and benefited her, why should she doubt him?

"In heaven's name, tell me what is the matter?" she pleaded.

"Stay here for a little while and I'll be back. Under no circumstances leave your room till I return."

He paced out into the hall, to meet the frantic Susan.

"We must see the manager at once," he replied to her queries. "And we must be extremely quiet about it. There must be no excitement. You had better go to your room. You must not go into Miss Hargreave's. Tell me, where have you been? Have you been trying to do any charitable work among the poorer classes?"

"Only once," admitted Susan, now on the verge of tears.

"Only once is sufficient. Come; we'll go and see the manager together."

They arrived at the desk, and the manager was summoned.

"I take it," began the doctor slowly, "that a contagious disease, if it became known among your guests, would create a good deal of disturbance?"

"Disturbance! Good heavens, man, it would ruin my business for the whole season!" exclaimed the astounded manager.

"I am sorry, but this young lady's companion has been stricken with smallpox—"

The manager fell back against his desk, his jaw fallen. Susan turned as white as the marble top.

"The only way to avoid trouble is to have her conveyed immediately to some place where she can be treated properly. Not a word to any one now; absolute secrecy or a panic."

The manager was glad enough to agree.

"She is not dangerous at present, but it is only a matter of a few hours when the disease will become virulent. If you will place a porter before Miss Hargreave's door till I make arrangements to take her away, that will simplify matters."

Smallpox! Susan wandered aimlessly about, half out of her mind with terror. There was no help against such a dread disease. Her Florence, her pretty rosy cheeked Florence, disfigured for life. . . . !

"Miss Susan, where is Florence?"

Susan stopped abruptly and looked into the friendly eyes of Norton.

"O, Mr. Norton!" she gasped.

"What's the trouble?" instantly alert.

"Florence has the smallpox!"

"Impossible! Come with me."

But the porter, having had the strictest orders from the manager, refused to let them into Florence's room.

"Never mind, Susan. Come along." Out of earshot of the porter he said: "My room is directly above Florence's. We'll see what can be done. This smells of The Black Hundred a mile off. Smallpox! Only yesterday she wrote me that she never felt better. Have you wired Jones?"

"I never thought to!"

"Then I shall. Our old friends are at work again."

"But it's the same doctor who sent me down here."

Norton frowned.

What followed all appeared in the reporter's story, as written three months later. He and Susan went up to his room, raised the flooring, cut through the ceiling, and with the fire escape rope dropped below. One glance at Florence's tear stained face was enough for him. Norton's subsequent battle with the doctor and his accomplices made very interesting reading. Their escape from the hotel, their flight, their encounter with one of the gang in the road, and Florence's blunder into the bed of quicksand, gave a succession of thrills to the readers of the Blade.

And all this while the million accumulated dust, layer by layer. Perhaps an occasional hardy roach scrambled over the packets, no doubt attracted by the peculiar odor of the ink.

LA MARSEILLAISE.

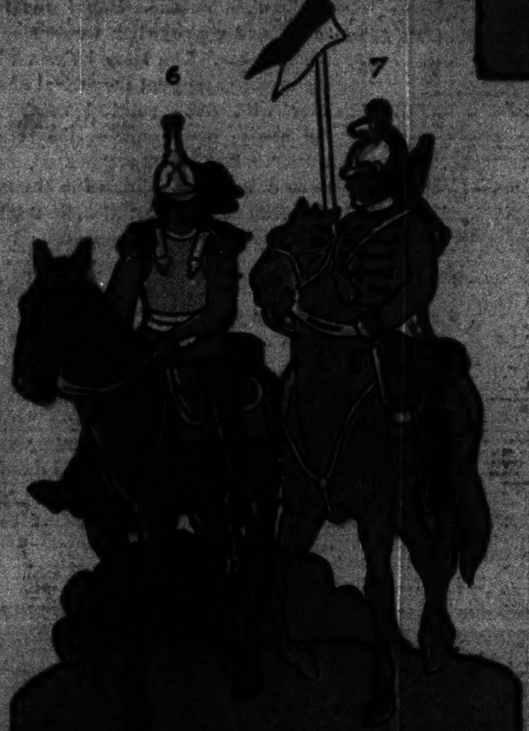
Ye sons of France, awake to glory!
Hark! hark! what myriads bid you rise—
Your children, wives, and grandsires hoary,
Behold their tears and hear their cries!
Shall hateful tyrants, mischief breeding,
With hireling hosts, a ruffian band,
Affright and desolate the land
While peace and liberty lie bleeding?

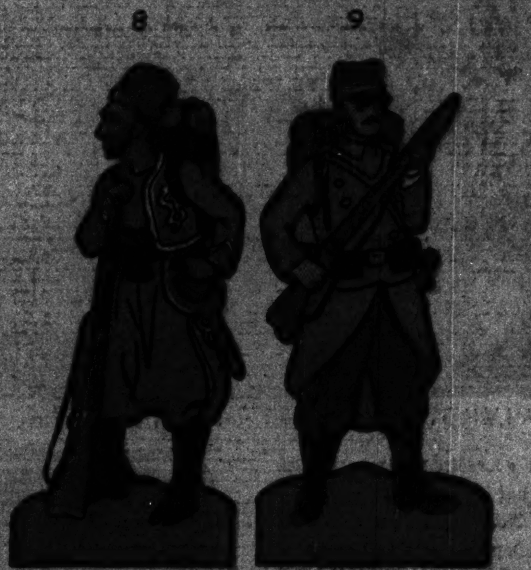
Chorus:
To arms! to arms! ye brave!
Th' avenging sword unsheath!
March on, march on, all hearts resolved,
To victory or death.

Now, now the dangerous storm is scowling
Which treacherous kings, confederate, raise;
The dogs of war, let loose, are howling,
And lo, our fields and cities blaze.
And shall we basely view the ruin,
While lawless force, with guilty stride,
Spreads desolation far and wide,
With crimes and blood his hands embruing?

With luxury and pride surrounded,
The vile, insatiate despots dare,
Their thirst of power and gold unbounded,
To mete and vend the light and air;
Like beasts of burden would they load us,
Like gods would bid their slaves adore:
But man is man, and who is more?
Then, shall they longer lash and goad us?

O Liberty! can man resign thee,
Once having felt thy gen'rous flame?
Can dungeon bolts and bars confine thee,
Or whips thy noble spirit tame?
Too long the world has wept, bewailing
That falsehood's dagger tyrants wield:
But freedom is our sword and shield,
And all their arts are unvailing.





"LA MARSEILLAISE" is one of the most famous songs in the world. It is an outburst of patriotism, and expresses the pent up feeling of the French people as they fought for their freedom.

Many stories are told of the origin of this song, and some claim that the music was from an old German mass sung in the churches, the tempo being quickened in this, as it was used for a marching song. This may be true, that the music was first German and then later was used by the French when they conquered Alsace, and was thus familiar to the French people. Other authorities claim that the verses were not written by one author, but were contributed from many sources. However, the popular story is this:

The song was written by Claude Joseph Rouget de Lisle in 1792. De Lisle was a young artillery officer, stationed at Strasburg. He was talented in many ways, and contributed articles to magazines and newspapers. He was a poet and also a musician of no small ability. He was a great favorite with Baron de Dietrich, a noble Alsatian, who at that time was mayor of Strasburg.

One evening, when Capt. de Lisle was visiting at the home of the mayor, Dietrich said to the young officer: "I wish you would write a song that would inspire our volunteer troops as they march forth to join Lukner's forces."

"I will try," answered De Lisle modestly. He went to the piano and began his composition. Whether some familiar music he had once heard came into his mind, and he rewrote it to march time, no one knows for a certainty; at any rate, he worked as one inspired. The night was bitterly cold and the room was not heated, but he worked steadily on, writing and rewriting the verses, reciting them, playing and singing them over and over, until at last he feel asleep, exhausted, with his head resting upon his desk.

In the morning, however, he knew every word, and sang his song to his friend. Dietrich was greatly pleased with the song, and at once had it arranged for the military band; and it was first given by the National Guard band at Strasburg on Sunday, April 23. It was received with great enthusiasm by the soldiers in Strasburg, and was called "The Battle Song of the Rhine Army."

Two months later, on June 25, Mireur sang it at a banquet at Marseilles. It was so popular at once that it was printed and given to the soldiers who were marching toward Paris. They sang it fervently as they marched through Paris on July 30 and again at the attack on the Tuileries on Aug. 10. And because it was sung triumphantly by the troops from Marseilles it was called "The Marseillaise Hymn."

The mother of De Lisle was a most ardent royalist, and when she heard her name associated with this song, sung by the people, she was angry. "How do those brigands dare to sing such wicked words, and why should our good name be spoken in connection with this revolutionary song?" she cried. Whether or not she ever learned that her own son had given this song to France the story does not tell; but at any rate we hear of De Lisle as a fugitive, hiding in the Jura mountains in order to save his life; for he was proscribed as a royalist. As he was flying from the angry mobs he heard them singing his own verses, and he said to the guide who was with him: "What do they call that song?" "'The Marseillaise Hymn,'" answered the guide; and then the author knew that the name had been changed from "The Battle Song of the Rhine Army," but he knew that the song was his own.

Later the word "hymn" was dropped, and it has since been known as "The Marseillaise."

Rouget de Lisle nearly lost his life under the guillotine, and twice he was put in prison; but finally he was freed through the overthrow of Robespierre.

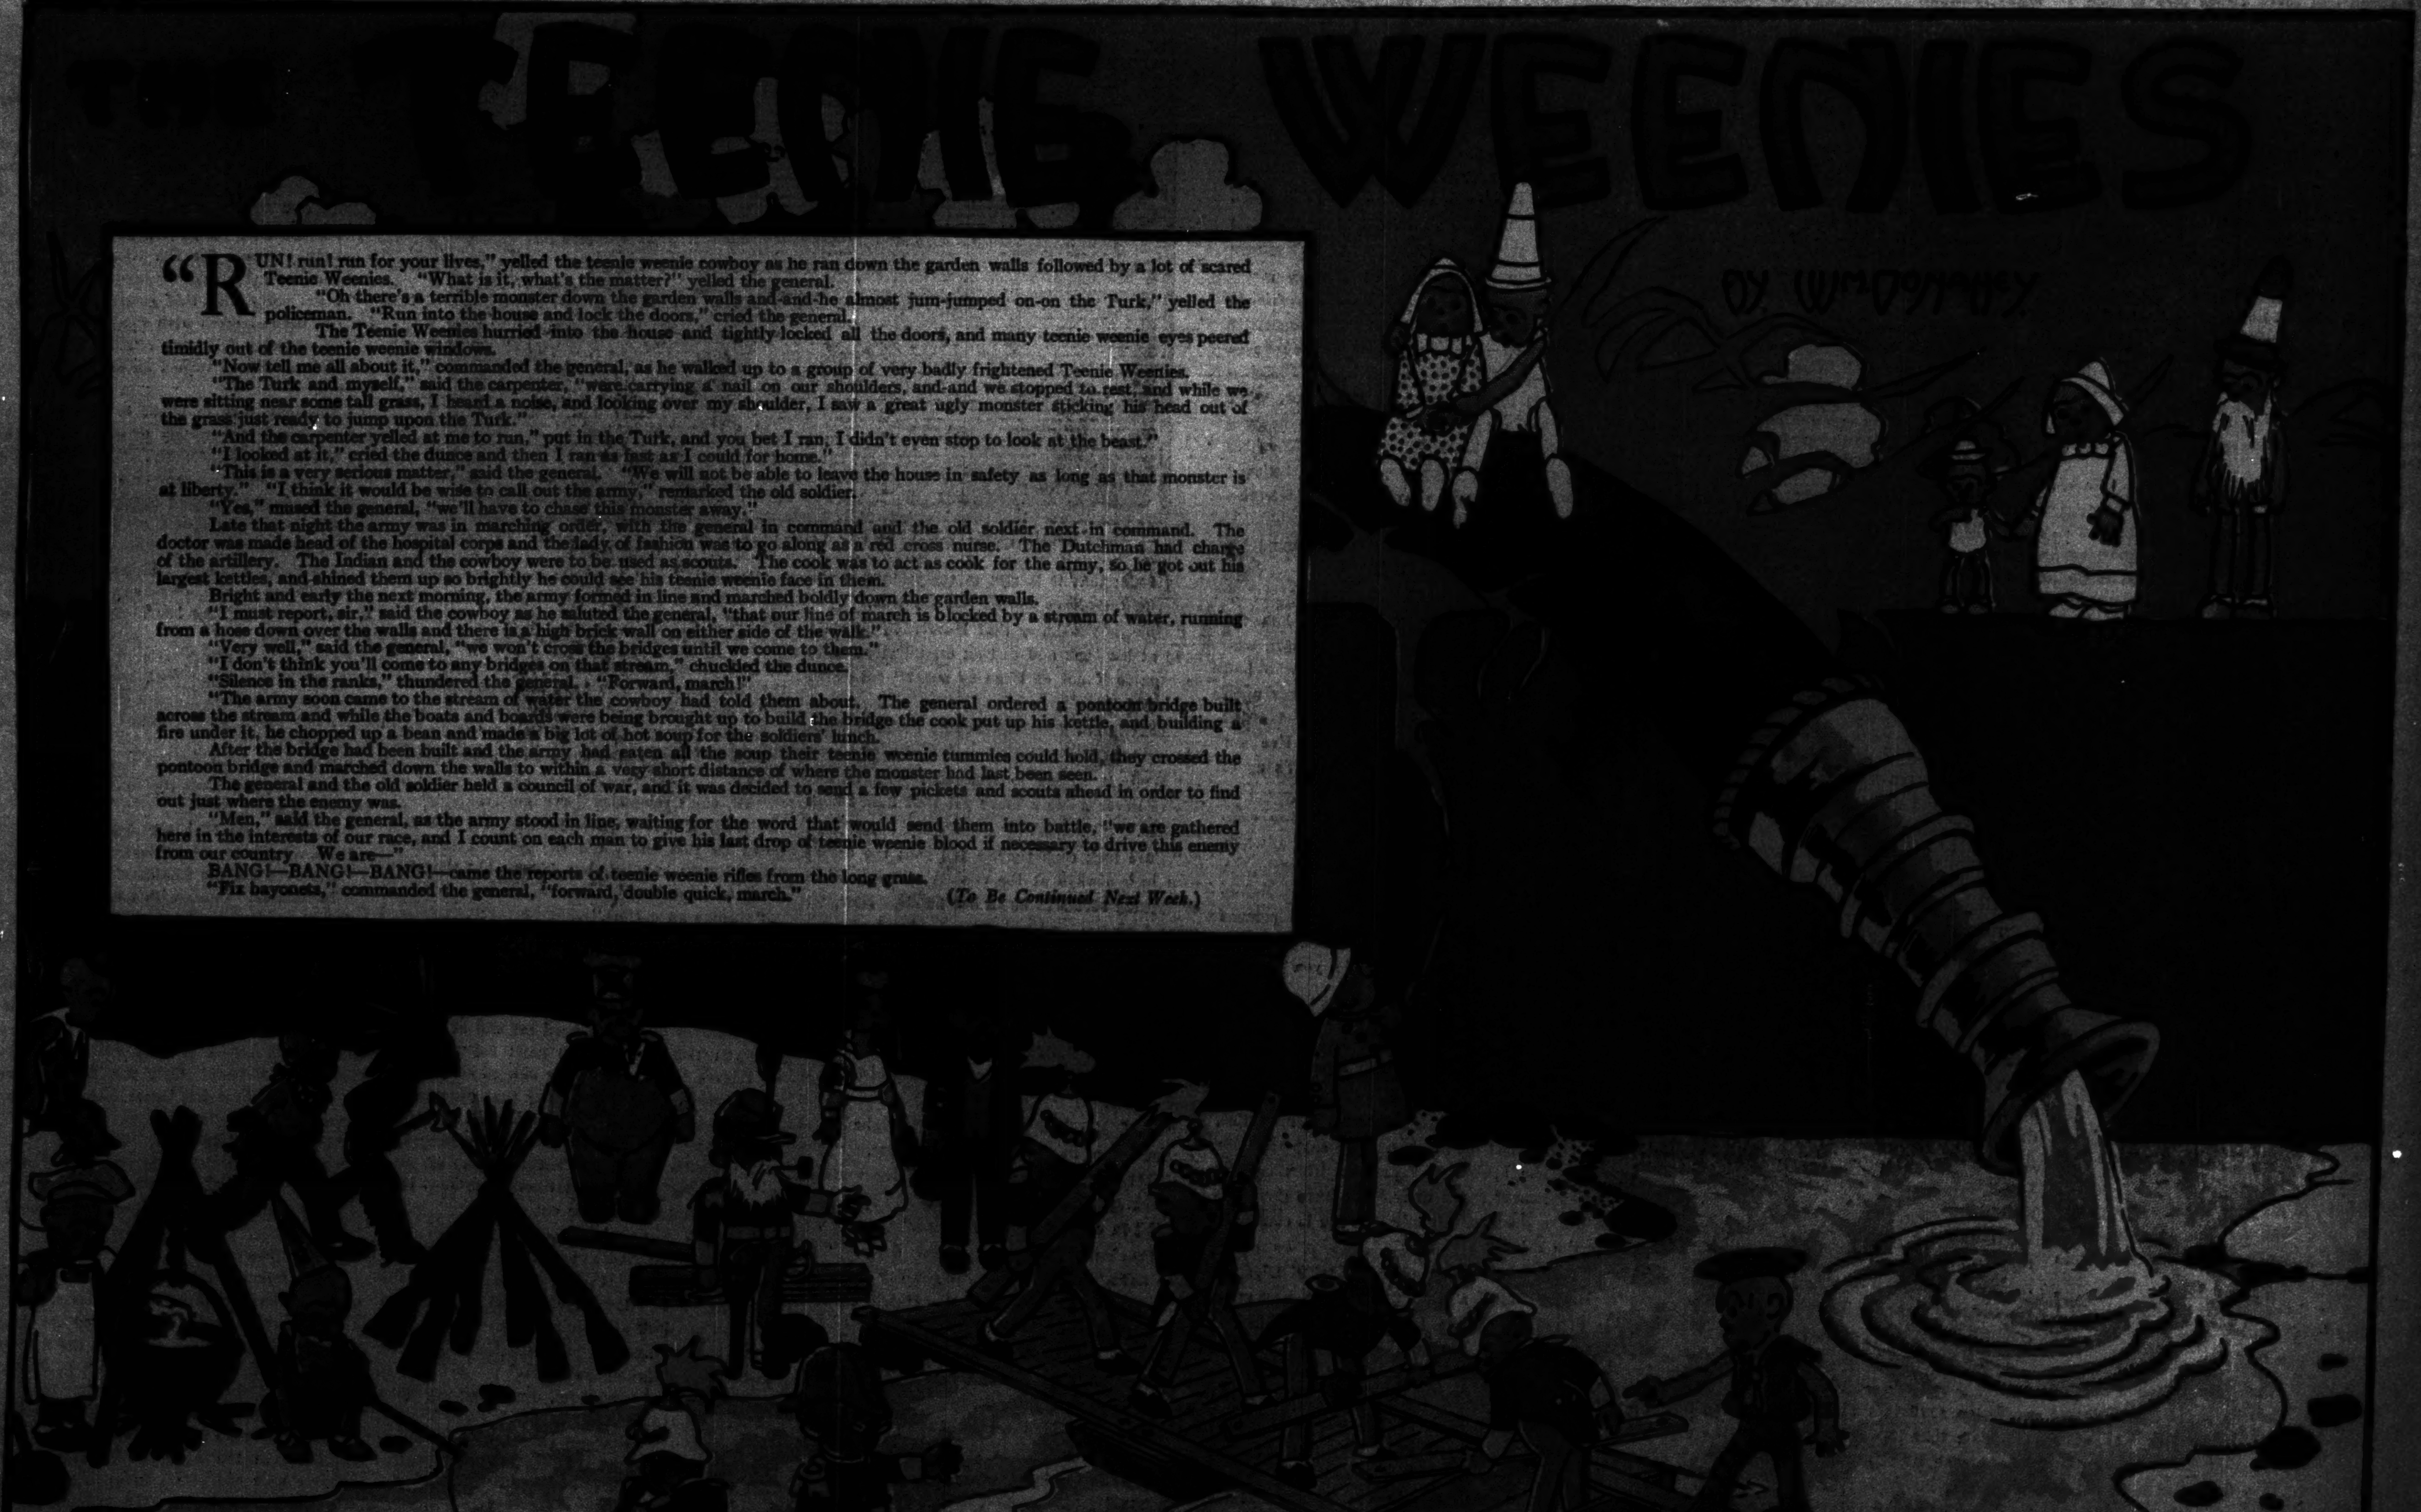
A short time before the death of De Lisle in 1831 the French gave him somewhat tardy recognition, and he was decorated with the ribbon of the Legion of Honor and pensions were granted to him, which he did not live long to enjoy. In 1892 the French erected a statue of Rouget de Lisle in their beloved city of Paris; and so, like many another genius, his tribute came too late.

For many years those in authority tried to suppress the song, as they felt it was against the government, and it was considered treasonable to use it; but the song belonged to the people, it had inspired them in their struggle for liberty, and so after a time it was used universally as the French national hymn.

It is said that the poet Klopstock, meeting De Lisle one time at Hamburg, said to the author: "Through your poem, 30,000 brave Germans have fallen." This may have been an exaggerated statement, but it is true that the song rings with so martial a spirit that it has helped the French upon many a field of battle.

Unfortunately, at the present time the soldiers of France are again fighting the Germans; and as they sing the "Marseillaise," will these words of their former leader Capt. de Lisle, inspire them to renewed deeds of valor?

(Next week we will tell the story of the English national song.)



"RUN! run! run for your lives," yelled the teenie weenie cowboy as he ran down the garden walls followed by a lot of scared Teenie Weenies. "What is it, what's the matter?" yelled the general.

"Oh there's a terrible monster down the garden walls and-and-he almost jum-jumped on-on the Turk," yelled the policeman. "Run into the house and lock the doors," cried the general.

The Teenie Weenies hurried into the house and tightly locked all the doors, and many teenie weenie eyes peered timidly out of the teenie weenie windows.

"Now tell me all about it," commanded the general, as he walked up to a group of very badly frightened Teenie Weenies.

"The Turk and myself," said the carpenter, "were carrying a nail on our shoulders, and-and we stopped to rest, and while we were sitting near some tall grass, I heard a noise, and looking over my shoulder, I saw a great ugly monster sticking his head out of the grass just ready to jump upon the Turk."

"And the carpenter yelled at me to run," put in the Turk, and you bet I ran, I didn't even stop to look at the beast."

"I looked at it," cried the dunce and then I ran as fast as I could for home."

"This is a very serious matter," said the general. "We will not be able to leave the house in safety as long as that monster is at liberty." "I think it would be wise to call out the army," remarked the old soldier.

"Yes," mused the general, "we'll have to chase this monster away."

Late that night the army was in marching order, with the general in command and the old soldier next in command. The doctor was made head of the hospital corps and the lady of fashion was to go along as a red cross nurse. The Dutchman had charge of the artillery. The Indian and the cowboy were to be used as scouts. The cook was to act as cook for the army, so he got out his largest kettles, and shined them up so brightly he could see his teenie weenie face in them.

Bright and early the next morning, the army formed in line and marched boldly down the garden walls.

"I must report, sir," said the cowboy as he saluted the general, "that our line of march is blocked by a stream of water, running from a hose down over the walls and there is a high brick wall on either side of the walk."

"Very well," said the general, "we won't cross the bridges until we come to them."

"I don't think you'll come to any bridges on that stream," chuckled the dunce.

"Silence in the ranks," thundered the general. "Forward, march!"

"The army soon came to the stream of water the cowboy had told them about. The general ordered a pontoon bridge built across the stream and while the boats and boards were being brought up to build the bridge the cook put up his kettle, and building a fire under it, he chopped up a bean and made a big lot of hot soup for the soldiers' lunch.

After the bridge had been built and the army had eaten all the soup their teenie weenie tummies could hold, they crossed the pontoon bridge and marched down the walls to within a very short distance of where the monster had last been seen.

The general and the old soldier held a council of war, and it was decided to send a few pickets and scouts ahead in order to find out just where the enemy was.

"Men," said the general, as the army stood in line, waiting for the word that would send them into battle, "we are gathered here in the interests of our race, and I count on each man to give his last drop of teenie weenie blood if necessary to drive this enemy from our country. We are—"

BANG!—BANG!—BANG!—came the reports of teenie weenie rifles from the long grass.

"Fix bayonets," commanded the general, "forward, double quick, march."

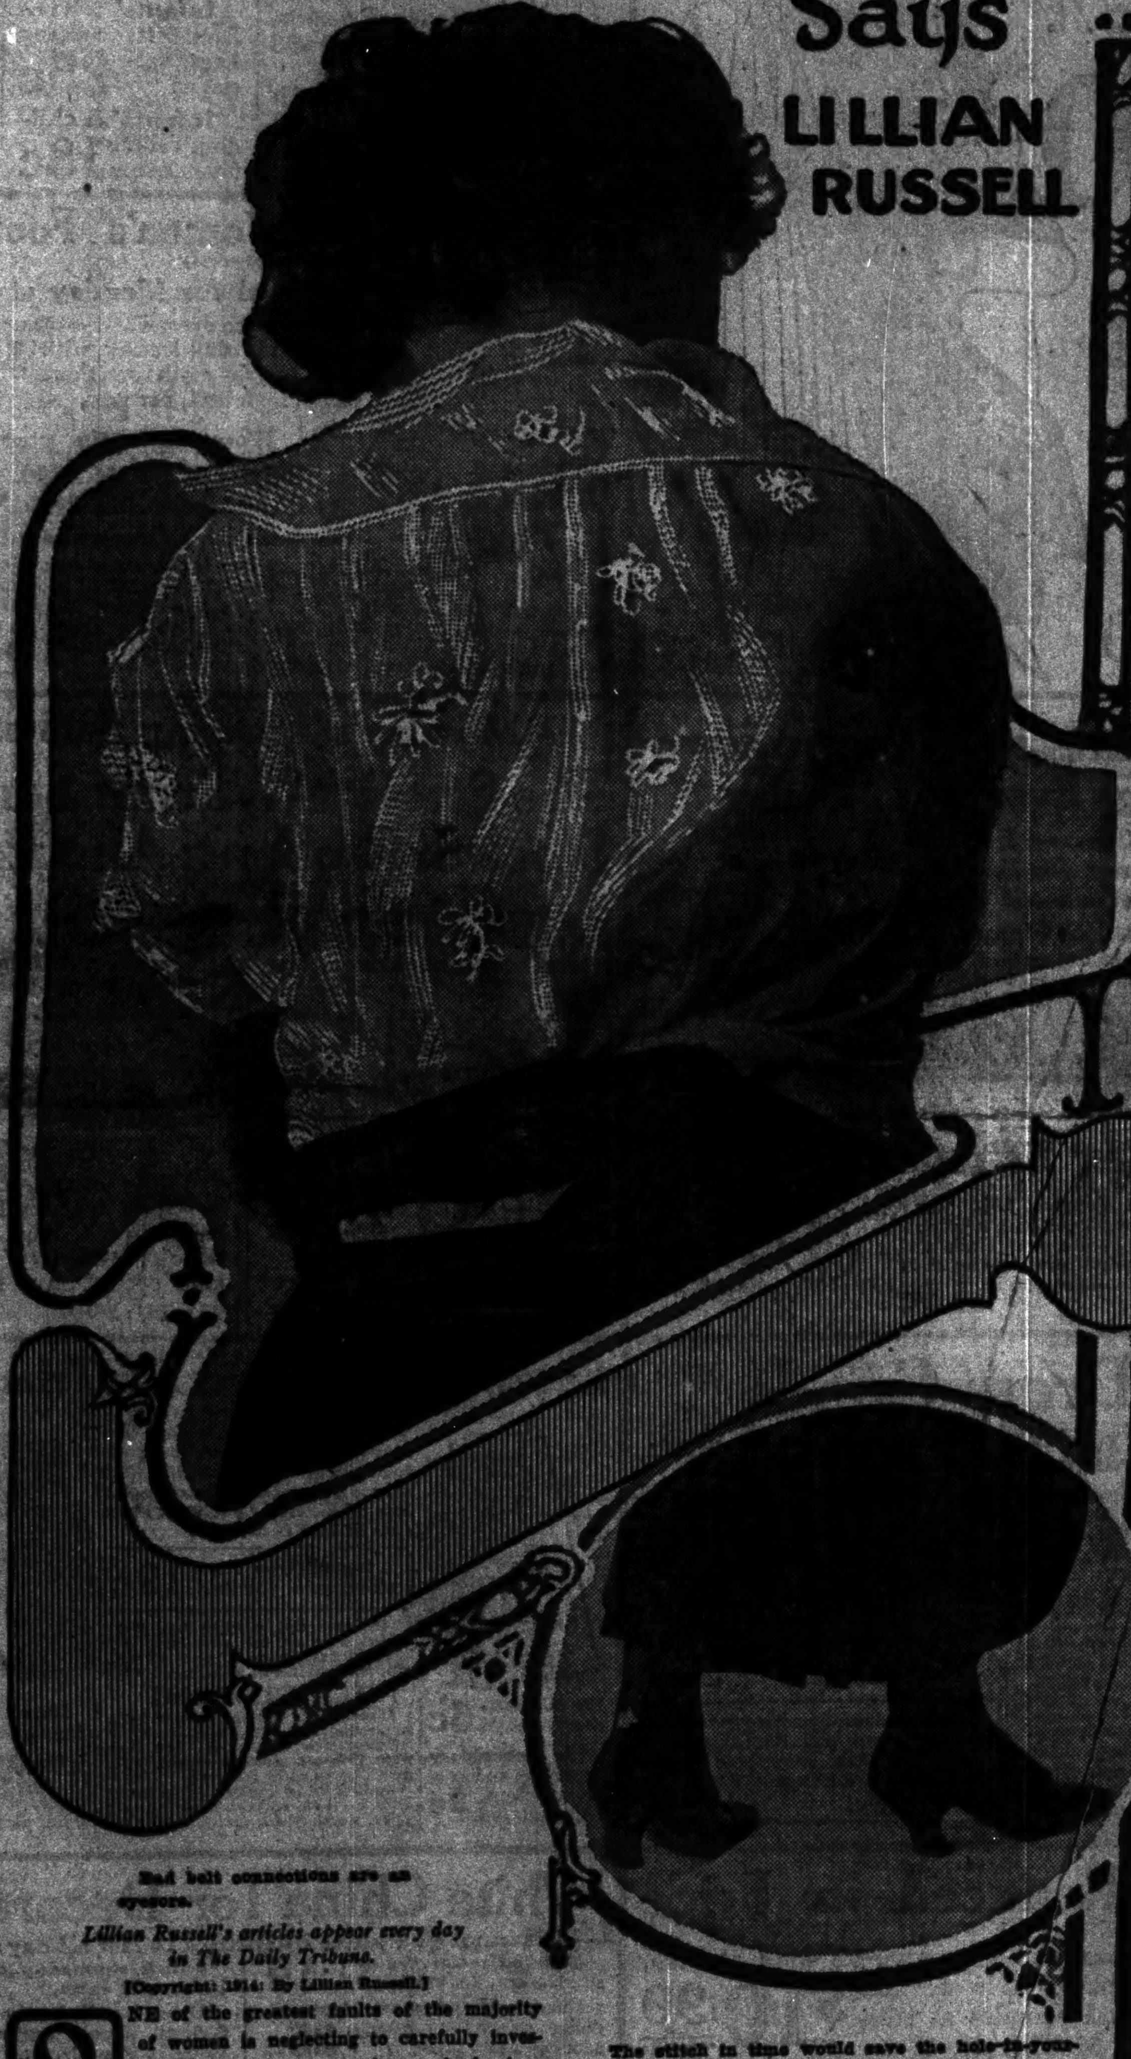
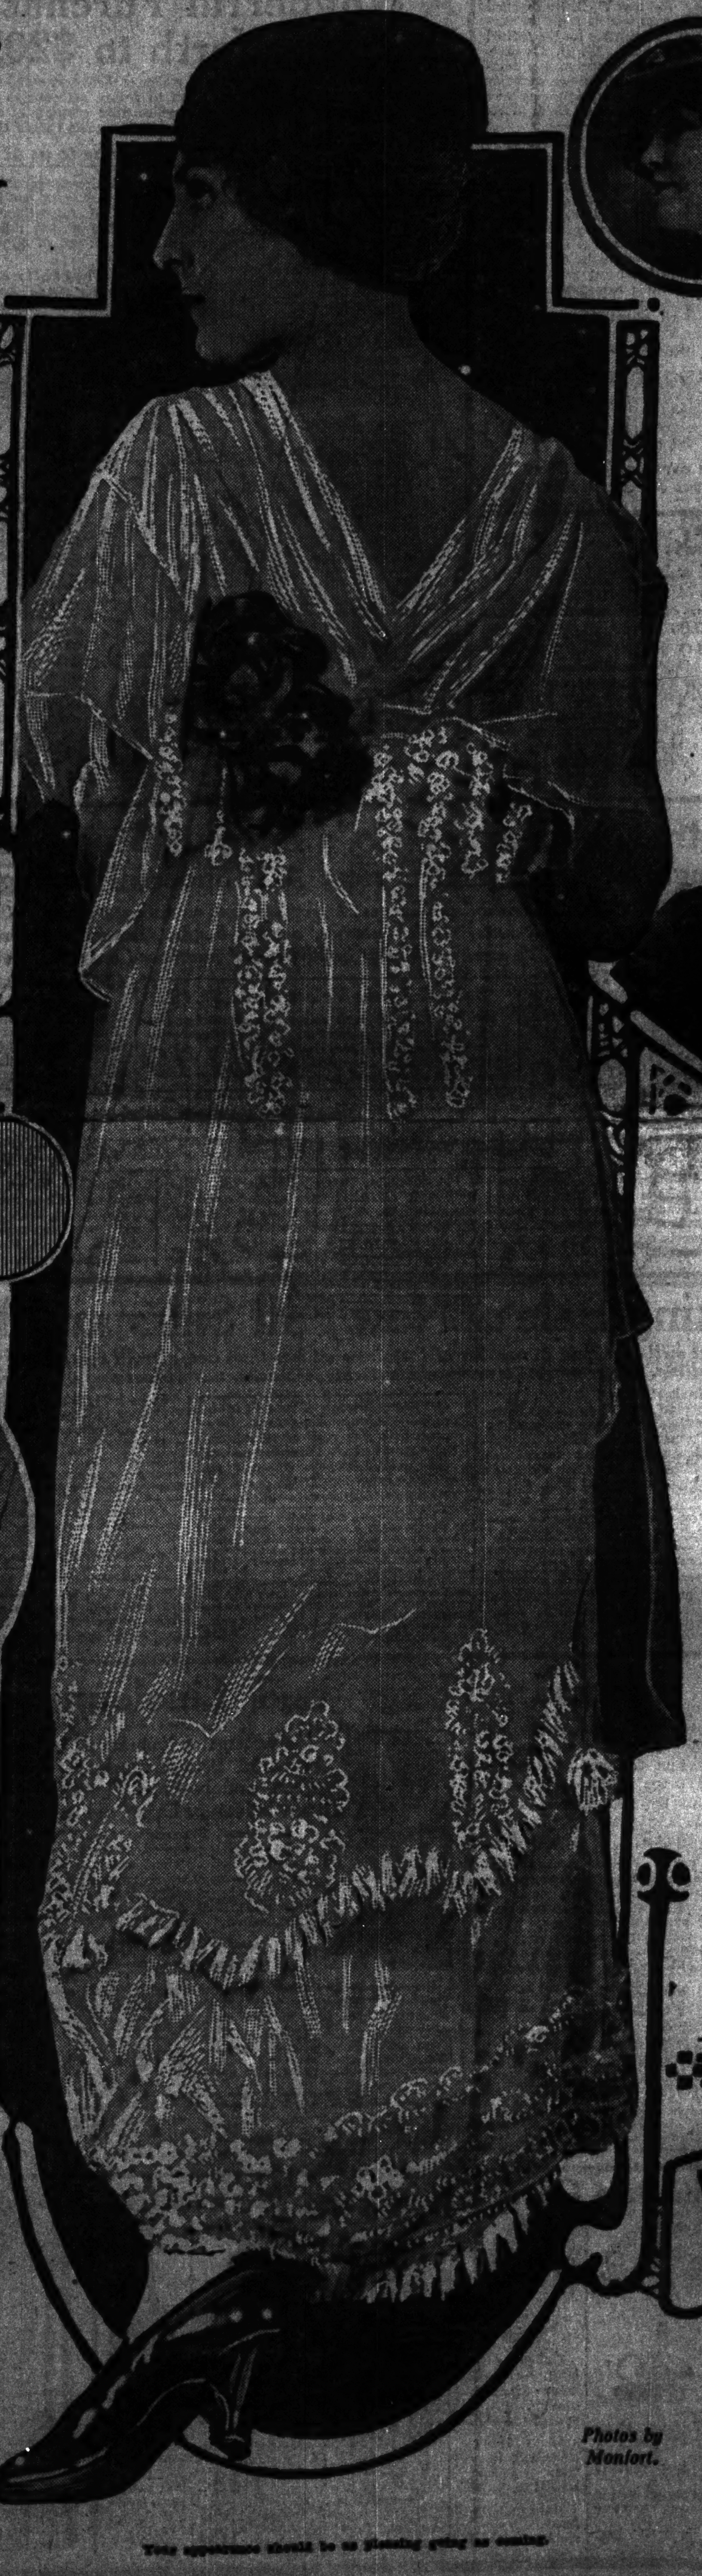
Study Your Back View

Says LILLIAN RUSSELL



Bad belt connections are an eyesore.

The stitch in time would save the hole-in-your-stocking blight on your reputation for neatness.



Your appearance should be as pleasing going as coming.

The back of hat, hair and neck need most careful attention.

Run down heels—the unpardonable sin.

Lillian Russell's articles appear every day in The Daily Tribune.

[Copyright: 1914: By Lillian Russell.]

ONE of the greatest faults of the majority of women is neglecting to carefully investigate how they appear from a back view. They may look perfectly groomed in front, hair tidy, belt and collar correctly fastened, and shoes clean and shapely, while at the same time from a back view there may be many faults of attention.

The belt line is quite a problem now that the wide ribbon or silk sashes are popular. The sash may be neatly crossed over in the front, but in many cases where it finishes in the back it will be crooked and pinned together with any old thing, from a safety pin to a hatpin. Then the skirt comes in for criticism. When white is worn one should be careful where one sits. I have seen many crisp white tailored and lingerie frocks coming towards me immaculately clean and attractive, but when going away inartistically decorated with green paint and iron rust.

Perhaps the most ludicrous sight to be seen is the back view of women's feet on a windy day. They will wear white shoes, of course, and many are well fitting and clean, but too many are ill fitting and soiled, with heels run over or under. Many girls clean only the toes of their white shoes, and forget that the heels are as prominent to the observer as the toes. A gust of wind will reveal an expanse of ankle which is most attractive when the stockings are drawn up firmly over a neat ankle, but when the stockings either bag at the ankle or are put on crooked the expression of the back view is most unpleasant to see. And nothing is so unattractive as a buttoned white boot with a few of the top buttons left undone. Nothing impairs the gait of a woman so effectually as crooked heels. Foot comfort is only second to corset comfort in controlling the grace of movement.

So watch your back view carefully, study the back of your neck, your waist line, and your heels. You should be as attractive going away as coming towards people.

You have seen the girl who grasps her skirt at such an angle that the placket gapes widely, and O, the innumerable belts that do not make connections, and the multitude of safety pins that are exposed to public gaze; and corresponding in numbers to the misplaced belts and pins the wearers are always futilely struggling to get them into place. These things are so common that they are a matter of public comment and are always noticeable.

Men often pass judgment as to women's capacity for housekeeping on no more important evidence than the wearing of rundown heels. It is a trite but still true comment that many women who have exquisite taste in dress as far as gowns, coats, and hats are concerned fall when it comes to the details of shoes and gloves. It is common occurrence to walk behind a beautifully gowned woman whose shoes are unspeakably shabby, worn off at the heel, unblackened, and minus several buttons. Other women do not hesitate to wear skirts with ragged edges, braid pinned on with safety pins, tattered dust ruffles, especially if they are silk, and soiled ruchings.

You may think this attention to details tiresome and carelessness concerning them undeserving of so much criticism. If this is your attitude you would better change your point of view.

Remember, there are just as many judges behind you as before you when you enter the contest for beauty.

Lillian Russell's answers to Beauty Seekers will be found on page four.

YOU should be just as neat and attractive "going" as "coming." Remember there are as many judges behind you as before you.

Every day I see women who look perfectly groomed in front, but when you get a glimpse of the back view many faults are revealed.

Study the back of your neck, your waist line, and your heels.

Straggly hair strands make a most unpleasant sight.

Belts that make poor connections or that show a safety pin are unpardonably ugly sights.

Arrange your sash as artistically in the back as you would if you wore it tied in front.

Runover heels will give you a "black eye" in the estimation of man sooner than any other fault of dressing, and they are injurious to health as well.

Skirts with ragged edges or tattered petticoat frills are unsightly.

Always give your stockings one last look at the back of the heels before you go out and spare yourself the embarrassment of a hole discovered.

Bright Sayings of the Children.

"The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The stories may be sent in either by children or their parents. The only condition is the story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. Address bright sayings plainly to Aunty Bee, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Each letter must have the name and address of the sender.

Bright sayings of children are printed every day in "The Daily Tribune."

The usual daily conflict necessary to properly wash the ears of a 3 year old boy was going on when the little fellow looked up into his mamma's face and said, "If I am ever to have a little baby brother, mamma, please tell God to make fewer wrinkles in his ears, so they won't be so hard to wash."

Jane Barton The Home Dressmaker

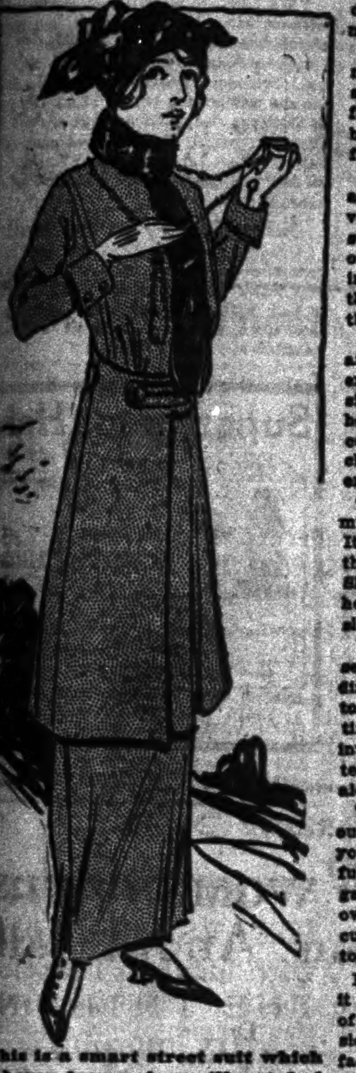
Skill Is Chief Requisite in Making Winter Suit at Home.

"CAN I make my own winter suit?" How often I am asked this question. Certainly you can, if your skill is up to it, though I do not consider it always an economy.

A street suit is dependent upon smartness of line and finish, so if you are not sure of keeping out of the "home made" class, stint on something else and buy your suit ready made or go to a good—which does not necessarily mean costly—tailor.

In choosing a model, be guided by your dressmaking ability. The cloth suit is not easy to make, even in its simplest form. A skirt with intricate plaitings should be avoided for two reasons, first because it needs too much pressing; again because it is too hard to put together. The same holds good for your coat. One with many seams or oddly shaped pieces is beyond the skill of most amateurs.

Your next step is choice of a cloth and lining. Much depends upon your suit needs. For a utility suit a rough cheviot,



This is a smart street suit which the home dressmaker will not find difficult to make up with stylish lines. It is simple and yet strictly modish in every detail.

or covert cloth, serges in various twills, wool poplin, or gaberdine may be selected; for a dressy suit, broadcloth, preferably chiffon broadcloth with a high satin finish, wool duvetyn, or wool velour are all good. Velvet will also be worn, but that is hardest of all materials for the amateur to handle.

As to shades, various tones of brown promise popularity, green has been rather overdone, but there is a Russian green much liked, and there are certain rich prune and dull red tones that are good. My advice would be for conservatism always in a suit, especially if it must stand long and hard wear. Nothing takes the place of navy blue, and black is a close second for the older woman.

Thanks to redingotes, flares, and plaits you cannot get off with the small amount of material to which the last few years have accustomed you. For a medium sized woman from six to seven yards of material fifty inches wide will be needed, but this naturally depends upon your model.

Get all your linings and trimmings before you start to sew. It saves your time and strength. Silk serge or a good quality of satin makes a serviceable coat lining. A nice grade of either can be bought for a dollar a yard. Be sure to get it as wide as you can, as piecing is troublesome. Many lining silks are thirty-six and forty inches wide. A soft—not too pale—gray is popular and serviceable, though self-tones are always good. Black lining is apt to soil white blouses.

Happily for the home dressmaker, the cloth suit is now made up without stiffening. Occasionally a little canvas is used, but as just as many suits are made without it why go to the extra bother? If cold blooded, you may need interlining over the chest, shoulders, and in the sleeves. Personally I prefer a warm cloth and wearing a sweater or little knit jacket on bitter days.

Get your cloth sponged at the store. It does not cost much and is far better done, without loss of sheen, than you can do it yourself.

Satin and velvet are both used for vestees or collars, while the fur trimmed coat is just as popular as last year. Three-quarters of a yard of twenty-seven inch goods is usually ample.

Before cutting into your cloth study your pattern carefully and read the cutting draft. If there is any part you cannot work out by yourself consult a more experienced dressmaker rather than chance spoiling your suit. Also hold the parts to you to see if alteration is needed. If there is much change you probably have bought the wrong size. Again better lose the price of a pattern than spoil.

Before applying the pattern notice if there is a right or wrong an up or down. Be sure to cut the entire suit one way of the nap. If there is a stripe or figure cutting is harder, as the pieces must be fitted to the cloth so they match when sewed.

In a two piece skirt both are cut on a lengthwise fold of the material. Side gores are fitted in to save the material. Plan your cutting by laying each section on the cloth. Remember that carelessness about this may mean you will be short of material to finish your suit, and often find you cannot match it when needed.

Baste carefully the outside according to notches, try on, have some one pin the alterations if you have no dressmaker's form, remove carefully not to lose the pin, baste again, and try on a second time before stitching.

For heavy cloths make the seams as flat as possible. They may be finished in various ways, but the simplest is a straight seam with both edges turned in one direction and bound with seam binding. A second stitching may be made on the outside three-eighths of an inch from the seam to give a tailor finish.

For the coat the seams are straight and pressed open. The lining is sewed exactly like the outside, placed wrong side to wrong side, and blind stitched or hemmed to the cloth. The fronts of a coat are usually faced back with the cloth, and the lining is thus cut just wide enough to meet it.

Cut the lining with good seams, as it must be easy or it will draw the outside. It should always be a half inch shorter than the outside, as it is apt to sag. Sleeve lining is loose at the top and hemmed down on the outside after the sleeve is entirely adjusted.

Where there is an interlining it is not sewed into the seams nor joined with ordinary seams, but is either cat stitched together or is tacked inside the coat, letting one seam overlap the other. Cut the interlining by the outside, letting it extend to the waist. Slash at intervals along the bottom not to draw.

The up to date sleeve still is put in without fullness. If your top is too large for your armhole when adjusted the extra fullness may be shrunk out. To do this gather with one row of fine gathers, place over the small end of a tailor's padded cushion, lay a damp cloth over the sleeve top, and press with a hot iron until dry.

If stitching at the cuff depth is desired it must be done before the outside seam of the sleeve is closed. Many of the new sleeves have this stitching and are merely faced with the lining; more have turn back cuffs of velvet or are trimmed with fur bands.

A favorite finish for the bottom of the sleeve is to have an overlap of five or six inches at the outside seam. The extension of the upper part is turned under for a hem and the under part is faced with the sleeve lining and forms an underlap. The edges are stitched to match the stitching on the rest of the coat. This opening may be closed with buttons and buttonholes, but more often it is tacked and has the buttons set on the outside.

The edges of the modern coat are less often stitched than formerly. They are turned under, pressed, and the lining is hemmed to them.

When the collar is fitted, making sure that it does not draw away at the back of the neck, stitch flat. The lapels for the ordinary coat are cut on a straight line of the front, which is joined to the collar at the top to form the notch.

The cloth front facing is cut the same shape as the outer front, laying it on so as to come to the point of the lapels. Put right side to right side, sew in a narrow seam, turn, press hard, baste smoothly to the outside on the opposite edge, and when the collar, which is also faced with cloth, is joined to it and the lining is put in it is hemmed down to cover any raw edges.

The front edges of a coat are usually stitched on the right side from a quarter to three-eighths of an inch from the edge. The bottom is merely turned up. In the modern coat there is usually a redingote or separate tailpiece of some sort and in many cases this is joined by a belt.

The skirt, whatever the style chosen, is fitted at the top to a boned or canvas belt. The up to date skirt is much wider and has plaits somewhere.

Careful pressing is essential to a good looking suit. Press into several thicknesses over an ironing board covered with a material of soft, fine texture, as a rough one will mark your cloth. Nearly all pressing is done on the wrong side. Heavy cloth may be pressed under a damp cloth on the right side until nearly dry, then turned and pressed on the wrong side. If your material gets shiny from bad pressing cover the spot with a dry cloth, cover with a damp one, and with a hot iron run lightly over the place.

Answers to Sewing Queries.

RUTH B. R.: Perhaps the reason your coat collar does not set correctly is that you have not shrunk the canvas before putting it in or may have forgotten to stretch it at the part next the neck, which is known as the "stand" of the collar. Canvas is cut three-eighths of an inch smaller at all edges than the pattern. It is attached to the cloth in the turn over part of the collar with padding stitches about a half inch long on the canvas side and barely caught through on the right side. The collar is joined to a coat with the canvas side up and the facing which covers it is really the right side of the collar as it is worn.

SIXTEEN: A girlish finish for your dotted challis dress would be ruchings of soft finished taffeta on the edge of the tunic and on the sleeves and fichu. The taffeta may be self tone, shaded, or can match the dull red dot. Cut bias strips of silk two inches wide, pink or hem the edges, then shirr through the center or lay in narrow box plaits and it is ready to apply. Ruching should be fuller than a ruffle. For the plaited one allow twice and a half the space it is to trim and for the gathered one twice the space. For a chiffon or net ruche cut the strips on the straight of the goods.

UNFORTUNATE: Too bad you tore that jagged hole in your new cloth skirt. Unless you are a skillful mender it will pay you to take it to a tailor. He should not charge you much and the work is often done so it does not show. As the edges are so jagged it may perhaps be better to try mending tissue. This is a thin semi-transparent substance that melts under a hot iron. Lay the tear wrong side up on an ironing board and put the edges together as nearly as possible as they were before tearing. Put on a piece of the tissue big enough to cover the entire tear and on top of the tissue a piece of the cloth. Baste the cloth in position without stitching through the tissue. Run a hot iron several times over the cloth until the patch is firmly stuck to the cloth and the jagged edges are neatly joined. Rip the bastings and lastly cut away all superfluous material in the patch.

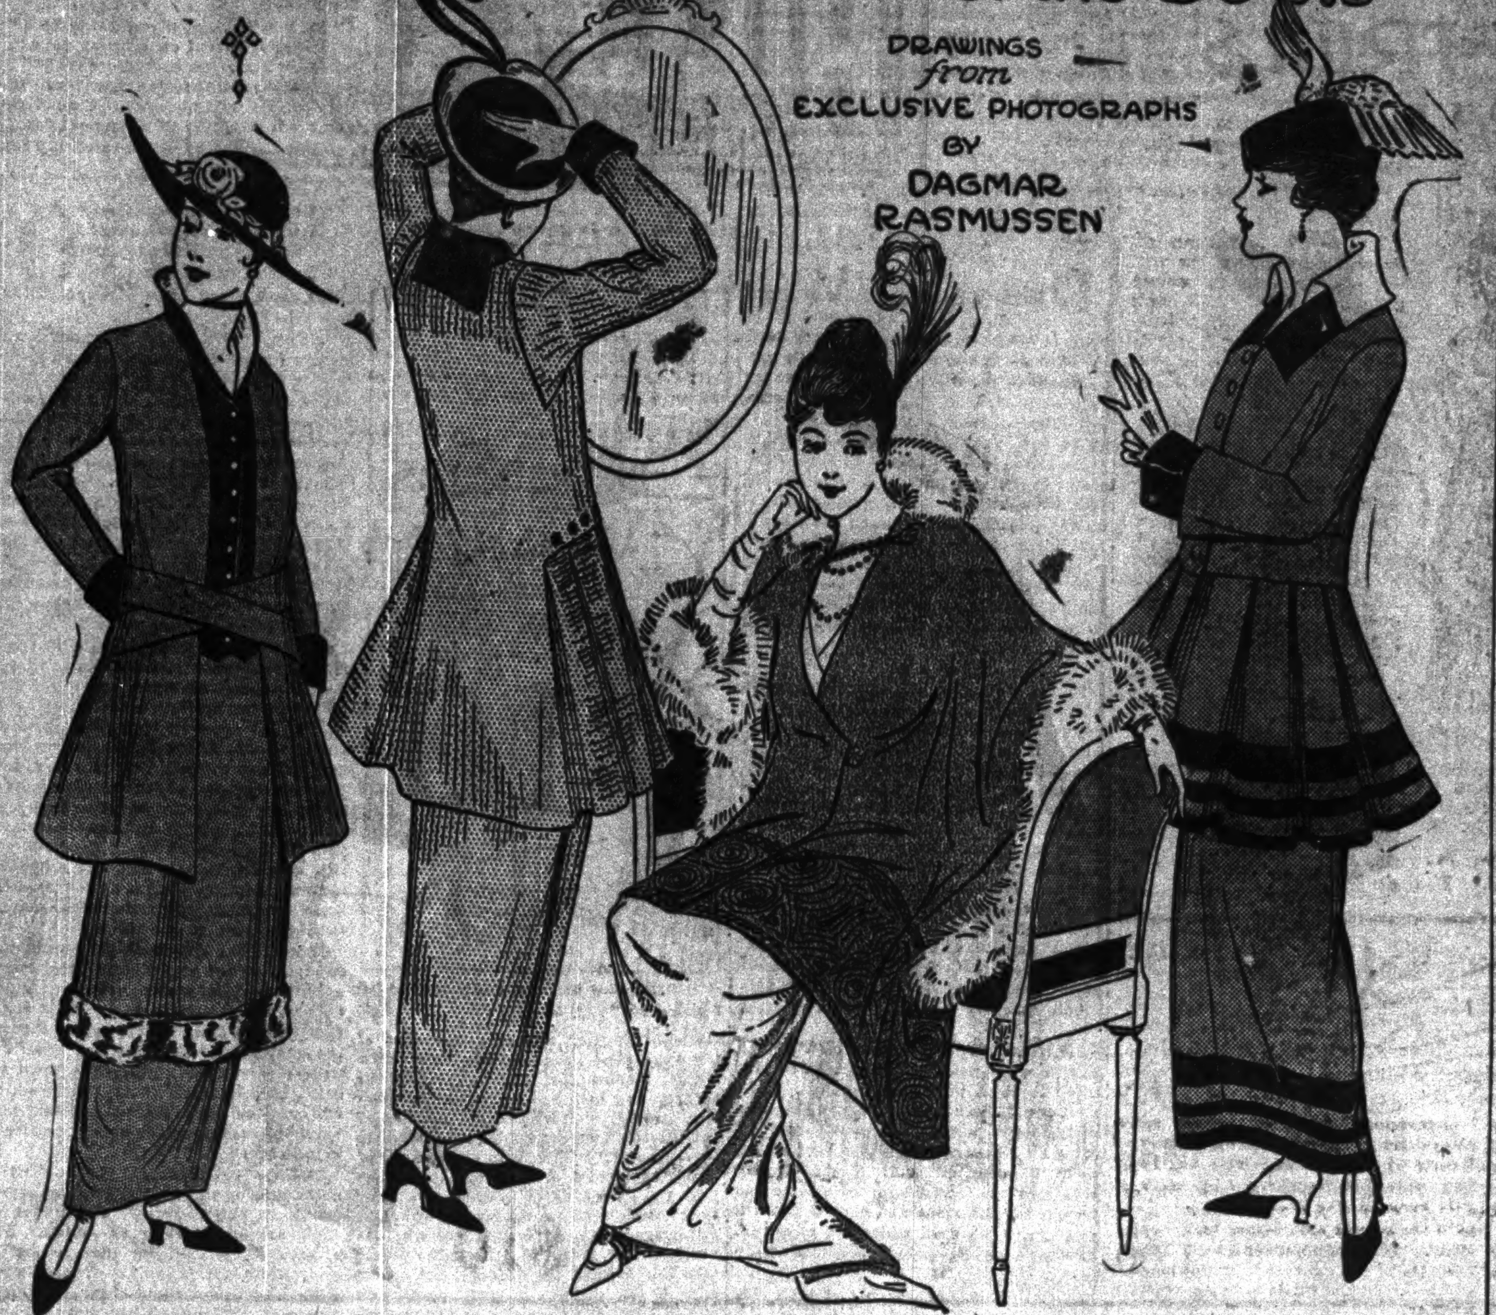
DEBUTANTE: It is hard to advise you as to the clothes you will need, as you do not tell me how gay you expect to be. Different localities require different dressing. However, considering the dancing fad, it is well to concentrate on at least two pretty dancing gowns. As this exercise is hard on dresses, get more of them rather than such costly ones. All are made short, and most of them this year are sleeveless, though some have transparent sleeves to the wrist. You will find serviceable a dainty petticoat of white crêpe de chine, lace trimmed. These are much more worn now than the lingerie skirts. For your "coming out," by all means wear a white dress. Nowadays even for a tea a girl is frankly décolleté, so this gown later may be used for balls. If you have but two evening dresses, have the white one of lace with satin sleeveless basque and sash and the other of pink crêpe de chine or satin. As you must buy so much, why not make yourself an evening wrap from your cream colored circular that is so voluminous and so old fashioned? Have it dyed a deep rose, cut over a modern pattern, and trim with bandings of brown fur around neck and sleeves if you have no furs to wear with it.

LATEST STREET SUITS SUGGEST PICTURESQUE PERIODS of the LOUIS



DRAWINGS from EXCLUSIVE PHOTOGRAPHS BY DAGMAR RASMUSSEN

Evening coat of white velvet trimmed with white fox and edged with metal embroidery.

Street suit of broadcloth with bands of black velvet. The lower part of the coat has the new minaret tunic effect and is four yards in diameter.

LONDON—[Special Correspondence.]—There is no denying that the present street suits which are seen here now in the smartest shops are decidedly attractive and suggest in their quaint picturesqueness the long period of the Louis in France. Usually the material is velvet or velour de laine and one of the newest styles is the coat with the minaret tunic.

It will be remembered that this same tunic was discarded last summer as a thing belonging to the past and the fact that it has made its reappearance on the latest models is naturally causing more or less excitement.

The suit with a coat of this sort was of crême de menthe velvet. It was edged with black fox and there was much fullness about the waist caused by shirring. The sleeves were of three-quarter length—and more sleeves than might have been expected at the first of the season are of this length—and they flared out up to the elbow. The minaret tunic effect shot out directly from the waist line much as in the accompanying illustration.

These flaring coats are many of them of a rather startling nature. Generally they reach to about the knees, this length being the most popular one. As for the skirts they are frankly bell shape and resemble in their shortness the queer little short skirts worn in the early thirties. Indeed the more it flares the more fashionable it is and since this same statement holds good in the case of the redingote there is no telling just what appearance women will present if the present full tendency continues.

Speaking of fur trimmings, it is evident that the vogue of the narrow fur band is no more. Four and one-half inches is the limit of narrowness, and many times it is seen edging coats and skirts seven and eight inches and even a foot deep. From glimpses of a few French models which have drifted here since the first stirrings of war it would seem that fur is to be used in most unusual ways. For instances there are the long haired furs, which are used in the way of deep girdles on dresses, suits, and even on occasions for evening coats. There are several furs which are going to rival one another for fashion supremacy this fall. There is the moleskin and the astrakhan, skunk and the sable, and the gorgeous silver fox so much a favorite with women of certain coloring.

One rather novel idea in coats I saw incorporated in a tailored suit which had a collar and undersleeves of moleskin—no suggestion whatever of a cuff, but rather of an entire lower sleeve. The coat was also trimmed with the martial braid effect and accentuated by long silk cords which ran under the box plaits of the coat at the back and fell almost to the hem of the skirt.

Colored handkerchiefs are to be used again this winter. Much of the linen they are made up in is of the sheerest imaginable variety and always should match the costume if that same costume be light. If the costume be dark, though, a vivid single color of red or startling blue may be worn with it. Generally the hemstitched edge should be about a quarter of an inch wide with a monogram embroidered in one corner and in a darker shade than the color of the handkerchief.

Plaited effects in the bodices of gowns is one of the latest fashion ideas. This not only holds good where silks and sheer materials are concerned, but also where the soft woolen materials are in use. One handsome cashmere in sphinx shaded material was plaited both skirt and waist, the bodice cut square in the neck and fur outlined. A single pink rose was worn on the shoulder, though this has been assumed to such an extent that it is no longer the last word in fashions.

Black and silver is a combination which is more or less affected now instead of the perpetual black and white that has been so much used. One handsome black taffeta frock had a huge girdle nearly two feet in width, which was embroidered extensively in silver. The pattern was floral, large and simple.

Another black and silver arrangement I saw, which was more or less becoming to the model who wore it, consisted of a short coat which just came to the waist. The vest, which was slightly visible, was of silver satin and the underskirt, which was only glimpsed beneath a long tunic which reached quite to the bottom of the skirt, was slightly open in the front. There is no denying, however, that the black and silver combination has a tendency to make the wearer look more mature and that furthermore it is not so striking as is the black and white. For these two reasons there is every likelihood that its popularity will be of comparatively short duration.

At the Circus.

When I was about 16 I lived in a small town and the coming of a circus was a great event. I had looked forward to going very much, so just before the performance started I was standing outside the tent waiting for my folks to come up, when all of a sudden an elephant stuck his trunk from under the canvas of the tent and in searching around in the grass his trunk struck my foot.

He immediately closed on my foot and started to pull me toward the tent—of course, he couldn't see me from the inside, so I suppose he wanted to see what he had got hold of. In my surprise I started to pull back, tripped and fell, and he kept on pulling me toward the tent I was screaming and trying to hold back, but it wasn't any use for he was so strong. When finally he had pulled me under the canvas of the tent and got a good look at me I suppose his surprise was as great as mine, for he let go at once.

Just then one of the keepers came running up and assisted me to my feet and as quite a crowd had collected you can imagine my embarrassment at being dragged headlong upon the ground before half the folk in town. E. B.

He Tried to Please.

This summer I was at a resort with grandma, who is a strict teetotaler. She was dissatisfied with our hotel and decided to investigate another one. We went over and they showed us all the conveniences, etc.

When we were leaving, as we came out on the crowded front porch, grandma turned to speak to the guide and she thought that back through the open door she saw an entrance to a bar. She said in a loud voice, "Is there a bar in connection with the hotel?"

The guide gave grandma a knowing wink and said, "No, ma'am, but we can't stop you from having anything you want in your own room." F. C.

His Postscript.

Soon after completing my college course an old acquaintance who could neither read nor write asked me to write a love letter for him. Into this letter I put all the skill of my pen and when it was finished I read the fruit of my labor to the lover.

"Is there anything you wish to add?" I asked.

"Yes," he answered, "you might put here at the bottom, 'excuse poor writing and bad spelling.'" J. C. M.

Had Money in the Bank.

I obtained a metal bank from one of the savings banks, and after several deposits thought I would withdraw all. I went to the bank, elegantly dressed, and handed in book and bank. The teller carelessly cast the bank aside and made some entries. I said, "There is money in the bank." She answered, "I know," and passed the book and bank on to a second teller.

The same thing happened here, and I repeated, "There's money in the bank." At the third window the teller handed me the amount registered in the book, and I again said, "There's money in the bank."

About ten people were in line behind me, all looking to see the bank opened. She opened it, and out fell four pennies. E. G. G.

Did You Ever Play a Practical Joke?

Kept the "Lid" On.

Several years ago while working in the office of a small wholesale house where all employés used the same coat room for hanging up our street coat and hat we would find anything in our pockets from a mouse to a brick, and I decided to joke the joker—after watching and locating the man. I took sticky flypaper and coated the sweatband of his hat, and we were all watching to see the result. He rode a bicycle home to lunch, and, passing a lady acquaintance, tried to tip his hat. He lost his balance and fell off. He came back from lunch with a peculiar haircut given by his mother separating him from the hat. L. H. F.

A city editor of a Chattanooga newspaper used to take delight in hoaxing the dear public regularly on April 1. One April when former President Taft was secretary of war, the city editor wrote and printed a story to the effect that Secretary Taft would arrive at Chattanooga at 9:15 a. m. on a tour of inspection to Fort Oglethorpe, Chickamauga Park. A column or more was devoted to the story and in it appeared the "committee of one hundred patriotic citizens" who would assemble in automobiles at the Union depot, promptly at 9 o'clock to act as an escort of honor.

Each "patriotic citizen" finding his name in the list, decided that the committee had simply failed to advise him, so he cranked up the automobile and went where civic duty called.

At 9 o'clock one hundred automobiles filled with patriotic citizens and fully half of Chattanooga's population were gathered at the station to honor Secretary Taft. At 9:15 the crowd realized that it was the first day of April and there was an immediate rush for the newspaper office. The city editor, however, had been called by urgent business to Nashville. H. A Mock Quarrel.

As superintendent of schools in a small Indiana town I was presiding at my first public entertainment before a large crowd. One of my students who was known to be very blunt of speech was called on for a solo. He made a start but broke down and repeated the performance two or three times. He then angrily declared that it was all the accompanist's fault, that she was ignorant of the first principles of music and that the piece should be played with but one beat to the measure.

To make matters worse one of my teachers rushed forward and gave the student a tongue lashing for attacking the organist and closed by saying there was no such thing as one beat to the measure. Greatly mortified I arose and insisted all parties should withdraw from the platform and that the disgraceful debate should be stopped.

The student went to the back of the stage, got a half bushel measure and holding it before the audience calmly drew out one beet, saying that there was such a thing as one beet to the measure. The whole affair had been prearranged. R. L. K.

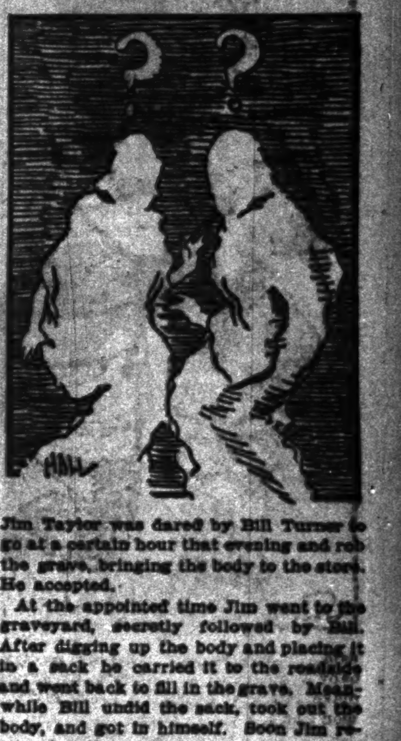
Wouldn't Take a Dare.

My father, who was reared in a small village in England, used to tell this tale: In those days grave robbing was a favorite pastime (?) A funeral had taken place a few days before and the matter was under discussion at the village store.



Jim Taylor was dared by Bill Turner to go at a certain hour that evening and rob the grave, bringing the body to the store. He accepted.

At the appointed time Jim went to the graveyard, secretly followed by Bill. After digging up the body and placing it in a sack he carried it to the roadside and went back to fill in the grave. Meanwhile Bill undid the sack, took out the body, and got in himself. Soon Jim returned and started on his way to the store, with the bag on his back. Half way there he placed the sack on the ground while he wiped away the perspiration. "Whew!" said he, "this is orful 'ot work." Imagine what happened when he heard a voice from the bag, "O, it's not half so hot as you'd be had you been where I've been."

Jim did not bring the body to the store after all. M. D. G.

Had the Same Idea.

My sister and I had just returned from a Halloween party, where we had heard a number of thrilling ghost stories.

Our sleeping rooms were separated by a long closet, a door opening into it at one end from her room and a door at the other end opening from my room. I decided to wrap myself in a sheet, "ghost-wise," and sneak through the closet and give her a real ghost scare. Strange as it may seem she had the same idea, and the two "ghosts" met in the dimly lighted closet, and the scare was complete.

Needless to say, the yell that went up from each of us was enough to awaken the household. MRS. B. M. V.

A Kettle of Doughnuts

When doughnuts are properly made of the right materials, any boy or man with a full grown appetite will eat anywhere from three to a dozen, and won't suffer any bad effects either. But the average man would as soon face flying bullets as go up against doughnuts more adapted for ballast than food.

If YOU want to make GOOD doughnuts DON'T USE SECOND GRADE FLOUR. For here, as in everything else, it's the fine little touches that count. It takes extra fine skill and extra fine flour to make doughnuts that folks rave about. You have the skill, don't spoil it with indifferent flour. Get the best you can lay your hands on.

DAINTY FASHION FRILLS THAT CHARM the EYE

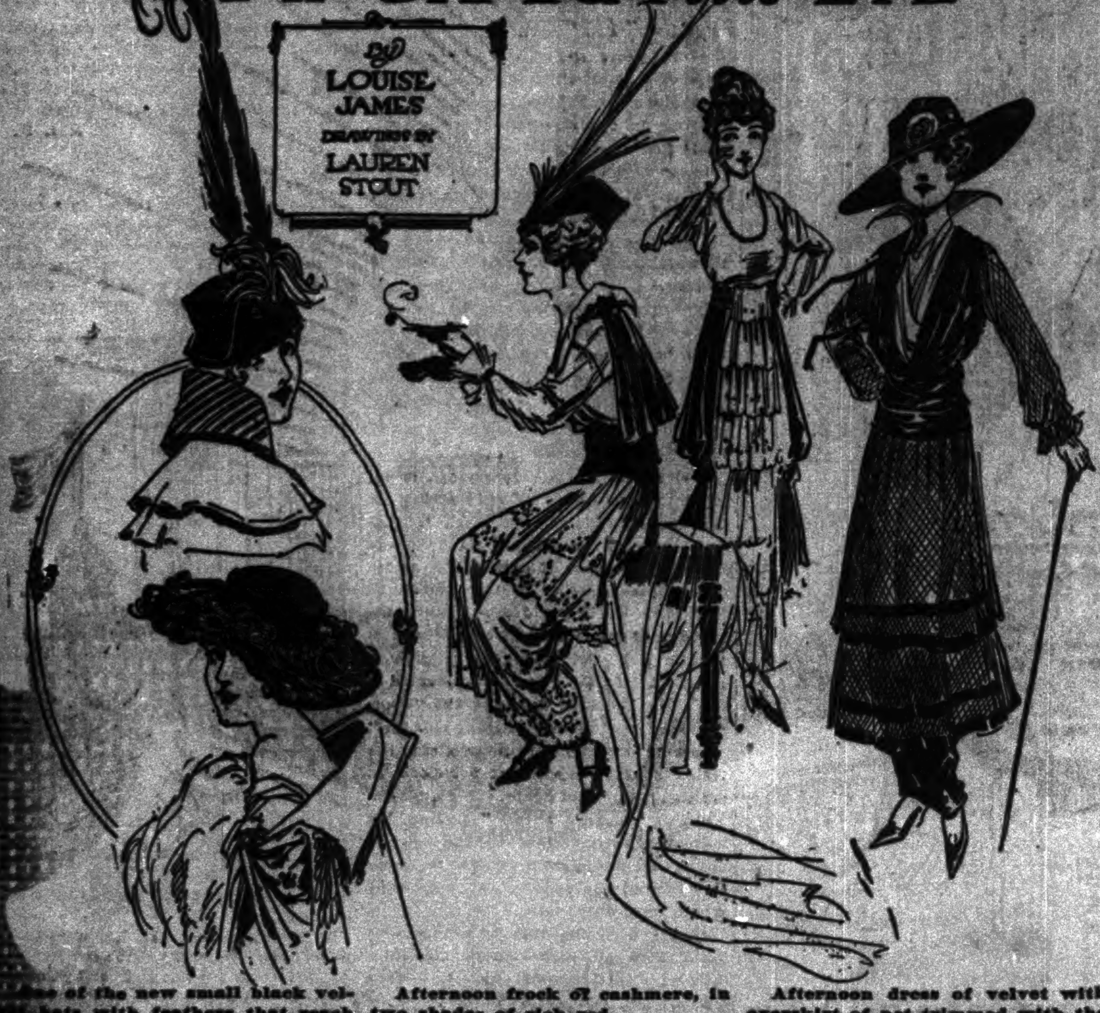
By LOUISE JAMES
DRAWINGS BY LAUREN STOUT



One of the new small black velvet hats with feathers that reach exaggerated heights, rising from the frame of the hat directly in front.

One of the wide brimmed hats, feather trimmed and decorated in the front with a rhinestone bow.

Afternoon frock of cashmere, in two shades of rich red.

Dinner frock of simplest taffetas with overskirt of velvet.

Afternoon dress of velvet with overskirt of net trimmed with the bands of the velvet. The hat is of the new black glove kid with a gilt rose in the front.

THE lure of the fascinating accessory is proving more irresistible this season than ever before, perhaps because more time and effort have been spent on its creating and more energy used in presenting it to the public in its most enchanting form; and every woman who has a little extra amount of money to spend over and above the original cost of her fall suit, coat, hats and dresses can well afford to take, like Cæsar, a day for deliberation and spend it among the shops, deliberating on the feminine frills of linen, lace, and ribbon that will add so decidedly to the attractiveness of her whole person. Nor is it necessary to expend a great amount of money on these same accessories.

There is one accessory which is particularly dressy and likely to prove tremendously popular this coming season and that is the black velvet coatee. I have seen them on models worn over a sheer bodice and raised some two or three inches above the waist line, which is generally encircled in a wide girdle of the same material. Sometimes these coatees are edged with tiny lace frilling and again with the new braid trimming—and, speaking of braid trimmings, I might say here that everything at the present moment in Paris and London is braid trimmed.

Another coatee I saw which was of an exquisite quality of chiffon velvet and banded by a narrow black ribbon of metallic texture. The touch of glittering color in the ribbon was gold and the black tulle ruffles on the skirt of the frock with which the coatee was worn were also edged with the same metallic ribbon. Tassels of gilt were attached to the sash ends, this gold touch being the only bit of color on the whole outfit.

Ribbon is also serving in several new capacities this season. Moire ribbon is to be used extensively about the neck, and even about the waist line, with a tiny pendant of some kind hanging from it. This pendant does not need necessarily to be expensive, some of the smartest women wearing pendants of severely plain gold and unjeweled. With these chains are often seen gold or jet slides. Then, too, some of the latest wrist watches are attached to bracelets of moire ribbon which is about half an inch wide. These ribbon bracelets are double and caught with a gold clasp. Often the moire bracelet watch is worn with the moire chain about the neck, and in this the gold slides for both are the same size and shape.

All varieties of new collars and neckpieces are coming into use. The full plaited ruff which stands up straight and then is tied closely about the neck with a strip of black velvet ribbon is no longer a novelty, but at the same time it is growing in favor. Often a vest or front portion is worn with the neck ruff and tiny black buttons adorn it down the front. With this one may also wear the new lingerie cuff, which is merely a double frill bound with a narrow black velvet ribbon.

There is also an abundance of the high tailored collars which come close about the neck, high both back and front. If one objects too positively, however, to this severely plain effect the collar can be made to open a bit in the front and a softening frill can edge it all around the neck.

Despite all that is said to the contrary the V neck line remains in favor. I have seen some high necked chemisettes which come down square in the front with no suggestion of the eternal triangle we have seen for so long. Then I have seen others with the oblong effect—that is, dropping off a little at the shoulder line—but these are the exception rather than the rule and seem on the whole to be not entirely popular.

Hosiery is another accessory which is forever claiming for itself a tremendous amount of attention. This season, while there is such a decided slackening of the color fage in many lines of apparel, hosiery does not take on any somberness at all. Many of the newest shades are being incorporated into the fall hosiery, while there are festive stockings in Italian silks printed in heart and diamondlike checks and meant primarily of course for the woman with a tendency toward the bizarre in dress.

One interesting millinery note which comes to us from Paris is that black lace hats are to be worn edged with various kinds of furs. Of course the French climate is by no means as cold as the average American climate, and yet our coldest weather does not come till after Christmas, and up to that time at least the lace hat is not an anomaly. Many of the prettiest lace hats are broad and flat brimmed, and skunk and sable, marten and mouse fur alike are used to edge them. One darling little lace hat I saw was more like a cap than a hat, and it was worn down close to the face with a smart little frill framing the face and edged with fur.

Another hat, in striking contrast to this small lace affair, was a huge sailor shape which was entirely covered on the top with breitschwantz—which, by the way, is still to be as popular as ever—and which was lined with a glorious burnt orange. The crown was a bit low for any kind of trimming—and, indeed, there was no trimming except an artificial rose of the same preposterous shade of burnt orange, but which combined splendidly for the general effect.

Have You Received a Compliment?

"Comparisons Are Odious."

One afternoon a young man friend came unexpectedly to call and found me washing woodwork and presenting altogether a most unattractive appearance in my workday garb. I ushered him into the living room, where there happened to be a big bouquet of peonies in a handsome vase, at the same time offering profuse apologies for my appearance. Quick as a flash he said: "Don't apologize; wouldn't those peonies be just as pretty in an old bucket as they are in that vase?"

Too Many Years.

The superintendent of the high school was gently scolding some pupils for not remaining to get special help in mathematics, as I had requested. The scolding was being done before the entire assembly.

He said to them sarcastically: "Do you suppose Miss Brown enjoys sitting down after school and helping you over and over again with this work, which she knows by heart and which she has taught for years and years and years?"

The eyes of every pupil in school immediately turned on me, and a laugh spread over all the room. I was glad, indeed, to slip through a nearby door and to cool my cheeks in the seclusion of my own classroom.

Mother at the Polls.

I felt pleased and embarrassed with a compliment paid me recently. I was in line with many other women at the place of registration and when I stepped up to the desk the clerk asked me, smilingly: "Are you sure you're old enough to vote?" I replied that I certainly was and also was the mother of two future voters.

One from Little Willie.

When in college I boarded at a club. I was quite a whistler, and little Willie, the matron's 4 year old son, was anxious to learn how it was done. One evening after supper I was entertaining a crowd of young people in the parlor and was greatly pleased by their applause. Willie stood by me watching each motion of my lips most earnestly. Suddenly he heaved a great sigh and said: "Gee! I just wish I had a nice big mouth like yours! Bet I could whistle then, too."

Song Was Beautiful.

When I was a young girl I took vocal lessons for a number of years. One evening, while attending a party, my hostess requested me to sing. When I had finished one of the first to greet me was a middle aged woman who shook my hand enthusiastically and said: "That's a beautiful song, young lady. You really should have your voice cultivated."

True to Her Name.

Although my name is Frances, my husband and most of my friends call me Frank. Before I was married my time was devoted to business, so when my husband took me to call upon his mother and she asked me if I could sew or cook I quite honestly replied: "No, but I shall learn." She laughed softly and, taking my hand, replied kindly: "Frank by name and frank by nature."

History tells how Euclid, the Greek mathematician and philosopher, who flourished 300 years B. C., while expounding the problem of subdividing the circle to King Ptolemy, was interrupted by the irate monarch exclaiming: "I am wearied by such dull lessons, and refuse to burden my memory with stupid rules!" Whereupon the great mathematician replied: "Then your majesty will graciously permit me to resign the position of imperial instructor, for none but a fool knows of a royal road to mathematics." "Right you are, Euc!" interjected Beppo, the court jester, as he pushed his way to the blackboard, "and, in accepting the position so gracefully tendered, I will proceed to demonstrate how the great principles of higher mathematics can be taught by simple kindergarten methods which children may understand and remember. With the kind permission of your majesty we will now elucidate the subdivision of the circle by asking Tommy Riddles, the court crier, whose learning is limited to the science of simple addition, to show into how many pieces it is possible to divide a German pancake with seven straight cuts of a knife. Furthermore, to add a point to the moral of the story of the sword of Damocles, which is shown to be suspended over our heads by a single thread, we will proceed to impress it indelibly upon the memory by connecting it with a scientific and practical problem: Why is the blade of that scimitar always shown to be curved? Noting with pleasure the presence of the 'Pons asinorum,' the ass's bridge problem, which my distinguished predecessor has made famous as his forty-seventh proposition, which proves that the square described on the long side of a right angled triangle, termed the hypotenuse, is equal to the sum of the squares of the other two sides, I will ask the author of the forty-seventh proposition to tell how many rails of equal length it would require to inclose a right angled triangular field if one of the three sides was forty-seven rails long." The clown's forty-seventh proposition will doubtless prove that many good mathematicians have much yet to learn regarding the wonderful principles of Pons asinorum, which may be said to underlie the foundations of mathematics and geometry.

Lillian Russell's Hints to Beauty Seekers.

MRS. W. A.: A splendid cure for insomnia is to have plenty of fresh air in your bedroom and then stretch yourself out flat on your back, using no pillow. Now stretch your toes down, just as far as you can, then stretch the arms down just as far as you can at the sides. Keeping this tense position, raise your right hand and close your right nostril. Fill the lungs as full as possible through the left nostril, count three, and expel the air. Return right hand to your side and relax all muscles while you count fifteen. Go through the same operation with the left hand, increasing to ten times as you feel able.

MRS. S. V.: I cannot give you any information in regard to the articles you mention. Some soaps agree with some skins, while the same soap cannot be used by others. You will have to decide this question for yourself. If the soap leaves your skin dry and with a burning sensation after washing with it then it does not agree with your skin. Here is a formula for a lotion which is used to soften the water for bathing purposes: Five ounces rectified spirits of wine, one ounce of ammonia, and one-half dram oil of verbena. Add a teaspoonful of this lotion to about a basin of water. Where the water is hard or contains a limy deposit, some kind of a softener is almost imperative if one would have a soft, delicate grained skin.

* *

B. L.: Whether you can use glycerin on your face is a question you must decide for yourself. Every one cannot use glycerin. It is healing to one person's skin and irritating to another's. Many people use it pure, but it is usually mixed with rosewater. If your skin becomes blotchy and irritated after using the glycerin it does not agree with your skin. I have never heard of glycerin causing a growth of hair. No, do not use peroxide on your face. Peroxide bleaches, but in time it causes the skin to become dry and yellow and full of fine wrinkles. Send me a stamped, addressed envelope and I shall send you the formulas for cold cream and face bleach.

MARGARET: A good bleach will whiten your neck and arms. The first thing to do to your hair is to cut off the split ends. Hair that is split will not grow and does not get the nourishment it should. Massage your scalp each night, using a good hair tonic. I shall gladly send you the formula for hair tonic and bleach for the arms and neck if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope. The tonic will promote a growth of hair.

* *

M. T.: Constant wearing of high collars will make the neck dark. I am not a great believer in instantaneous bleaches of any kind. The following formula, however, is simple and harmless: One-quarter ounce of lactic acid, one-quarter ounce of peroxide of hydrogen, three ounces of witch hazel. Apply this to the face with a soft cloth and after it has dried thoroughly dab the face with a good cold cream. Do this night and morning for awhile and a great improvement will result.

* *

W. J. M.: Shampoo your hair with a good shampoo about every three or four weeks. I shall be glad to send you a formula for soap jelly, which is an excellent shampoo for locks of any color, if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

H. J.: Yes, indeed, your hair will grow. I know people who have had their hair cut when they were much older than you are and it grew in beautifully. The only thing for you to do is to take good care of your hair. Brush your hair and scalp each night with a long bristled brush. As your hair is so short it will be an easy matter to reach the scalp. This will move some of the dandruff. Massage your scalp, using a good hair tonic. You were indeed unfortunate to loose your lovely hair through the carelessness of another person. I am sorry. However, I think if you use a good tonic each night your hair will soon grow. If you can possibly get along without false hair I would advise you not to wear it. It injures the scalp to pile false hair on it. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall gladly send you formula for hair tonic with instructions for scalp massage.

CHUBBY: If you leave your bangs alone they will soon grow. Don't curl them on an iron, for curling keeps them short. Rub vaseline into the roots each night. This will help them to grow. For the spots on your face, I am afraid I cannot help you. If they are sores, as you say they are, the best thing would be to consult a good physician regarding them. They may be caused from the blood and a good blood tonic may help you. Don't pinch them or irritate them in any way. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to send you bleach for tan and formula for removing superfluous hair.

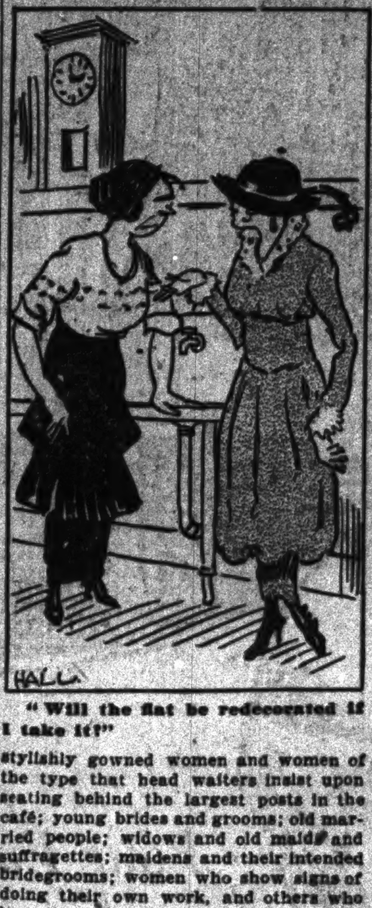
A Few Notations on Flat Hunters.

By EMILY BROWN HEININGER.

IF you want to get wise to every type of humanity, just let the agent post a "To Rent" sign in your front window and put your address on his renting list. Before the glue on the little stickers that hold the brilliantly hued "ad" in place is dry, humanity begins to stream in. Your bell rings. You say "Hello" through the speaking tube, with the sweetest imitation welcome you can assume. Then the stereotyped conversation is turned on at full force.

The flat hunters parade in. There are male and female species; alone and in couples; people with offsprings and no pets; people with pets and no offsprings; stylishly gowned women and women of the type that head waiters insist upon seating behind the largest posts in the café; young brides and grooms; old married people; widows and old maids and suffragettes; maidens and their intended bridegrooms; women who show signs of doing their own work, and others who bear the earmarks of keeping a maid or two; people who are in search of bright and attractive quarters; others who are seeking only a financial bargain; people who live beyond their means, and others who do not believe in spending enough money for the necessities of life; people who expect an $85 apartment for $25; smiling people; frowning people; polite ones, and those who are very rude. In fact, if there be any type of humanity not flat hunting either in the spring or the fall, let it be heralded as the eighth wonder of the twentieth century.



"Will the flat be redecorated if I take it?"

All come armed with the same line of inquiries, and each one has an original variation of the catechism that astounds you for impertinence. Some of them run thus:

"Is this the flat that is for rent?"

"Yes." And you wonder if the questioner can't read the sign in the window.

"Is the janitor any good?"

"Sometimes yes and sometimes no."

"How about the steam heat?"

"It varies, according to the weather. Slight on cold days and heavy when it is not needed."

"Do you have plenty of hot water?"

"Usually, except on laundry days."

"My! Isn't the bedroom dark?"

"Yes; that is why we are moving. It is particularly so from noon till midnight and from midnight till noon next day."

"Will the flat be redecorated if I take it?"

"Ask the agent."

"Can't I get any concession?"

"Again I say, ask the agent."

"When are you going to move?"

"The 15th of the month."

"O, well, I can have free rent till the 1st of the month, can't I?"

"Nerve," you answer under your breath as you realise that it is your own money that is being squandered a month in advance, and you lead the way to the pantry and bathroom to discover that the maid has forgotten to clean them up.

After a suffering human being has gone through this ordeal 'steen times a day the agent should refund one month's rent for it is a direful deed. Flat hunters are an inconsiderate bunch of bipeds. They seem to have a superhuman instinct for knowing when it will be most inconvenient to ask to see your flat and act accordingly.

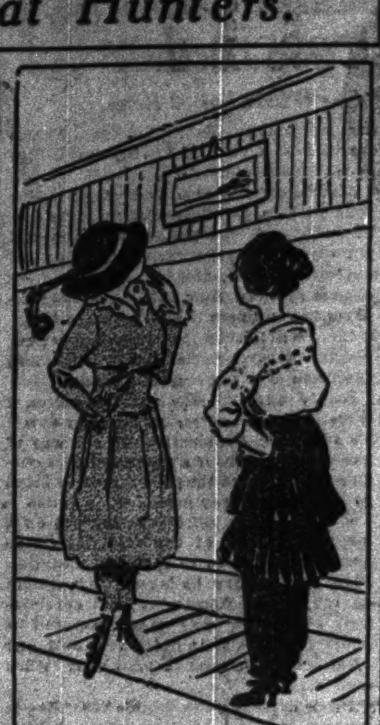
If you have it all exceptionally clean from the mail box to the garbage can, and are dolled up and manicured to the high water mark, and sit with folded hands waiting to show the intruders through, you will find that nobody seems to be looking for flats to rent. But just wait until the day you let the front room go unswept, the bed unmade, your back hair on top of the dresser, and start to canning your fruit for the winter. Your bell will ring a tattoo that sounds like a Spanish castanet dance. You no sooner herd one bunch out than you find another delegation clamoring to get in.

There is one species of flat hunter who can tell all the way across town if you are turning the water into the tub preparatory to taking a bath. This is the time they most enjoy rummaging through the privacy of your living quarters. Others seem to be gifted with the art of being able to smell your dinner cooking, and no time suits them for giving your home the once over like when your meal is being served.

Perhaps the fact that flat hunting by night and by day leaves them no opportunity to put their own feet under the table, and as misery loves company, they always enjoy knowing that your steak and gravy are doing the frapped stunt while they linger about blaming you for a thousand reasons why they do not care for your present abode.

You can pretend you are not at home, but alas! useless as a fur coat at the equator. Flat hunters are on to such tricks. They know you are acting a lie because their own domiciles are likewise for rent and if they stay home long enough they play the same game on others. It is up to you to compromise by letting them in, for if you don't you will hear such a rattling and banging on the front door that you begin to wonder if the place is being mobbed.

Curiosity forces you to peek through the door to find out what in the sand hills is going on. Said flat hunters spy the crack in the door, hear you move, and then it is all off for you. They push right in past you and again you go through your catechism and answer all the questions put to you. Frequently the intruders wind up their query with, "Well, have you any cockroaches?"



"Well, have you any cockroaches?"

A delicate question to ask a perfect stranger, isn't it?

Were it possible to hide your portable valuables under lock and key it would be a good idea to prop the front door open, draw a picture of a hand with the digit pointing to a "This Way In" sign, go on about your business, and let them roam in and out at pleasure.

From the outside view of 100 per cent of the flat buildings in the city one can tell with the naked eye whether there are any sun parlors, porches, and lawns to the premises, but so many flat dwellers do not realize this. They forge ahead, get into your confidence as to how many rooms you have, how much rent you are booked up to pay; take an inventory of the contents of your linen closet and refrigerator; and if you happen to be residing in one of the porchless and sun parlorless apartments, they ring down the curtain on their little skit by exclaiming, as they adjust the hairpins that insist on falling down over the left eyebrow, in an "O, deah! Ain't it h—— to be poor!" manner, "I kawn't live without a sun parlor and a sleeping porch," and they skid back to where they came from, probably some exclusive residential section of Halsted street, up over the store, where a ray of pure sunlight coudn't thrive with the assistance of a pulmotor.

After nine-tenths of the population of the city go through this ordeal every year, isn't it a wonder that they don't all start in to buy a home on the installment plan with a never move clause in the deed?

ECZEMA ON CHILD ITCHED AND BURNED

In Rash First. Could Not Sleep or Rest. Hard Crust Covered Neck. Awful Disfigurement. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

R. F. D. No. 4, Box 55, Holland, Mich.—"My child's trouble began by getting red and sore around her neck, and her face, behind her ears, under her arms, and different parts of her body were affected. The eczema appeared in a rash first. It was wet and looked as if it was sweaty. It seemed to itch and burn so that she could not sleep or rest. It got so bad at last that behind her ears was one crust or sore so that I had to cut her hair. There was a hard crust covering her neck. She could not have her clothes buttoned at all. I could hardly change her clothes. It caused an awful disfigurement for the time. She would cry when I had to wash her.

"We had her treated for some time but without success. The trouble had lasted about four weeks when we began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had not used them more than three days when I could see she was getting better. I got one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and I had not used more than half of what I bought when she was all cured." (Signed) Mrs. G. C. Riemers Mar. 21, 1914.

ANOTHER year! The 39th Milestone has been reached. We pause to reflect over events of the years gone by. We see The Fair, a little one-story store in 1875, growing year by year, building a better store for a bigger future, advancing, with giant strides, into the ranks of the world's greatest department stores.

In our retrospection we see that this store known as The Fair was destined to become a good store because its service has been good—that it was destined to become a great store because its economies have been great.

We realize that these thirty-nine years of honest methods have resulted in thirty-nine years of steady, healthy growth—that the public has always appreciated our policy of "Honest Merchandise at Honest Prices."

To celebrate this 39th Birthday we shall hold a six day celebration sale, presenting economies that shall stand as value-giving records for many days to come.

TOMORROW this great sale begins. For the first day four pages are required to carry our many money-saving messages. This and the following three pages tell the tale of the many wonderful economies for the first day of our Anniversary celebration.

EVERY department in the store is represented in this Anniversary Sale. Always a great saving occasion, this year's will be Chicago's banner selling event, to which every one in Chicago and the surrounding territory is now cordially and earnestly invited.

KRELL'S BAND has been engaged for this great occasion. Concerts will be given daily from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. in the Grand Rotunda. A special entertainment will be presented in our Cafe, 7th Floor, from 11:30 A. M. to 2:30 P. M. A pleasing program has been prepared in honor of our Anniversary. Special musical programs will be issued.

PASTE SAMPLES OF PAPER SELECTED ON SPOTS INDICATING ROOMS TO STUDY CO-RELATION OF COLORS.

THE selection of wall paper in the average rented quarters, whether house or apartment, is fraught with pitfalls. It is as though the landlord and the decorator had come together to have one merry little jest at the expense of the inexperienced housewife who is being allowed to "choose" her own paper.

There are many side angles to this choice that make it funny. She is like one of the lambs at the stockyards that "chooses" to go into the slaughter house; she is led right to it. As a matter of fact, her "choice" is made for her when they "see her coming." I have gone into a dozen different apartments owned by the same real estate man, and though the tenants were distinctly different types of women, and evidently different in taste, the paper they had "chosen" was identical in all. How do you account for that?

In the regular mode of procedure, the prospective tenant is told that she may go down to any one of several big wall paper houses (known to the trade as book houses because they sell from sample books—jobbers who buy in large quantities) and make her selection from hundreds of rolls. This is done. If the jobber is overstocked with a certain pattern she usually chooses that pattern. As far as she knows her choice has been voluntary. If she is certain to be dissatisfied with it, that fact is a comforting reassurance to the dealer. The more she dislikes it after it is up, the sooner it must come down—and another sale be made. So the woman with the large family must always remember "she did it herself."

But the object of this article is not to go into the tricks of the trade—we could write volumes on that score—but to give a few simple directions on how to select wall paper judiciously, for undoubtedly excellent material is to be had in the book houses. The point is to learn how to select wisely.

The first thing to do is to study your type—mirrors, I should say—the more the better. Arrange them so that you can see yourself all the way around. Do not buy the paper that you decide on right away. Have a roll of each kind that pleases you sent out, pin it upon the wall, and, with the aid of your mirrors, "try it on," just as you would try on a hat or dress before determining to buy it. Pose before it. Remember that this paper is to be a background for yourself. You will find that certain designs that may be admitted to be beautiful in themselves detract from your lines, make your profile ineffectual, or, it may be, make you look shorter or taller than you care to be, or, by their insistent pattern, divert the eye from the graceful sweep of your own figure.

Every woman's beauty may be divided essentially into two factors—line and color. See that whatever charm you possess in either of these two factors be not obliterated by your background. If your lines are beautiful by all means emphasize that fact, and keep them pure by means of flat grounds. A woman created in beautiful lines is nature's chef d'oeuvre to the world.

Color is equally important. Women of warm rich coloring may be made muddy looking by light, chalky grounds, while they would be gorgeously beautiful amid deep oriental hues. Women of delicate coloring, on the other hand, seem "washed out" on a ground of clear, rich color, while they would be exquisite, surrounded by what are known as "pastel shades."

That your wall paper is to be your own individual background and must be kept in the background, may be set down as rule 1 in the selection of your paper. Rule 2 is that there shall be a distinct relation between all of the colors used in the home.

The first request of a really good conservative decorator is that you shall supply him with the architectural plans of the place to be decorated. If these are not available, before the decorator begins his work he sends some one to measure the rooms and note the lighting. It is important to know the direction of the light, as this often alters the shade. For example, a gray that is creamy in an east room will be cold and bluish in a north room. When you are "trying on" your paper do so in the rooms in which they are to be used.

In however amateurish a way, make for yourself a drawing of the plans of your home. Any one can do that roughly; clip a sample of each paper that you [illegible] paste it on the space, indicating each room in your drawing. The accompanying illustration done by a 12 year old child gives the idea.

Now you may readily see whether or not the colors you have selected are agreeable together. As they Dutchman says, they bust "go mit."

There is a fad at present for what is known as self colors. That is, having all of the rooms done in different shades of one color. Such a scheme would be carried out, for example, in the accompanying plan, in this way. Fawn color for the living room in fabric paper; that is, paper imitating some textile such as canvas, grasscloth, or corduroy. The tone is dull so that the big upholstered chairs used in it, if old, may not appear shabby. The bedrooms are a rich cream color with white woodwork, variety of color to be supplied in the chintz curtains and cushions. Note those in the illustration. Dining room in autumn foliage paper; spare room in tan with motifs cut from the foliage of the dining room paper, placed on the cove at intervals after the conventional manner of stenciling.

The hall is in the same fabric paper as the living room. The bathrooms are white. Many decorators are now recommending the use of the same paper for all rooms that open into each other. The effect tends to agreeable spaciousness rather than monotony. It is a wise idea to win the confidence of your paper hanger to the extent of having him explain to you the marks on the back of each sample in the sample books. Then you may satisfy your curiosity as to the intrinsic value of the papers selected, for the prices vary astonishingly of all of the samples that are shown in one book. One of the jokes of the trade is that nine out of ten women choose the cheapest papers, when expensive papers, sampled in the same books, are free to their choice.

The most urgent "don't" that I can think of pertains to the choice of borders. Ninety-nine per cent of the "borders to match" are hideous monstrosities. To avoid taking one chance in a hundred, don't choose any of them. Have the molding put up to the ceiling, if the ceiling is low, or if one-third way down the wall is preferred, panel the upper third, or paper it in a shade half way between the shade of the ceiling and the lower side wall. This is good where ceilings are high.

The living room should be restful and form an unobtrusive ground for one or two really good pictures. Do not detract from the beauty of your pictures and your good case of well bound books by having a conspicuous paper.

In the dining room, on the contrary, where pictures are out of place, the papering may—indeed should—be gay. In the bedrooms, light and a feeling of cleanliness are essential. Many women, setting the principles of hygiene above all, would no more think of having pictures, pennants, or other ornaments hanging on their bedroom wall than they would of hanging the same accessories in their bathrooms. Women who object to wall ornaments in bedrooms often like ornamental papers. Small floral sprigs such as are seen in Chippendale chintz, with plain colored curtains of red, taffeta, or China silk are never in poor taste.

If you see that each color and design that you select is becoming to you, and that all the colors and designs are in accord with one another, you will find that your home will not only bear the stamp of your personality but will inevitably have the charm of harmony.

Replies to Queries.

MRS. H. F. H.: Your room having gray wall paper with baskets of blue rose and yellow flowers, would be more in harmony if you used your rag rugs in it instead of the Smyrna rug, as the terra cotta you describe in the latter would be discordant with blue rose in the wall paper. Also, since you have figured wall paper, the room would be more reposeful with unfigured floor coverings and draperies. This completes the room, it needs no further suggestion. Why did you bronze your wicker furniture? Haven't you robbed it of the charm of flexibility—not in reality, but in appearance? Real willow is a suitable material for comfortable furniture. Would real bronze be? Why imitate an undesirable quality? Many people who have front and back parlors, as you describe yours to be, do away with draperies at the communicating doorway and throw the two rooms as much as possible into one, making it a living room, and dispensing with the reception room. If you have a number of callers whom in your heart you do not love, keep the two rooms separate. Make of your parlor a coldly formal room in which to receive them. Have in it neither lounge, bookcase, nor bric-a-brac. Assemble all of the comfortable furniture in the back room. If, on the other hand, your visitors are good friends rather than formal acquaintances, throw your two rooms into one for their generous reception and for your own full and free use.

MRS. J. O. W.: Why not panel your light tan bedroom in this way? Get some ribbon striped wall paper in olive green. Cut the stripes into ribbons and apply a single ribbon band [it should be about an inch and a half wide] straight along within two inches of all of the edges of your wall. Wherever there are angles in the wall, run the up and down stripe within two inches of the corners. Then have olive green inside curtains to match. This is a color scheme that will not clash with the colors in your rug. It will also go well with the adjoining room, with which you are rightfully satisfied. I approve of everything in it excepting the brass bed. I should like to have a picture or a better description of your library table. In the most beautiful colored picture that I have of fine interiors abroad, many lovely rooms done in shades of tan, green and brown have runners or rugs in beautiful ruby red. Unless you require privacy, leave your beveled glass hall door uncurtained.

MISS M. E.: First of all, a living room should be comfortable. Keep that in mind. It should be quiet and restful, and not filled with a confusion of ornaments and ornamental designs. Let there be a good lounge, a table for current magazines, a big scrap basket, a bookcase, sofa pillows (but simple ones, covered with good material), and easy chairs—not rocking chairs. Unfigured wall paper is good with rugs or carpets of contrasting color. Let the light come in well through the windows, and be not hindered with too much drapery. Have a few pictures, a table lamp, and another light placed conveniently near to the head of the sofa for comfort in reading while lying down. If you have a desk, place it where the daylight will fall on it. Put nothing in your room that is not necessary to comfort, and your living room will be pleasant and in good taste. Rooms where expense has been consciously indulged in are always offensive. Your assertion that "expenses need not be spared" makes me fear that you might have wished for advice that called for more ostentation. This I cannot in conscience give. Simplicity and sincerity are, to my thinking, the keynote of refinement. Have only what you need in your room, and see that each article is honestly designed to fill that need. Study the correlation of colors and proportions, so that all may go well together, and you will have a room that invites peace and repose, rather than exclamations of vulgar envy.

Varied Activities of the Women.

English Red Cross nurses wear male riding costumes.

Many women, principally Cossacks, are applying Russia for service in the ranks.

Miss Adele Blood of New York is planning to establish a national American theater.

Miss Katie Berdan of Chico, Colo., recently bagged a bear weighing over 400 pounds.

Miss Minnie Schuniger is the first woman in Washington, D. C., to receive a permit to operate a motorcycle.

Of the more than 7,000 osteopaths in America, more than 3,000, or over 40 per cent, are women.

Women clerks employed in the British postal service get only half as much salary as the men.

Through the scarcity of boy sopranos women will hereafter sing in the choirs of the Philadelphia Roman Catholic churches.

At the present time schools and colleges in the United States employ more than 400,000 trained women teachers.

Mrs. Harriet Fisher Andrews of Trenton, N. J., is the only woman iron manufacturer in America of international fame.

The Duchess of Sutherland, who is acting as a Red Cross nurse, was under fire during the bombardment of Namur by the Germans.

Mrs. George W. Goethals, wife of the governor of the Panama canal zone, is known as the "first lady of the land" in that territory.

Fifteen year old Gladys Pond of Battle Creek, Mich., holds the record of never being absent from school for a single day for the last ten years.

The New York vacation committee has established a free employment bureau for jobless girls and has set them to work making bandages for the wounded soldiers.

Over 15,000 English women have registered their names as being anxious to take the places of men who have been called away from their employment due to the war.

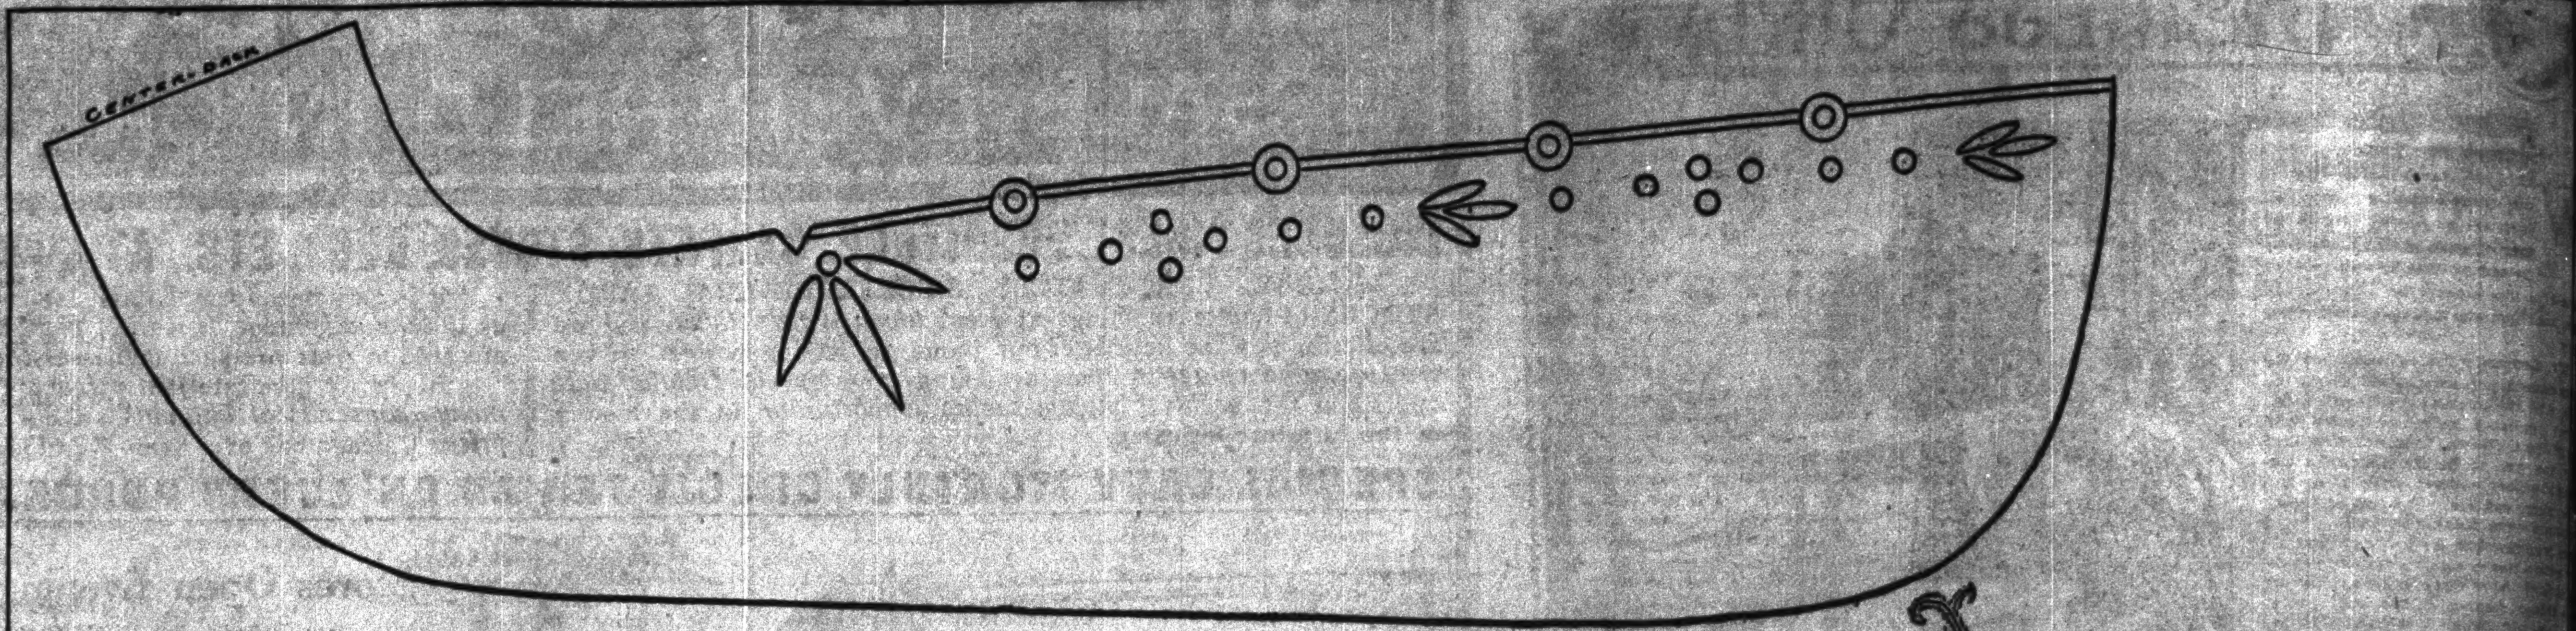
Mrs. Katherine B. Davis, commissioner of charities in New York, has decided to abolish the striped prison uniform in all the institutions under her jurisdiction.

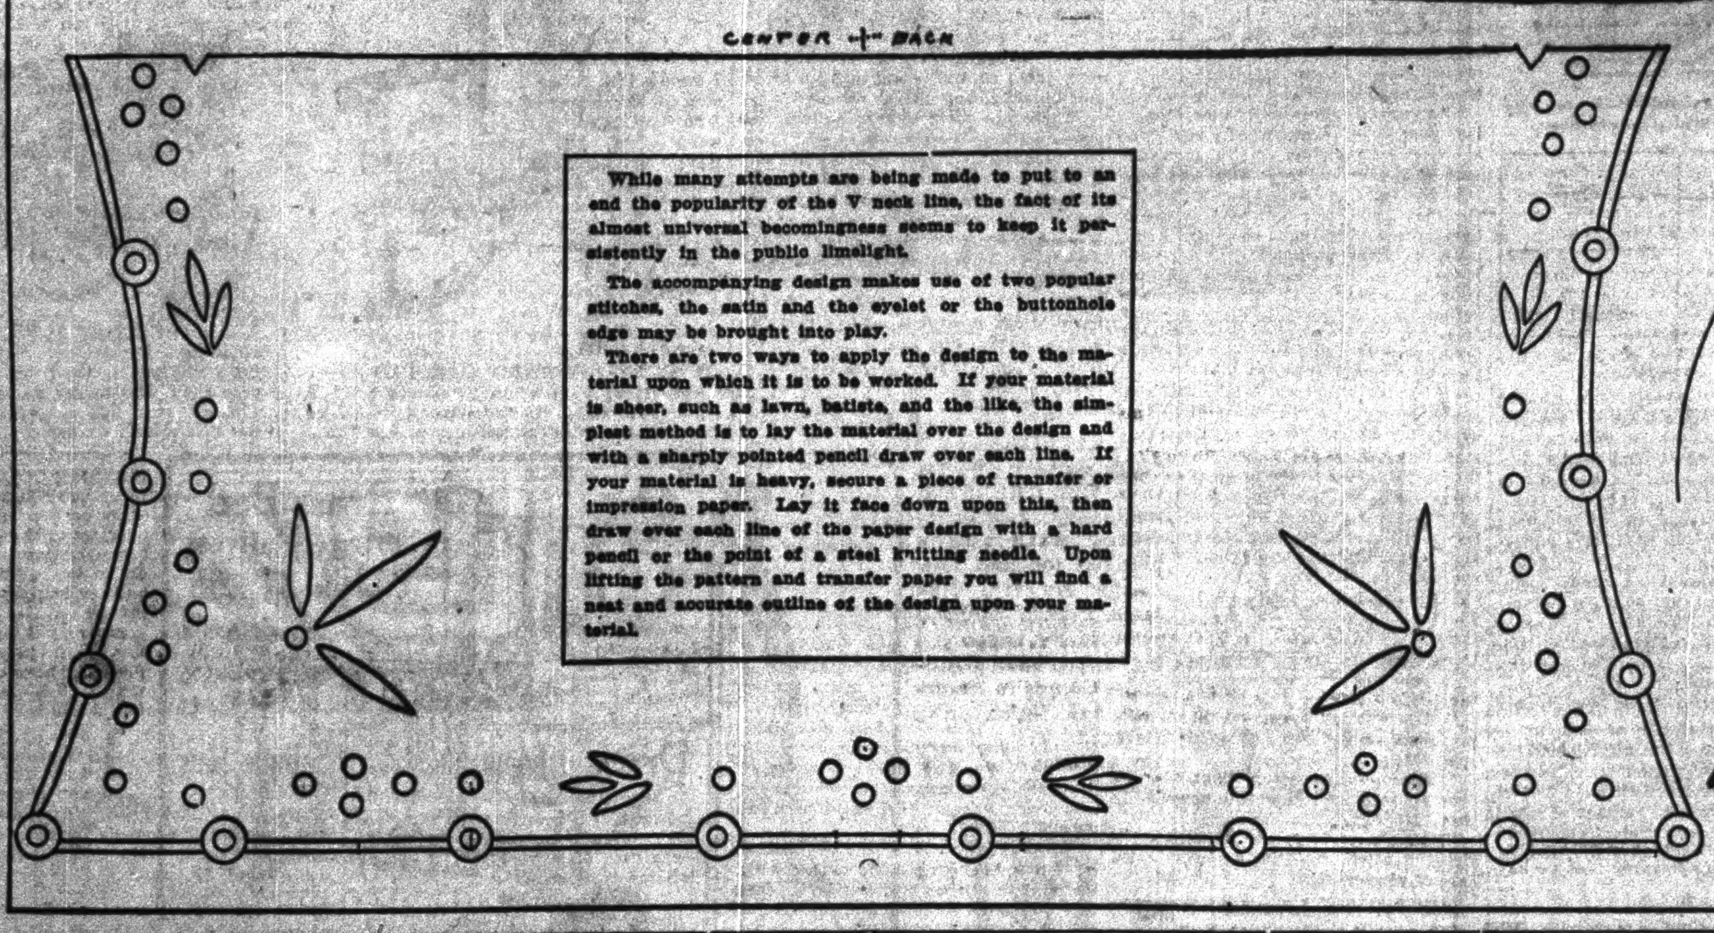
Female laundry workers in Topeka, Kas., have formed a union and have already made an agreement with the laundries for a fifty-four hour week and a minimum wage of $7 per week.

The Russian Red Cross society has decided to accept women as surgeons at the front providing that the number of female doctors does not exceed 50 per cent of the men practitioners.

The first woman to lay down her life for her country in the present war was probably Mme. Favre-Schwarz, wife of one of the richest men in Alsace-Lorraine. She was shot by the Germans after a court martial, having been accused of attempting to blow up the important tunnel on the line of the Rhine.

Embroidered Collar and Vest for Fall Frock.

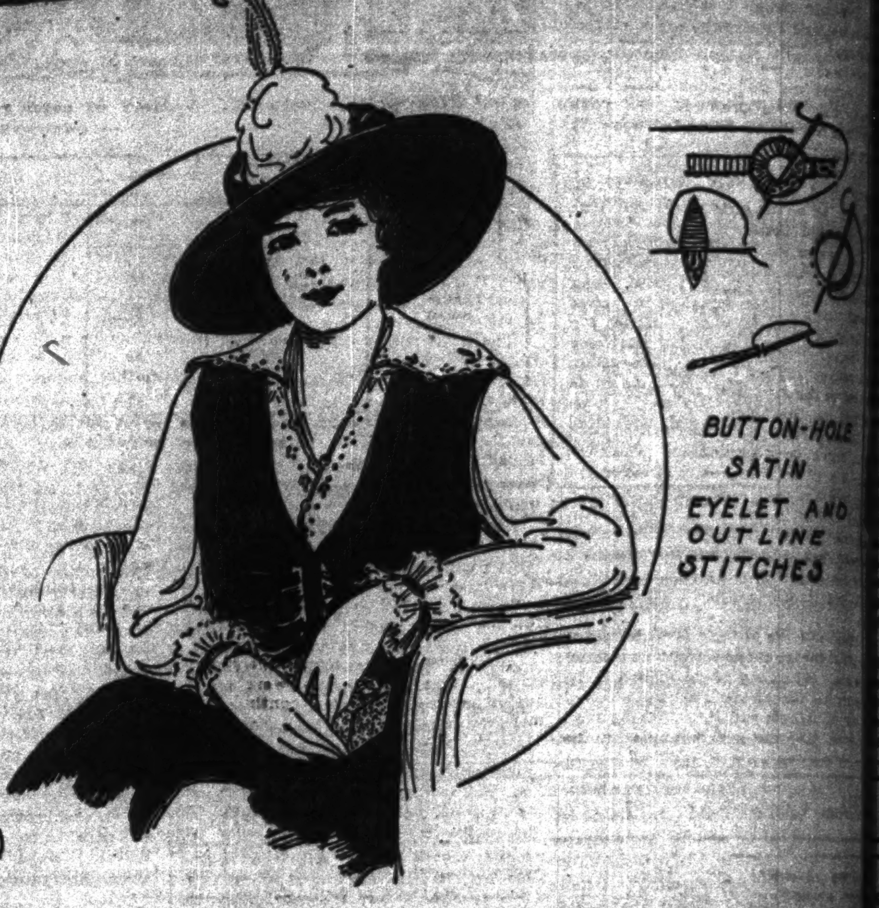




While many attempts are being made to put to an end the popularity of the V neck line, the fact of its almost universal becomingness seems to keep it persistently in the public limelight.

The accompanying design makes use of two popular stitches, the satin and the eyelet or the buttonhole edge may be brought into play.

There are two ways to apply the design to the material upon which it is to be worked. If your material is sheer, such as lawn, batiste, and the like, the simplest method is to lay the material over the design and with a sharply pointed pencil draw over each line. If your material is heavy, secure a piece of transfer or impression paper. Lay it face down upon this, then draw over each line of the paper design with a hard pencil or the point of a steel knitting needle. Upon lifting the pattern and transfer paper you will find a neat and accurate outline of the design upon your material.



The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON.

Jane Eddington's articles are printed every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"CELERY CABBAGE" is the new variety of cabbage which now, in the third season after its introduction, is becoming widely popular. In books on growing vegetables it is called Chinese cabbage, and two varieties are given. That which we call celery cabbage is called Pe-tsai and is said to have been boiled as a pot herb, but among us at present it has almost too aristocratic a price for that use. You have to imagine the celery part. It is an interesting plant of late planting (in July or August) and will stand the frost.

While the so-called celery cabbage has a head like a vegetable club, the other variety, called Pak-choi, does not head, but resembles the Swiss chard and may be the same thing, grocers last year in some cases even calling it Swiss chard. The midribs of the leaves of both varieties, which are unbroken continuations of the stem, are cooked and served like asparagus, while the leaves are used for salad or cooked.

We are still somewhat short on cabbage varieties, and we may hope that others will soon be introduced, while the little known kohlrabi, or cabbage turnip, will increase in popularity. Another variety which we ought to have is the broccoli, which certainly would market much better than the cauliflower which it resembles. Its head is green and the deliciously tender variety common in the markets of Italy is entirely without strong taste. The head is conelike, much the shape of a Zealand button. Books say that this is hardier to frost than the cauliflower.

There are a great many different varieties of cabbage besides the little Brussels sprouts, about twenty colors in all, although we know only the white or sourkraut cabbage, the red and the green Savoy, which latter is not as common as we might wish.

It is stated authoritatively that raw cabbage is four times as digestible as cooked. Its precious mineral matter, which we all need, is not then dissolved out, as it may be when cooked. Corned beef and cabbage, or cabbage cooked with any fat, is suited only to out of door workers of the heartiest digestions and is none too good for them.

One of the enterprising growers of the celery cabbage last year pasted a label on each of his vegetable clubs, on which was printed the following: "Celery cabbage. Best thing out. No other variety of cabbage compares with it for cold slaw. Makes better salad than head lettuce. Fine boiled with meat and in vegetable soup. Good in oyster stews—better than the oysters. Nice for garnishing fancy dinners. Very healthy. Eaten raw like celery, use with salt and butter. Stems may be used same as asparagus; chop up fine, add milk, sugar, and a little vinegar. Makes a dish good as ice cream. Try it."

The midribs and cores of other cabbages, if carefully cooked and nicely served with a dressing, are also good, or if cut thin are good raw.

Standard Coldslaw Dressing.

One egg, one-half cup of sugar, one tablespoon of flour, one-half teaspoon of mustard, one-half teaspoon salt, dash of red pepper, one-half cup each of water and vinegar. Put together in order given, beating the egg a little, then cook until it thickens, then cool. This makes enough dressing for two or three small cabbages, and one expert manager multiplies it by twenty-four to make enough to dress a popular cabbage relish for 200 people. It is a smooth and piquant dressing.

Easy Coldslaw Dressing.

Mash the yolk of a hard boiled egg with a quarter of a teaspoon of mustard, one tablespoon of sugar, and half a teaspoon of salt. When thoroughly mixed add enough vinegar to make it as thin as desired. Several spoonfuls of milk or cream may be added to it. It is a pretty, sweet, and agreeable dressing for a small amount of cabbage. The above amount is enough for a half cabbage.

Cabbage Salad.

There is no salad dressing for cabbage that is finer than sour cream whipped up and seasoned with lemon juice or vinegar, salt, and pepper to taste. The strict vegetarian uses the lemon juice always. A little shaved onion with a cabbage, one small one or several new ones, also seasons the salad well without being noticeable in an independent way. Some people like a salad or slaw seasoned instead with a half teaspoon of celery seed. The cabbage must always be crisp, and if well crisped after it has the finest flavor if scalded and then crisped in icewater. Shave it as finely as possible, put it in a deep bowl with the onion if that is used, then pour immediately into a colander with fine holes and then put into icewater to crisp, leaving for at least an hour. A little sugar may be sprinkled on it before adding a dressing. Radish flowers make about the prettiest decoration for cabbage salad, but beet slices cut out in fancy shapes may be used, and slices or shreds of green or red pepper in season also are in favor.

Marinated Red Cabbage.

Remove outer imperfect leaves, wash, and cut up a red cabbage fine as for cold slaw. Put it into a safely glazed earthenware dish, powder with fine salt, and leave in a cool place for two days, stirring it several times in order that the salt may thoroughly penetrate the cabbage. It can be prepared in a shorter time by using more salt. Enough liquid may be drawn out, if there is a considerable quantity of cabbage, so that it will need to be drained off, but ordinarily a reasonable amount of salt will simply make the cabbage sticky. Next slice one onion or several into the bottom of the earthenware dish, tie up some whole pepper, a clove or two, and whatever spices you choose in a bit of cheesecloth, then cover the whole with either cold or boiling vinegar and leave standing for twenty-four hours, when it is ready for use. The pickled and red colored onion in this will be greatly relished as an appetizer, so it is well to be generous with onion. It may be served separately. Instead of onion or with it may be added a tiny bit of garlic.

German Endive.

It is a great pity to waste the green part of the German or curly endive or chicory, since it makes most excellent and palatable greens of as great value medicinally as dandelions, to which it is related. It is worth buying if it is entirely green, without any blanched center. Three heads, which may often be secured for 10 cents, will supply both a salad for one meal and some greens for another, or a cooked salad for from four to six people, so it is much more economical than head lettuce and far more wholesome. Cook the green part in plenty of water for ten or fifteen minutes, or until tender; drain, chop in a chopping bowl, then heat up with butter and other seasonings, or combine with a little chipped meat, meat stock, and seasonings, and bake in the oven as a sort of loaf or pudding (the Italian budine). Or after adding the butter and seasoning and cooking until these blend well with the greens, pack into cups rinsed out with cold water, and when cold pour out and use as a salad.

Black Radish.

INQUIRER: One way to eat the black radish is to peel it, slice it in thin slices for almost but not quite the whole length, leaving a piece which will hold all the slices together, sprinkle salt between the slices, and leave for an hour before eating as an appetizer.

Marion Harland's Helping Hand

By Marion Harland

Marion Harland's Helping Hand Corner appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I AM writing in response to Mrs. M.'s request for advice about government land. It seems too bad to discourage any one in such an ambition, but from my experience I would beg her not to undertake homesteading unless she or her son is capable of earning a living, independent of farming. She explains that she is not a woman of means and my fourteen months of 'proving up' showed me how impossible it is without either capital or a trade. The first two years on untilled land invariably result in crop failures, and one's living expenses go right on. I taught school and thereby had money for my living and for the required improvements, but on every side I saw neighbors losing their homesteads for lack of a little money. It is a well known fact that most government claims are finally owned by banks and loan institutions holding mortgages on them for borrowed money. So I urge Mrs. M. not to make the attempt without either $1,000 capital or a trade. If she is a school teacher, a music teacher, or a trained nurse, or if her boy is a carpenter, a painter, or a well digger she probably will succeed in her undertaking. But to go with an empty purse and unskilled hands on to land is sure to result in failure. As for her request as to the location of open government lands she can get full information on the subject by writing to James M. Witten, department of the interior, Washington, D. C. From him she can obtain full description of the land already open for settlement and that to be thrown open in the future. C. C."

A practical and helpful letter! Such counsel as this is of distinct value and I hope that it may aid Mrs. M. in making a wise decision. The desire for a home is inborn, the wish to get a piece of land from the government is entirely natural, and the stories we have read of those who have laid the foundations of their independence if not of their fortunes by going "back to the soil" are enticing enough to lead the inexperienced to go ahead without enough practical knowledge of the obstacles they are likely to encounter. Such a letter as this from one who has herself trodden the same way conveys caution and encouragement as well. I am glad to give the name of the government official who can supply information about land, for the benefit of other readers as well as of Mrs. M. As C. C. did not give any signature beyond the initials, it is useless to write and ask to be put into touch with her, as would be the natural course of those desiring further advice from so wise a head.

Must Wait for Another One.

"I have seen that Mrs. M. L. B. has an ear trumpet she will pass on to some one. I would like very much to obtain her address with a view of getting the ear trumpet. MRS. M. M. C."

Again I must express my regret that the ear trumpet has been given away. Has any other Cornerite one to bestow? I shall keep Mrs. M. M. C.'s address on file in hope it may be asked for.

The next letter is of interest as following the above request:

"I was greatly interested in the letter of H. L. A. containing advice to those who live in the silent world, for I was one of them. The silence gradually enveloped me during the course of twenty years, but now I feel like shouting from the housetops, for my hearing is almost restored. It took a good deal of faith, patience, and perseverance; and even the doctor did not hold out much hope and it took eight months of treatment after a severe nasal operation before actual results were noticed. For about a year now my ears have been 'blown out' four times a week; it is a simple operation and I am afraid to stop just yet, for I was so long getting into good condition. Naturally it takes a long time to get the hearing back, but should I have to keep up the treatment for the rest of my natural life it would be worth the price. Knowing the slenderness of our purse the doctor is very considerate on that score. Deafness is due to so many causes that probably only a small per cent of the cases would respond as mine did, but I hope my experience may be the means of encouragement and restoration of others. It is truly like being awakened from a living death and only those who have been there can know and understand. MRS. G."

As the writer of this letter says there may possibly be only a few cases which would yield to such treatment as helped her, but her letter is worth publishing if only a single deaf person is helped by it. I would like to point out that she had a long siege before her hearing began to return, and any one who wishes to make the experiment should be prepared to bring to it the faith, patience and perseverance she exercised. For those who are not to be cured let me again urge, as I have so often done before, the advantages of lip reading over any mechanical appliance for the assistance of the hearing.

Floor Is Cold.

"Many thanks for the words of the old song, 'The flowers that bloomed in the wildwood,' sent to me by one of the Cornerites. I have written her a note of thanks. I am a shut-in most of the time, especially during the winter. I am growing old and can only do sewing. I have to sit by the window for light and my daughter's house is not steam heated, so that it gets cold about my feet. Perhaps some one has a discarded rug that could be sent to me. A friend has offered to pay the expressage on either that or a comfortable chair. I bless all of you who have been so good to the lonely. "MRS. S. R."

Perhaps it is because the years are piling up to my account that I feel such a sympathy for those who are old and lonely. I can see the picture of this Cornerite, a shut-in during most of the winter, sitting as near the window as she can get for the sake of the light upon the sewing that is her only occupation, suffering from the cold as one does when the circulation grows slow with advancing age, and I hope with all my heart that the kindly friend may have the chance to pay the expressage on the discarded rug or the comfortable chair that would mean so much to Mrs. S. R.

For a Boy in Prison.

"I am a social service worker and I write to ask if some one will please give a stringed musical instrument which is in good condition to an 18 year old boy in prison. ELSIE L."

Eighteen years old and in prison! Branded at the beginning of life with the jail stain! Surely those who echo the petition that our Heavenly Father should show mercy upon all prisoners and captives will feel an interest in sending this lad something to help make his place of confinement less terribly depressing and discouraging. I do not know his crime, but since he loves music he can hardly be hopelessly depraved, and it may be that the stringed instrument may waken him to purer and better thoughts and lift him to a higher level. I shall be glad to send Elsie L.'s address to any one who has the instrument to give.

Pattern of Thistle or Sunflower.

"Could some one supply me with a thistle or sunflower pattern? I want them so much. MRS. N. C."

These are newspaper patterns, and I hope some one may find them stored away among her supply of cuttings, recipes, and the like, and may be willing to give them away.

Give the Child a Square Deal.

A CHILD soon begins to realize that his mother is influenced in her dealings with him by her moods. He knows instinctively whether a punishment is meted out to him because mother is annoyed and angry, or whether it is the outcome of calm judgment governed by love. He feels that should mother be in a bad temper he won't get a fair hearing, and his case will be summarily dismissed untried.

If mothers would only see the seriousness of this, they would never punish a child if they felt ill tempered. Don't, whatever you do, give a child reason to feel that he is the prey of an unreasonable power, and that had a mistake been discovered when you were in a more good natured mood, it would probably have been passed by unpunished.

Once this is the case, the child's ideas of right and wrong become hazy. And not only so, but the child is deliberately encouraged to become a mean "[illegible]," and takes the advantage of mother's good natured moods, and learns to "lie low" when she is in a bad temper.

Justice is the great principle of the business and social world, and you will be rendering one of the greatest possible services to your child if you implant it within his soul as a young child. By the same principle of justice he will not only learn later what is due to his fellows, and how to grant it, but will also know what is due to himself, and how to exact it.

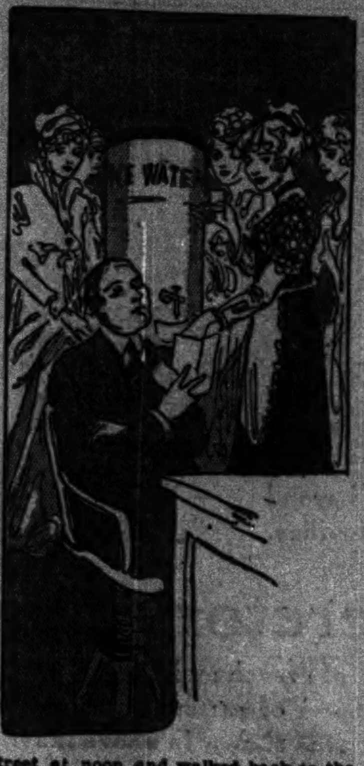
For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

By MARY KING.

Handsome Mr. Leonard.



Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. She will answer letters, either through this department or by personal reply. No want will be too small—no difficulty too great for her to consider. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

WHEN the manager of a large office where a number of girls and men are employed, hired an extremely good looking young man he had no idea he was creating something like a sensation. It was this same manager who told me the following story:

"Mr. Leonard's first appearance in the office caused quite a visible stir among the girls, and the question, 'Who will do his work?' agitated the mind of more than one of them. When I informed Miss Gray that she was to be Mr. Leonard's stenographer her radiant smile of acceptance surprised me. The less fortunate applicants were frankly envious. One of them was heard to say to the girl next to her with a heavy sigh, 'Aren't some people lucky? Miss Gray is always having nice things happen to her, and I never do. I would be glad enough to be her substitute, and I wouldn't care how often she stayed home. In fact, the oftener she stayed the better I would like it.' Her neighbor laughed and told her she herself had already told Miss Gray that she would be willing to help her with Mr. Leonard's work when it was unusually heavy.

"My new employé, in addition to possessing good looks, had agreeable manners, and so as the girls knew him better they liked him better.

"The water cooler was close to Mr. Leonard's desk, and it gave the girls a wonderful excuse for passing his desk several times a day. Before I caught on to the girls' silliness I was surprised at the frequency with which the cooler had to be refilled. When I commented on this fact before the men they laughed heartily and told me the reason.

"Leonard rarely left the office at noon or at night unaccompanied. The girls made it a point to be ready to leave just when he did so they would have the pleasure of riding in the elevator with him, and when for some reason or other Mr. Leonard delayed, the excuses the girls made for lingering were highly amusing to the rest of us, but not a bit of fun to him.

"There was the keenest rivalry among the girls for attentions from the handsome one. When one of the girls had the temerity to ask him to sharpen a pencil for her the others called her 'designing,' and when another girl met him on the street at noon and walked back to the office with him and was silly enough to boast about it she was hardly spoken to for several days.

"The girls in my office were not the only ones interested in 'the beauty,' as we called him. His fame had spread to other offices in the building, and his appearance in the elevators and corridors usually was the signal for conversation among the girls who were present to cease immediately. They were content merely to gaze at him.

"Leonard was a sensible fellow, and this attention, instead of flattering him, was agony. He had to stand a great deal of teasing from the men, and he realized that the silly attitude of the girls toward him made him appear more or less ridiculous.

"At first the maneuvers of the girls to attract Leonard's attention were funny, but, of course, when they continued the men and the more sensible girls plainly were disgusted.

The manager in concluding his story said: "Now when I am hiring a girl after I have decided that she is neat and has enough brains to do office work satisfactorily, I have to consider whether or not she would be likely to fall for Leonard's charm. And how can I tell? I thought that all our girls were sensible, and yet the majority of them have proven that they're silly geese. The condition is intolerable in a business office. I'm going to discharge the lot of them."

The man who told me this story insists that it is perfectly true. I am inclined to think it is highly exaggerated. I have never known girls as silly as these, and I would like to believe they do not exist. Don't you agree with me?

Dear Miss King: My employer, for whom I have been working just two weeks, has asked me to go to dinner with him and I have refused for the reason that I do not know whether or not he is married. He has not given me a single clew, as he has never spoken to me of his home or of any of his personal affairs. A woman calls him up occasionally, but I never hear his conversation with her so I do not know whether she is his wife, mother, sister or a friend.

The fact that he has said nothing about being married makes me think that he probably is not and yet I am rather afraid of running the risk of being seen at dinner with a married man. I hate to ask him point blank whether or not he is married, and my efforts to find out without asking a direct question have been unsuccessful.

Do you think it would be safe for me to take it for granted that he is not married and accept his invitation? M. M.

Do not take it for granted that your employer is single. An unmarried man who is interested enough in a girl to extend invitations to her lets her see quickly enough that he is single.

It is only the married man who asks his women employés to take luncheon or dinner with him who is strictly reticent about his domestic affairs. When you cannot tell from a man's conversation whether or not he has a wife you are generally correct in assuming that he has one.

You need not hesitate to ask your employer whether or not he is married. He certainly cannot object to your question when he has made social overtures. If he is single he will respect you more for your discretion and if he is married he will see your reason for not accepting his invitations and probably not bother you with any more.

The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For.

Many business girls have had queer employers at some time or other during their business careers and some of these men have the most unexpected eccentricities. Those of us who have been in business life for many years probably know a number of such queer characters. "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on the subject of "The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For." Address letters to Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

An Absent Minded Slap.

The queerest man I ever worked for was a clergyman, a fine preacher and faithful pastor, and a devoted father, but very absent minded. I was writing by the window, as it was growing dark. He lighted the gas and said, "Come here to the table to write." I lingered by the window, saying, I could see well enough. "Don't argue with me," he replied, "and learn to obey at once," giving me a good slap across my shoulders. The next moment he realized what he had done and said: "Do excuse me; I thought you were my little boy. But I was perfectly right anyway, for you were injuring your eyes in the dark." M. S.

He Never Smiled.

I once worked for a man who was so stingy he burned a kerosene lamp in his office at night, because he thought it unjust that he should be compelled to pay 50 cents per month (the minimum rate) for gas, when he might use only 48 cents' worth. He also kept all the business letter heads under lock and key and gave me just enough stationery on which to write the letters he had dictated. He never smiled, and sometimes when people were talking to him on business he would walk away and ignore them, which made them feel terribly. I worked for him only a short time. E. B.

Proud of His Family.

I worked as general clerk in his store in a small town. He had brought up a family of a dozen children. They were, every one, tall, healthy, handsome. He could well be proud of them. He was. He sat in an armchair just inside the door, much in the way, but in a position where he saw each customer that entered. If the customer came in and said, "I'd like a pound of sugar," my boss would immediately answer, "We're all out." If, however, the customer would say, "Good morning, Mr. A., how is John or Mary," or mention any of the several children, he was all affability. He would go into detail concerning the one inquired about, the health, the work, the appearance, the disposition, etc.

After a long talk he would ask in all kindness as to what the customer wished. He would put up his pound of sugar for him and be all courtesy in every way. N. K.

And the White Rose.

He had examined and dismissed several applicants before my turn came, but I entered bravely and waited the glance of approval or disapproval and cross questioning. Mr. M. raised his eyes from his desk and gave me a frowning glance, which suddenly changed to a friendly smile almost of joy. He arose and began to shake my hand up and down as if I were some long lost friend. I was becoming frightened and beginning to think him insane, when I noticed that his gaze was riveted to my girdle. Then I became aware that the attraction was the white rose pinned there.

He spoke suddenly: "You understand stenography, of course?" and, not waiting for my reply, he hurried to the door and with a word dismissed the other applicants for this position. Then, returning to my side, he spoke thus: "Do you love white roses?"

In surprise, I answered in the affirmative.

"If I take you into my employ, you must agree to wear each day a white rose. I will keep fresh ones continually on my desk and about my office if I give you the money each evening, so that you may buy them? I will also pay you extra for your trouble."

Wonderingly I replied that I would do so.

He was a good and kind yet queer employer, and I worked for him for two years at a good salary. At the end of this time he died, leaving me $1,000 and requesting that I buy the most beautiful white rose bush I could find and each year carry its first blooming white offering to his resting place and place it there.

This all happened four years ago, and to this day I carry the first pure blossom of this same bush to my dead employer's grave. I often wonder about his life and how it had been so connected with the white rose. H. C.

Love Letters

Tried for Weeks.

Submitted by M. C. Davis, 2605 Benvenue avenue, Berkeley, Cal.:

"Dear Little Girl: I have just come home from your house to do what I hadn't the pluck to do there—to tell you I love you. Every time that I have been with you for weeks I have tried to tell you, but my cowardice interrupted me. How do men ever do it, any way, I wonder? I have looked at the men in the street car every morning, seeming so smooth and unconcerned, and wondered if any of them have felt this way. I have watched men on the street with their wives and wondered. I have wanted to go up to them and ask them to tell me what they said, to help me out.

"I have planned to say it ever so many different ways. I have promised myself valiantly, as I set out for your house, that I would surely, some way, ask you this time, and then when I saw you I have not dared. It seems to me that if you cannot give me the answer I want so much that I cannot bear it. I do not dare to shatter our friendship on the chance that inside its broken shell may be a sweeter kernel.

"You are wonderful, you girls of the world, in your self-control, in your sphinx-like silence! Couldnt' you help us out a little bit? Couldn't you let your eyes speak up for themselves just once instead of censoring every word they utter?

"You are just the same to me always, just your cool, sweet, friendly self. You show me all the sides of you, the sister side and your daughter side, and your comrade side; you only keep hidden the one that I want most to see, the sweetheart side of you that I some way know is there. Even moonlight will not bring it out, even star shine leaves you just your same sweet self. But I cannot be satisfied any longer with just that much of you; I want you all. Yes, now, even at the risk of losing all, I want you, and I am going to tell you so at last.

"If you should not care, little girl, you've got to care. Do you think all this wonderful emotion could be given to a man, this strange and wonderful longing, this white hunger, without an answering hunger being put into the heart of the one girl that can light such a torch of yearning in his eyes? No love like it is created without its answering love. I know you care. Whether you know it or not, you care. Whether you want to or not, you care. Why, girl, you've got to care! It's life. And because it is, and because I could not bear to have you tell me no with your lips even, much less with your heart, I am sending this letter first, before I come to tell you all over again with my arms around you how much I love you.

"I am coming tomorrow night, dear, to hear you say a little word to me—and it isn't 'No.'

"May heaven bless you till then, little girl—for after that I'm going to take care of you myself! YOUR BOY."

$20 for Two Love Letters.

"The Tribune" will pay $10 for the best love letter written by a man to a woman and another $10 for the best love letter written by a woman to a man. No letter copied from a book or magazine will be considered. You may submit as many letters as you like. They may be either real or imaginary. Letters will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Doing an Unconventional Thing.

Following is the best love letter from a woman to a man:

"Dear Lad of My Dreams: I am going to do an unconventional thing. No, I am not going to ask you to marry me, but I am going to tell you that I love you. The telling you is an impulsive thing, but the loving you isn't. It began a long time ago, O, long before I ever saw you at all. It is only that you happened to fit into the mold of my ideal.

"I know that you do not dream that I love you; that you will be perhaps distressed and very sorry when you get this letter. But I do not want you to be. Please be glad. Whether you care or not, whether you will ever care or not, please be glad. Because I am glad. It is beauty to be loved, but it is life itself to love. It has made a new me, just loving you; it has made a new world, and a heaven that was never there before. Can any man be sorry that he has made a new world and a new heaven and a new soul out of the mere earth of things, and that not by his own building, but just by being?

"There are many reasons why I love you—and there is no reason at all. I love you because your eyes look beyond sordidness and see beauty; because you are not afraid to be young; because you are not of the kind who grow up; because you laugh at the right things, and because—O, there are so many because things about my liking you! But best of all is the no reason at all reason. You are not so different from other men, except that you are my man. And if I happen to have noticed it first you will not mind my telling you, will you, instead of waiting for you to tell me?

"I don't want you to do anything about it. I just some way wanted you to know, that's all. Don't try to love me, lad. Because love is not had by trying. It is a gift that time gives sometimes, and sometimes chance, but those who try to snatch it themselves find only bitterness instead in their hands.

"We have been such good pals that we have never stopped liking each other long enough to find out if we loved one another. They have been good days, these days of hiking and hunting and rowing and riding and reading together, and seeing sunsets and finding violets and getting acquainted with birds. They have been good days, and too full of happiness for us to stop to think of joy. They have been sweet, all these little yesterdays—but who knows how much sweeter the wee tomorrows may be?

"Anyway we're friends—and because we're friends and frank and never conceal thoughts or wishes or dreams from each other, because we're square, I had to tell you this. Don't let it make any difference. We'll just go on reading Browning together as we planned to do when you come over tomorrow and not speak of this by a glance or a hand clasp. When you come over tomorrow, O, lad, if you should care! When you come over tomorrow— YOUR PAL."

She Was Grieved.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a sweetheart who writes to me regularly, but for the last four weeks his business has kept him from writing until a few days ago. I then heard from him in answer to my nice letter and inquiry as to what was the cause of his long silence. I presume he thought that I thought he wished to quit corresponding with me, although I never mentioned it to him in my letter. I feared he was ill or something had happened to him and told him so, as it was so unusual not to hear from him by card if not a letter. He said he had not forgotten me and that he still loves me. While he knows he has not treated me as a sweetheart should, he was so tired when night came that he wanted to rest and go to bed, but he wanted me to know he was not the kind of fellow to let a girl write and write and he not answer, and that he will have courage to tell me when he is tired of me, and that he admires a man or woman who treats him on the level. I have always been outspoken and true to him. I didn't like that word "tired" and wrote him that I hope I won't give any one a chance even to say the word tired. If I knew for a minute that I was tiring him I would stop corresponding with him today. Did I do right in resenting him saying that word to me? Did I answer him right? Have I too much pride? He has told me many times he loved me, but it seems that if he does he would not write that way. Before I didn't pay any attention to it, but this time I ask you what to do or what should I have done. B."

Perhaps the young man meant nothing at all by what he said. He probably thought that he was being particularly frank and outspoken with you. Men have not the keen sensibility of delicacy that women have. Your woman's fineness resented his rather crude manner, but I don't think that you should have become so petulant about the matter; that is, if you care in the least for the young man. Of course, he should write to you if he expects you to write to him; but, on the other hand, when he writes you a rather nice letter you are not using a great deal of tact by replying in a grieved way. But do not worry about it any more.

Wants to Drop Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been out with a young man several times and he has called me up several times recently, but while I like him I do not care particularly for his company. Will you please tell me how I can tell him this politely when next he calls me up? B. A."

The next time he telephones to you do not be any more cordial to him than mere courtesy demands. If he asks to call upon you tell him that you have another engagement, and if he persists in asking to call and will not understand by your actions that you do not care to have anything more to do with him, tell him that you are sorry but you cannot accept his attentions any longer.

No Girl Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man of 29; have been in this country ten years; have no girl friends; would like to have one. I was told that there is a church on the south side where one can get acquainted. Would you please inform me where it is, if you know? W. H."

The church which you heard of is Trinity Episcopal church, Twenty-sixth street and Michigan avenue. It has a "lonesome club" which meets once a week and invites the membership of just such men as you are. If you will write to the Rev. John McGann, in care of Trinity Episcopal church, Twenty-sixth street and Michigan avenue, he will be glad to give you the necessary information about the club.

Wants to Be Friends.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you please tell me what to write to a young lady whom I have not seen within the last four years and with whom I was only acquainted as a student in the same class at a university and a member of the same church? This particular girl approaches my ideal woman nearer than any whom I have met. Since graduation she has been teaching in first class schools. I have been following civil engineering work and have not kept company or corresponded with girls, as most fellows do. I realize that I am 'green' along that line, but am going to begin, and will appreciate your advice in the matter. J. H. W."

Why don't you write her a sincere little note telling her that you remember her with so much pleasure that you hope she will be willing to renew the acquaintance. Do not try to make your first letter a long one—merely ask her if she won't write to you and let you become better friends.

Can't Learn to Love Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I admire a certain gentleman, but as he is somewhat shorter than I, it seems that I cannot learn to love him very much. Please tell me whether his height ought to cause me to feel that way. He has all the qualities that I wish to find in a young man, but his height is the only thing that I can find fault with. MISS R. S."

You surely do not love the young man as much as you think you do or you would not find his smallness of stature such an obstacle to your happiness. Try not seeing him for a while. That will show you more quickly than anything else the true state of your affections. I think that you probably will find that if the choice comes between giving him up and forgetting his shortness you will forget all about his shortness.

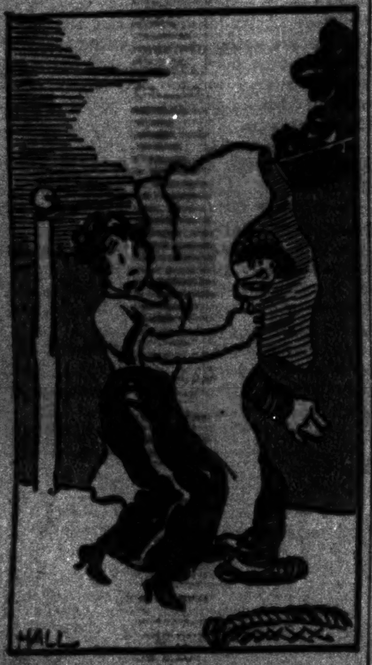
Have You Ever Seen a Burglar?

You probably have had a thrilling or a humorous encounter with a real or imagined burglar. Probably you can remember that time when you awoke to feel the "cold steel of the revolver" pressing against your neck or the time you almost ended the career of Sister Susan, the somnambulist, by a blow of an Indian club which luckily hit the chandelier instead. For every letter either exciting or funny that is published "The Tribune" will pay $1. Address Editor of the Burglar Contest, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Both of Them Ran.

I have never had the pleasure of seeing a burglar, but I have embraced one, which is, I assure you, a more thrilling experience.

One evening while living in a small country town I went out in the yard to take in some clothes which had been hung out to dry in the afternoon. I started to gather in a sheet and experienced the dreadful sensation of encircling my arms about the bulky figure of a man who was probably intending to relieve me of part of my wash. However, I was not interested enough to question him as to his intentions, but scurried back to the house.



The burglar was probably as frightened as I was, for my neighbor said she saw a man scramble over our fence.

Paid His Honest Debt.

I was a reporter on a New York newspaper for a number of years and many times "covered" the police courts. One day a young man, arrested for burglary, attracted my attention on account of his evident refinement. I found out he came from a good family and his father was trying to have him sent to prison to get rid of him. He was discharged.

Two weeks afterward the boy met me, and after thanking me for what I had done for him—very little in fact—told me he had to have $2. I gave him the money. He said he would return it on Saturday. Saturday afternoon he came running into my office and laid two paper dollars down on my desk.

That night in the street a young fellow that I did not know came up to me and asked if Charlie had brought back the $2 he borrowed. I told him he had, and he answered:

"Gee, mister, Charlie 'went through' three flats this afternoon trying to get that money to pay you back."

The moral of this story has been a question in my mind ever since. G. R. C.

Intrepid Kate.

Four of us—Kate, Florence, Ruth and I—spent a week alone at Kate's home while her family were away. The house stood in a large lot at a distance from any neighbor, and it was before telephones were as universal as they are now, so we were isolated.

One night Kate woke us quietly, as she had heard a noise outside, and we tiptoed over to the open window. Some one was prying at the dining room screen, just below us. Kate threw open the screen, and at the sound the man sank noiselessly into the shadow of a lilac bush.

"Get away from there!" she called. Then turning her head, as though to make herself heard inside, she shouted, "Father! Jim! Walter! Bring your guns, quick! Here's a burglar!"

Ruth had collapsed, her arms on the sill, her head hanging over, as she gazed terror stricken into the shadows below.

"What's the use of calling the men, Kate?" she wailed. "You know there isn't a soul here except us girls!"

Kate ran to the dresser and returned with her curling iron, which she aimed out of the window and clicked in the direction of the bush.

"Clear out, or I'll shoot!" she called, menacingly.

Ruth's teeth were chattering, but her voice shrilled out on the still air. "What can you do with that curling iron?" she asked desperately. "O, we'll all be killed!"

This was too much for the burglar, who seemed to have a sense of humor. "Aw, go to sleep, girls," he chuckled. "I'll go 'way!" And he did. M. D.

They Were Connoisseurs.

Many years ago, on our return from a wedding, we found the house rifled. Mother had put out furs, her wedding gown, and other things to air before storing them. These were gone; the solid silver also, and the plate broken.

The burglars had ransacked the ice box and fixed themselves an elaborate spread. Upon the table was an empty cigar box, and in it on a strip of paper was scrawled: "The grub was fine, but, Fatty, your cigars are rotten. Do better next time."

As my father was a corpulent man, they evidently knew their unwilling host.

Answers to the Royal Road to Learning.

The clown's problem is solved by the rule which produces a right angled triangle from any odd number, viz.: Square it; 47 by 47 equals 2,209; divide by two and make the hypotenuse one greater than the base. Answer 47, 1,104, and 1,105. To find a triangle from any even number, square the given number and divide by four. The quotient will be one more than the base and one less than the hypotenuse. The fool says that the answer to the question, "Why was the blade of that scimitar curved?" is that it was necessarily curved to fit the scabbard.

Social Machinery Oiled for Winter Gaieties.

MRS. RICHARD T. CRANE III
MOFFETT Photo

Mrs. Richard T. Crane III. is taking an active part in her husband's campaign as Progressive candidate for congressman from his district.

By Mme. X.

THESE are the days when the social machinery is being put in order, oiled, and cleaned, and made ready for winter business. Wheels are slowly starting more or less experimentally to see how the works run. Of one thing you may be sure, a greater simplicity in entertaining will prevail than Chicago has seen in many a long day. A popular formula for an invitation now is "Will you come to a war dinner," or "a war luncheon," meaning not an occasion to discuss the war, but a meal of three or four courses. It's a great improvement on the more long drawn out banquet from the viewpoint of guests, hosts and servants. Try it and see. But those few dishes must be extra choice and well cooked and served.

The week past was full of weddings, all of which were amply chronicled in the constricted space in our daily papers left from war news and politics. The Spalding-Coleman, the Butler-Ryerson, and the Ortseifen-Reddy weddings were among the most important ones as to size and social standing.

The dinner to twenty or more guests that Miss Mary Waller gave on Thursday evening at the Midway Gardens was a gay affair and brought together many scattered threads of the world that amuses itself, people who had not seen each other since the summer began. There were there the John Bordens, who have spent what Mrs. Borden declares to be the "pleasantest summer of their lives" on John Borden's smart new yacht, the Adventuress. Other guests were the Howard Linns, who are now quite settled in their charming apartment overlooking Lincoln park; the Kellogg Fairbanks, who are slowly oozing back to town after a hospitable summer at Lake Geneva, and Mrs. James Keeley, who is reluctantly making ready to leave the delectable Keeley farm at Wheaton. Messrs. Eames MacVeagh, Arthur Henn, David Adler, and Dr. P. S. Chancellor were among those who added the sterner masculine element to the occasion. After dinner the company danced and watched Carlos Sebastien and Dorothy Bentley do their terpsichorean stunts.

Later in the season the large open air amphitheater of the Midway gardens will be flooded and turned into an ice skating rink. This should be a popular novelty. Skating to music is a rare pleasure. London, Paris and Berlin all had their ice palaces, where the gay world met and danced and promenaded on skates to the best orchestras to be had. It is not probable that there will be much pleasure skating over in that stricken part of the world this winter, but here in Chicago society can revive a lost art.

The Midway gardens skating rink will have a miniature rival in the Casino skating rink on the corner of Delaware place and Lincoln parkway. The members of the Casino are watching with interest the progress of their clubhouse which promises to be the center of much gayety this winter. Early December is set as the date for its opening. Mrs. Howard Linn is now negotiating for the kitchen equipment, while Mrs. John Carpenter is in New York getting furniture and decorations for the large "salle de danse" and card rooms. Eames MacVeagh, Howard Gillette, Harold Howard and Robert McGann are busy with the financial department, while the president, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, and Miss Helen Cudahy of the entertainment committee are laying plans for the club's winter campaign. It has a promising outlook if one judges from the personnel of its active promoters and will play a large part in the social life of its 300 members.

Although she is a southern woman with all the traditions and prejudices of the south as to woman's proper sphere in the world's activities, Mrs. Richard T. Crane III. is playing a large part in her husband's campaign as Progressive candidate for congressman from his district. He could not have a better advocate. Mrs. Crane has all the charm of the best type of southern woman—she comes from Virginia. She is lovely to look at, has a gentle and cordial manner, and at the same time is unusually capable and enterprising.

She organized an important meeting of the Progressives of the congressional district at Mr. Crane's headquarters last Thursday afternoon, when she secured as speakers Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Leavitt (of the Eli Bates settlement), Miss Vittum, Miss Virginia Pope, Mrs. James W. Morrison, and Dr. Earl. Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns helped Mrs. Crane in receiving those who came to the meeting. On Friday Mrs. Crane herself gave an address to the Twenty-third Ward Woman's Progressive club, a most energetic organization.

The Woman's City club, the Chicago Equal Suffrage association, and all the other similar organizations are working hard to make the women turn out and register next Tuesday. Being unused to their new duties of citizens and having registered in large numbers last February they are slow to realize that—owing to man's machinations—they have again to go through the ordeal of telling their names, ages, and other data in order to enjoy their new rights.

There is a movement on foot among the younger women interested in politics to provide automobiles to convey Miss Vittum and Miss McDowell (the two women candidates for county commissioners) from meeting to meeting. These two public spirited, energetic women are nearly worn out with getting from place to place on foot and in the cars. The Junior league, of which Miss Helen Cudahy is president, is being interested in the project.

Many and thrilling are the experiences of our war fugitive friends. Few escaped from unhappy Europe without some discomfort, losses, and exciting adventures. For instance, Mrs. Watson Blair and her two sisters, Mrs. Edward P. Beach and Miss Frances Keep, after a tedious and devious trip from Switzerland, arrived in Paris in the dead of night. The hotels, to which they with difficulty wended their way, was shut up and dark. After a prolonged ringing and pounding a sleepy concierge reluctantly admitted them, lighting their footsteps by a solitary candle. As they entered they stumbled over the dead body of a man lying in the vestibule.

"Don't mind," said the concierge, "that's only a German spy shot here today. They've not had time to remove it."

Certainly a cheerful midnight arrival! Mrs. Blair and her party are again at home in Chicago.

The Herbert Schwarzes, who presented a particularly triumphal appearance when they departed for Europe last spring with their fine motor car, chauffeur, and other retinue, were not spared by fate any hard knocks. Besides losing machine and luggage in the war zone and suffering from many discomforts, their handsome house here on Lincoln parkway was entered by burglars during the summer and pretty thoroughly pillaged. They moved into it less than a year ago and had furnished and decorated it charmingly.

Lake Forest is always exhilarating and inspiring to the chronicler of society's doings, sayings, and projects. Its unquestioned supremacy as being the favorite summer abode for a large number of Chicago's richest and most prominent people makes it interesting. Furthermore, Chicago social leaders are not satisfied with that kind of preëminence. Most of them—men and women—have some special interest, hobby, or whatever you choose to call it outside of merely society life. Some are literary, musical, or artistic. Others are interested in philanthropy, reform, or politics. The Arthur Aldises and Howard Shaws make a cult of the drama. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor is "facile princeps" as a contributor to and a patron of belles-lettres, his fame in this direction having completely overshadowed his earlier far spread reputation as being one of the best cotillion leaders and the most experienced social arbiter in this part of the world.

The ranks of fashionable amateur artists are large, and growing larger each year. At the head of this list is Mrs. Robert McGann, whose work in oil colors is professional in its strength and finish. While her specialty is portraiture, she has been rather devoting herself since last winter to painting outdoor garden scenes. Both in Santa Barbara, Cal., last spring and in Lake Forest this summer she has done some delightful work in this line. She has inspired quite a group of enthusiasts to become interested in open air sketching, and almost daily a bevy of amateurs might have been seen in the latter days of summer with their easels set up in some one of the lovely gardens for which Lake Forest is famous. Among these painters you were pretty sure to see besides Mrs. McGann, Mrs. Amy Adams, Charles Dewey, and the Louis Laflins' eldest son, Ellsworth Laflin.

Mrs. McGann has not, however, devoted herself entirely to garden pictures, as proved by a clever portrait she recently painted by Mrs. Ray Atherton. Mrs. Atherton is of a striking brunette type, most alluring and inspiring to a painter. Her hair is unusually black, her skin unusually white, which makes her lips seem unusually red, while she is tall, slender, and quite foreign looking. She and her husband are recent acquisitions from Boston. She is a niece of the architect, Charles Coolidge, who once lived here, as did also another uncle, Dr. Frederick Coolidge, who married Miss Elizabeth Sprague, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Sprague.

The Athertons, who have since they came here a year or so ago made their home in Lake Forest, are coming in town this winter, and have taken an apartment in Sheridan road, a little north of Lincoln park. This adds to that already good sized colony who a short time ago were considered by dwellers south of the park as going into exile when they went so far away.

The latest addition to the group of Lake Forest artists is Henry M. Hubbard, better known as Harry Hubbard. He has become utterly absorbed in sculpture and shows must talent in modeling portrait busts.

Of the four bombs dropped in Paris only one is reported to have done serious damage to any building, and that was one that fell on a factory where tapestries and rugs are made. It so happened that the tapestries and carpets ordered for the Arthur Meekers' new house were at that time on the looms and were utterly destroyed. This will not deter the Meekers from moving in as they plan to do this month, but it will seriously mar the effect of their installation, as the destroyed articles were rare and choice in design and just suited to the fine Georgian residence for which they were destined.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY. By Mme. Z.

MISS CALLIE HOKE SMITH

MISS DORIS HAYWOOD

MRS. THOMAS W. GREGORY

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—All Washington, in the intervals of discussing the latest war news and imparting thrilling details as to its autumn crop of brides and buds, is asking, every man of his neighbor—or, rather, every woman of hers—questions as to the personality, plans, etc., of Mrs. Thomas Watts Gregory, wife of the new attorney general. A new cabinet hostess always is interesting in Washington society, and Mrs. Gregory, who has just come to town and is "putting in delirious days of house hunting," is a most promising addition to the group of administration chatelaines.

Without committing oneself to comparisons, there is certainly some excuse for Mrs. Gregory's friends announcing that she is going to be the beauty of the cabinet. She is good looking, rather small, but decidedly graceful, with dark hair, a lovely complexion, and deep violet eyes. And her elder daughter, Miss Jane Gregory, is said to be the image of her mother. Moreover, at the University of Texas, from which she graduated last June with high honors, Miss Gregory was named "lady of the university" by vote of the student body, which means that she was the most all around popular girl there. So the other debutantes of the winter have to look to their laurels.

One of the first demands made upon Mrs. Gregory as one of the cabinet women was that she lend the light of her countenance to the National Cotton Fashion show sponsored by Miss Clark. It was held in the red room of the Willard on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, as a sort of central feature to a nation-wide cotton bargain week which has been widely advertised in department stores throughout the country in the hope of stimulating the demand for the great staple of the south.

All of the cabinet women and many others prominent in official life figured as patronesses of the affair, and cotton gowns, made, or designed, or perchance only worn, at any rate contributed by girls of more or less social prominence, were made rather an interesting feature of the exhibit.

Among the Washington girls, after Genevieve Clark, Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Hoke Smith, was one of the most deeply interested in the success of the exposition. She offered cash prizes of $20, $10, and $5 for the best 300 word essays written on "The Cotton Plant and Its Uses," by American school children, under 16 years of age, and a most distinguished jury of men and women agreed to pass on the essays and award the prizes.

Callie Hoke Smith is one of the most popular girls of the congressional set, a good dancer and one who thoroughly enjoys a good time. But she has recently developed a burning desire to prove that she can be of some use in the world. To prove her realization of the fact that life is not all beer and skittles she quietly set herself to mastering shorthand last winter, and all through the heat of the summer she served as one of the stenographers in her father's office up at the capitol. Now, as a reward of merit her mother is taking her home for a series of visits in Georgia, including one to her brother and his young wife, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Smith, and their twin daughters born last June. They expect to get as far south as Florida and will not return until well into the winter.

Wedding bells which in June ring out the old season and in October ring in the new are already pealing merrily. Washington has a most interesting series of fall weddings on its hands, and fresh announcements of engagements are constantly being made. One of the most interesting of these was that of Miss Doris Haywood and Dr. Howard Hume, made public a few days ago, the wedding to take place during the winter.

Miss Haywood has been one of the acknowledged belles of Washington for the last three or four years. She made her debut the same season that Miss Helen Taft was presented, if memory serves, and has been continually in demand ever since. Her family, having been established here for at least three generations—her grandfather, Judge Jeremiah Wilson, was one of the most prominent and popular lawyers in Washington in his day—Miss Haywood can fairly be regarded as belonging to the old resident set, which considers itself the only real society in Washington.

Dr. Hume belongs to a family equally well known in Washington and firmly intrenched here and in near-by Virginia counties. He graduated from the University of Virginia in 1905 and since then has established himself satisfactorily as a practicing physician in Washington.

The first of the October brides was pretty little Helen Heyl, who was married last Saturday. She is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Charles H. Heyl, and had been regarded as one of this winter's debutantes, but she stole a march on society by announcing her engagement to Lieut. Milo P. Fox, U. S. A., and naming the wedding day, without waiting to make her debut at all. It was a pretty wedding at the Heyl residence late in the afternoon, with all the men folks in the glory of full dress uniforms, Col. Heyl in that of his rank and Lieut. Fox, surrounded by a group of engineer officers, in as much gold braid as the law allowed them.

With an army wedding leading off, a naval wedding followed on Wednesday, when Miss Harriet Gatewood, daughter of Medical Director James Duncan Gatewood, U. S. N., married Dr. Henry E. Jenkins, U. S. N. Next comes the most interesting of all, the Bowers-Taft wedding on Saturday next, followed two weeks later by the Hellen-Bowers ceremony, and a few days after that the marraige of Mary McCauley and Lieut. Herbert S. Howard, U. S. N., at St. John's on Nov. 3.

NEWS OF CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS.

By Inez Travers.

THE Lake Shore Woman's club will hold its opening reception at the home of Mrs. William Henderson, [illegible] Sheridan road, on Wednesday, Oct. 14. Joint hostesses with Mrs. Henderson on this occasion will be Mrs. Philip J. Maguire and Mrs. Quin O'Brien. The decorations will be in the club colors, yellow and white, and a variety of autumn flowers. Eight young women of the auxiliary—Miss Marion Hosman, Miss Mary Baker, Miss Lucile Geanart, Miss Camille Crane, Miss Joanna Crane, Miss Mildred M. Roberts, and Miss Zetta Kavanaugh—will assist.

This will be the club's ninth season and it plans an interesting program for the coming year. Its membership list of 200 is filled up and there is a waiting list of about thirty, all of which speaks well for its popularity. It looks rather doubtful, too, from the way the members value their membership, that the thirty on the list will ever get into the club, unless the bylaws are changed.

Last year a young woman's auxiliary was added to the club to assist in its charity work and to unite the daughters of the members socially.

The club is nonsectarian and its object is twofold—charity and sociability. The meetings are held bymonthly at the homes of the members, and as entertaining for over a hundred, which the regular attendance usually numbers, is rather an undertaking for a single hostess, two or three of the members usually entertain together.

Every second meeting is for the discussion of business. At the social meetings the hostesses usually decide upon the form of entertainment they shall offer their guests, which gives a pleasant variety to the club's activities. There is usually a musical program on those occasions when there is not card playing. The program for the opening reception has not been decided upon.

For the benefit of its charities the club gives several card parties and a charity ball each season. This year the charity ball will be in January.

The particular and worthy cause the club devotes its attention to is the care of aged women. There are so many people to look after the babies and their mothers and so few who realize the hopelessness of a woman too old to work and with neither relatives nor friends to depend upon that the members of the club consider that in no way could they better expend their money; and they give not only money but their time and their energy and kindliness to make these poor old women happier as well as more comfortable. About fifty aged women were taken care of by the club last winter, and many appeals came to which a lack of funds did not permit more than temporary aid.

The election of officers shows the following result: Mrs. G. W. Tuttle, president; Mrs. Thomas G. English, vice president; Mrs. George E. Mahoney, recording secretary; Mrs. W. H. Burke, financial secretary; Mrs. John Magnus, corresponding secretary; Mrs. S. W. McKay, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. M. Weinand, treasurer; Mrs. Philip Maguire, social chairman; Mrs. Charles Kilpatrick, press chairman.

How Would You Look Without Your Hair!

The answer is too serious to contemplate. And yet, every time hair comes out in the combing you are that much nearer a condition of partial or total baldness. Don't neglect your hair. Its loss is a calamity, which deprives woman of her greatest charm.

Newbro's Herpicide
Saves and Beautifies the Hair

Dandruff robs the hair of luster and luxuriance and causes it to come out. Hence one's system of personal cleanliness is incomplete unless it includes a reliable, sanitary hair dressing. The fact that thousands of ladies daily depend upon Herpicide to keep the hair and scalp clean and free from dandruff is the best possible evidence of the value of this well-known scalp prophylactic.

It is to those who wish to make the most of nature's gifts by having light, fluffy, snappy hair that Newbro's Herpicide appeals most strongly. It has an exquisite fragrance, contains no grease and does not dye or darken the hair. Herpicide is the Original Germ-Remedy for dandruff.

You will like Newbro's Herpicide—try it.

News of the Religious World

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Rev. Rollin R. Marquis of Lawrenceville, Ill., who is the moderator of the Illinois state synod of the Presbyterian church, will preach the opening sermon of the annual meeting of the synod to be held in the Second Presbyterian church, Bloomington, Oct. 20-22.

Dr. Robert Speer, one of the few laymen who ever received the degree of doctor of divinity, and the Rev. C. L. Thompson of the board of home missions, both of New York, will conduct a conference the next forenoon on the best methods of doing the church work. The closing evening will be devoted to the consideration of work among the young people and will be in charge of the Rev. Martin E. Anderson, pastor of the Rogers Park Presbyterian church, formerly pastor of the McKinley Memorial church for students at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. The Rev. C. Harmon Johnson, pastor of the River Forest Presbyterian church, is the stated clerk of the synod.

W. G. Brimson, president of the Consolidated Colliery company, Chicago, is the president of the Illinois State Baptist convention and will preside at the meeting which will be held in the First Baptist church, Mt. Vernon, Ill., Oct. 20 to 22. Preceding the state convention the pastoral union will meet in the same place beginning Monday evening, Oct. 19.

On Tuesday in the First Presbyterian church, while the pastoral union is in session in the Baptist church, the women's societies will meet for their annual meeting. At the pastoral union the annual sermon will be preached by the Rev. W. T. Paullin of Bentinc. Mrs. F. P. Topping is president of the society and will preside.

The state convention, at which Mr. Brimson will preside, begins at 1:50 o'clock Tuesday. Mr. Brimson will respond to an address of welcome Tuesday evening.

The Rev. Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago will deliver an address Wednesday evening.

A banquet will be held the closing night at which the topic will be "Illinois." John Ruthven of Morgan Park will be toastmaster and the Rev. J. S. Ebersole, pastor of the North Shore Baptist church, Chicago, will speak about Chicago's part in the state. Later in the evening addresses will be made by the Rev. J. M. Dean and the Rev. M. P. Boynton, Chicago pastors.

The Christian Endeavor society on the American continent, including especially the United States and Canada, is preparing for a general celebration of "Good Citizenship day" next Sunday. The Rev. Daniel A. Poling of Boston, a minister of the United Evangelical church and associate secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, is superintendent of the movement. Militant songs are to be sung and addresses will be given on the motto adopted as the slogan of the day, "A Saloonless Nation in 1920." The idea of establishing good citizenship day originated at a state convention in Nebraska in 1910. In July, 1911, it was adopted by the national society. President Wilson, Secretary of State Bryan, and J. A. Macdonald of Toronto have indorsed the movement.

The dedication of the new administration building of the Concordia Teachers' college at River Forest will take place today.

The building now completed replaces the one nearly destroyed by fire last February. The first building was dedicated a year ago, a few months before the fire, and the ceremonies were attended by the largest gathering of Lutherans, it was said, ever assembled in one place.

At the ceremony today, which begins at 2:30 o'clock, there will be music by a band, a mixed choir, and a male chorus. The choir will be under the leadership of G. Guettler and the male chorus of J. Zitzmann. An address in German will be delivered by the Rev. F. Pfotenhauer, president of the general synod, and in English by the Rev. G. Schuessler, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer. The Rev. Theodore Kohn, president of the college, will have charge of the opening services and will read the scriptures. The rebuilding of the college has cost less than was anticipated at the time of the fire because more of the material of the building was left intact than was originally intended.

The dedication of the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, in Belmont avenue, near State court, will take place today at 10:30 o'clock. The Rt. Rev. Paul P. Rhode will pereform the dedicatory ceremony, which will be followed by a solemn pontifical high mass at 11 o'clock, at which the Most Rev. Joseph Weber will pontificate.

The new church, which is a beautiful stone edifice, is Gothic in style of architecture. It is 68 by 51 feet. The height of gable to top of cross is 79 feet, and the towers are 95 feet high. The seating capacity is about 1,000. The roof is of green tile, and the three altars, sanctuary rail and pulpit are of white marble.

In 1886 the Rev. P. O'Brien was appointed to found the parish. Father O'Brien built a frame church and parochial school. The pastor of the church is the Rev. P. D. Gill. He was ordained for the diocese of Nashville and came with the late Archbishop Feehan from that diocese to Chicago. He was chancellor for two years, when he was appointed to the pastorate of St. Charles Borromeo church. He was appointed pastor of Our Lady of Mount Carmel church Nov. 6, 1895. He is assisted by the Rev. Joseph T. O'Donnell.

The Logan Square Baptist church, Lawndale and Belden avenues, will be dedicated next Sunday. The date was to have been today, but postponement was found necessary. The Rev. Alexander Robertson is pastor of the church. He will be assisted in the dedication ceremonies by the Rev. Frank L. Anderson, superintendent of the Baptist executive council, who will preach the morning sermon, and the Rev. Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago, who will preach in the evening. The Rev. M. P. Boynton, pastor of the Woodlawn Baptist church, will speak Friday evening, Oct. 23.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

October

Colors.

THE receding sap produces a phenomenon of change almost as sudden as that of the rising sap. The "good night" of the woods is spoken with something like abruptness, with the abruptness with which the south slope of a hill in spring may signal "good morning" in hepaticas. The colorful decay comes quickly, even as the awakening after the persistent coax of warmth.

In a few days the woods went from a mere suggestion of color to a burst of it. We do not get a flame as they do where hard maples are massed, but our oaks, poplars, cottonwoods, maples, cherry, ash and tangles of vibernum, hazel and wych hazel would offer the rug maker of Usbekistan the colors he would despair of weaving into the rug for the tent of the prince of the desert.

Thus our woods in their brave close of day do not startle the eyes but hold them long with mystery of light and shade, not asking raptures but serene and silent contemplation.

As fitting a tremendous ceremony there is quiet. The harvest fly by night and the downy woodpecker by day alone profane the cathedral calm of the woods. Hermit thrush are numerous but as silent as Trappists.

Underfoot the wild aster, past its prime, and the fringed and closed gentians prevail, but nearly all other flowers, even the goldenrod, have wrapped a blanket of brown leaves about them for the long night, and the trees, draped in their quick fading beauty, enter their twilight.

ULYSSES TO CALYPSO

"This odorous amorous isle of violets,
That leans all leaves into the glassy deep,
With brooding music over noontide moss
And low dirge of the lily swinging bee,—
Then stars like opening eyes on closing flowers,— Palls on my heart. Ah, God! that I might see
Gaunt Ithaca stand up out of the surge,
You lashed and steaming rocks, and sobbing crags.
The screaming gull and the wild flying cloud:—
To see far off the smoke of my own hearth,
To smell far out the glebe of my own farms,

Goddess and mortal we have met and kissed.
Now I am mad for silence and for tears."

How she hath listened to the Gabriel Hounds;
Those strange unearthly and mysterious sounds
Which on the ear through murkiest darkness fell;
And how, entranced by superstitious spell,
The trembling villager not seldom heard,
In the quaint notes of the nocturnal bird
Of death premonished, some sick neighbor's knell.
I, too, remember once, at midnight dark,
How these sky yelpers startled me, and stirred
My fancy so, I could have then averred
A mimic pack of beagles low did bark!"

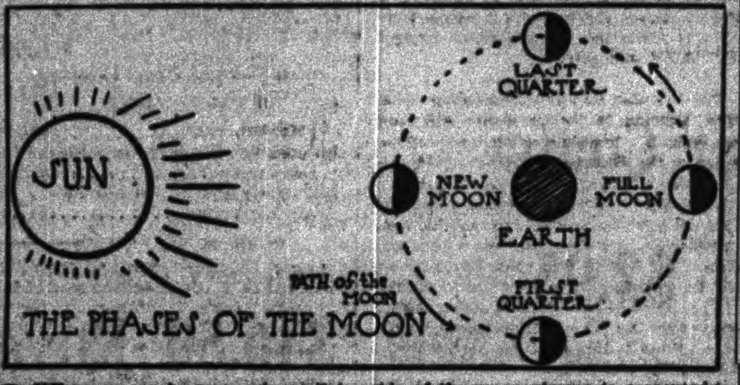
ASTRONOMY.



THE PHASES OF THE MOON

THE moon can be seen only as it is illuminated by the sun. As it revolves about the earth it is now between the sun and the earth and now on the other side of the earth from the sun. When it is between the sun and the earth it is invisible, presenting to the earth in the bright daylight only the unilluminated dead black surface of a celestial body without heat. The illuminated side is turned towards the sun.

When the moon is on the opposite side of the earth from the sun we have presented its full lighted surface and the earth is flooded with the soft reflected light which is the delight of the careless gazer at the heavens and the despair of the more sophisticated. The full moon drowns the light of the suns, which, because they are animated, amazing spectacles of force in evolution, attract the more than casual observer more than the soft beauty of the moonlight.

These are two phases of the moon and make plain how the satellite passes through the various forms in which it is visible from the earth during its course. Its revolution requires 27 days, 7 hours, 43 minutes, and 11.5 seconds. During this time it turns once on its axis, but makes the turn in the gradual course of its swing about the earth so that the same side of the moon always is presented to view from the earth.

The new moon is when the satellite is between the earth and the sun; the full moon is when it is on the other side of the earth, with the earth between it and the sun.

As it revolves from the position of new moon it gradually presents an illuminated area to the earth's view and the gradual enlargement of this area can be seen in the growing crescent until the moon has reached its first quarter. From then the crescent fills out, more and more of the moon's surface being shown illuminated, until full moon is reached. Then the reverse phenomenon is seen and the surface increasingly is withdrawn from the illumination and the moon apparently fades in size until it has reached its last quarter. Then it continues to new moon.

A glance at the accompanying diagram will show how the orb waxes and wanes as it turns or withdraws the illuminated area from the view of the earth.

If moon and earth were moving in the same plane there would be an eclipse of the sun every time there was a new moon and an eclipse of the moon every time there was a full moon. This is evident because at full moon the earth is between the sun and the moon and at new moon the moon is between the earth and the sun. But the plane of the moon's movement is not precisely that of the earth's movement, but is inclined to it at an angle of about five degrees. Consequently it does not get in direct line except at such intervals as produce the eclipses.

Undoubtedly the moon was the first of the heavenly bodies to arouse the curiosity of men. Its friendly aid first was accepted and then examined, and possibly one of the first riddles solved was that of the moon's phases.

When the moon is new it is standing in between us and the glaring light of the sun, which in itself, even if the moon were not a black disk in space, would prevent our seeing it. Nothing but another star of such magnitude as the sun and at not greater distance could make itself visible then.

When the new moon has waxed and is to be seen low in the west in the twilight most of the dark part is visible. The dark part is lighted by the earth itself. Here one can observe the "earth shine." The earth, itself shining like Jupiter and Venus in the heavens, throws its reflected light upon its satellite, and the satellite reveals itself dimly.

This, in the homely charm of the old saying, is "the old moon in the new moon's arms.

MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY AND HER DAUGHTER BARBARA

The two small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney got up a fair at their father's country place and raised $3,000 for the Red Cross.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Little Barbara Whitney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney, never felt just right not to do anything for the victims of the war. She thought and thought what her sacrifice could be. Of course the thing that she was proudest of in the world was her pony, but her father said it wouldn't be practical at all to send him. She had heard about how Miss Anne Morgan gave hers when she loved it so much. Miss Morgan said she supposed it was dead because the soldier who took it said it would make a fine cavalry charger. The family told Miss Barbara Whitney that hers wouldn't be any good as a charger at all. Still Barbara didn't feel right, and neither did Joan. They talked and talked about it until they had this inspiration:

They would get up a fair and at the fair they would raffle the dear pony! When they told their beautiful mother she was so touched by their unselfishness that she said she would help. They are still at their summer place, Green Tree, Manhassett, L. I., and with her approval the little girls set about their project.

They rode the pony from house to house along the sound spreading the word of the fair to take place on their grounds. They telephoned and they got out dodgers. The name of the pony was Bluebell and he won prizes at the Mineola and other Piping Rock shows, where his little mistress herself displayed him. Of course, these facts were mentioned in the dodgers.

On the day of the entertainment any automobile on Long Island seemed to head for the Whitney place. Two thousand dollars' worth of tickets sold in the raffle, and Mrs. Willard Straight, a beautiful young woman with two little children of her own, drew the prize.

"O, Barbara, isn't this splendid?" she cried to the little heroine whose eyes for the first time were beginning to fill with tears. "Can you guess what I'm going to do with him?"

"O, don't send him to the war," she pleaded.

"No, Barbara," she answered. "There is only one thing I would dream of doing with him. I am going to give him back to you."

The children sent their check for $3,000 to the Red Cross fund, this representing the proceeds from their fête.

Never has craving for a pretty romance to read about—or write about—been so entirely justified as now. Against the background of our awful world trouble a quiet love story is like a reassuring sign.

Miss Nan Campbell is the heroine of such a one, and it will result next week in her marriage. As is known, she was a young actress of much promise.

Four years ago her mother did what is said to be a hard thing for elderly people to bring themselves to do. She left her quiet southern home in Virginia and came to the city, which would have been the last choice she would ever have made for a home. New York is difficult for mothers, but sometimes quite tender to young actresses. The chance that it might befriend her daughter was what sustained Mrs. Campbell's moral courage to take the step.

New York was kind to Miss Campbell. It gave her approval and she was on the way to a large success. But before she ever reached this great, influential city she met another influence more formidable than this.

William Wilson Miller had watched this young woman grow up. He knew her back in Virginia, but he left the home town before she did and came to New York to make good.

He had made very good indeed before Miss Campbell ever embarked on her career, and he begged her to give it up before it was begun. When she declined to do this he almost despaired of her ever doing it at all. "There is something about the stage that makes it almost impossible to relinquish. There is something about personal success that one cannot give up." That was what he said.

This is just what Miss Campbell found not to be true. Personal success she saw was nothing to her as soon as she discovered what it was like. The stage was fascinating, but empty and heart breaking to her beside the full life offered in husband and home. John Mason had just engaged her to play in "Big Jim Gerrity" when it comes to play in New York after a run on the road. What an actress desires is a good New York engagement, but Miss Campbell, with all of her talent, wished more for a quiet life with the man who had begun asking her to marry him when she was a little girl.

He is now the senior member of a firm of lawyers known as Hornblower, Miller, Potter & Earle, and extremely well to do. After his marriage with his young bride next week he will take her south in his private car, and on his return will establish her in the home which she so much desires. All of his friends offer assurance that it will be a beautiful place.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont has closed Marble house at Newport and returned to New York for the winter.

A committee, of which Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. is the chairman, has arranged to have the first appearance of Pavlowa and her company on Nov. 3 in the Metropolitan Opera house a benefit performance for the payment of the district nurses and the work of the social service committee of the babies' ward of the Post-Graduate hospital. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Jr., Mrs. W. D. Sloane, and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth are among those interested in the benefit.

Campaign Against Vice to Test Suffrage Power.

By Marion Walters Lovett.

THE women of Illinois will have the opportunity to test the actual power of woman's political influence in this state after their statewide campaign for legislation calculated to remedy vice and crime conditions is finished and the legislature has either approved or rejected the measures for which the women stand.

Bills intended to correct vice conditions have been introduced in the Illinois legislature before and have been defeated. Lack of public opinion was the cause, said the men who fostered the bills. In 1911 a red light injunction and abatement law was introduced at Springfield. The Illinois Vigilance association spent $8,000 in obtaining a proper bill to present and for lobbying, but it lacked the backing of public opinion and was sidetracked.

This year the Law and Order league, the Committee of Fifteen, and other organizations having similar purposes, all eager for legislation which shall put a strong curb on vice, have hit upon the lucid idea that, through the coöperation of women, this public opinion which is so necessary to carry reform measures successfully through the legislature may be created. Wise leaders of reform movements have come to the conviction, "when you want a measure popularized, get the women to do it." Straightforward talks by wholehearted women at the meetings of women's clubs and suffrage associations frequently do more than fine speeches by gifted orators on political platforms to further the success of reform measures.

A permanent central women's committee has been formed in Chicago which has outlined well formulated plans by which the women throughout the state in churches, in suffrage organizations, in women's clubs, in vice organizations, in parents and teachers' associations, and in miscellaneous uplift organizations may coöperate to secure the necessary anti-vice legislation.

The State Federation of Women's Clubs will be asked to indorse the measures by Mrs. A. E. Walker of the legislative committee, who will support the measures personally until the matter is taken up by the organization.

Dr. Effa V. Davis, chairman of the social evil committee of the Woman's City club, with the three leaders of the subcommittees, Miss Kate Adams, Mrs. Virginia Brooks Washburne, and Miss Lucy Hall, together with Mrs. George Watkins, chairman of the legislative department of the Chicago Woman's club, will push the work in Chicago and down state. The members of the Woman's club will concentrate their efforts on obtaining a state industrial home where women of the streets may be sent under indeterminate sentences following conviction instead of being fined and released. This will fit them for some occupation by which they can earn a respectable living.

The committee will also ask the women of the state to support making it a felony to use property for immoral purposes, the red light injunction and abatement law, as well as the bastardy bill, which provides that the fathers of unlawful children be made responsible for the support and education of the latter until they are 18 years old, instead of the present age limit—10 years. They will also ask for a revision of the abandonment law, so that the man who does not leave his family, but fails to provide for them; the man who sits down at home, crossing his feet, and smoking his pipe, peacefully waiting for his family to feed and clothe him, may be forced to support his family.

The need of the voicing of woman's viewpoint among men on the responsibility of the father for illegitimate children is urged by the committee. "In talking with a man just the other day," said Mrs. Washburne, "I urged him to work for the bastardy bill. He looked at me quite seriously and said: 'Mrs. Washburne, I hardly think you will find it possible to enact legislation which will force a man to take care of strangers.' And that is the viewpoint of thousands of men—their illegitimate children are classed as 'strangers.'"

Bills for the legislature covering these measures are being prepared by Chief Justice Harry Olson, Judge Charles N. Goodnow of the Morals court, the Committee of Fifteen, and other men. The women will present no measures at Springfield; they will merely create the public sentiment for those presented by the men and use their influence with the legislators to have them vote favorably.

The Law Enforcement league is gathering statistics, such as the number of women fined and similar points, and the women's central committee will send them out to every woman's organization in the state. Literature and lectures bearing on the bills will also be furnished to the women's clubs and church societies by the educational committee, of which Miss Lucy Hall is chairman.

Mrs. Washburne of the legislative committee will ask the women to write or telegraph their representative to support the anti-vice measures.

A convention will be called some time in December or the first of January to gather up all the loose ends of the work and to crystallize the sentiment aroused during the campaign.

The Tuesday morning citizenship class, Mrs. Edward W. Bemis leader, will meet at 10:30 on Tuesday in the committee room of the Woman's City club, 116 South Michigan avenue. Miss Anna Nicholes of the county civil service commission will tell the class the duties of the county commissioners and the problems which confront this board. Ten commissioners are to be elected on Nov. 3 within the city. Judge Owens has decided that women may vote for these commissioners. All are invited to this meeting whether members of the club or not.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the page only.

"DEAR MISS VAN RENSSELAER: When Mr. and Mrs. John Smith announce the marriage of their daughter and inclose cards stating that the bride and groom will be at home in a distant city after Oct. 15, what is the correct thing for me to do? At this distance we cannot call. Must I send cards? If so, to whom and how many? A. P. K."

Send your calling cards by post to reach the bride's New York address on Oct. 15. Send one of your own. If your mother and father were invited to the wedding your mother should inclose one of her own and two of her husband's cards in the envelope. If the bride is merely a slight acquaintance and if you received only announcements of the wedding you are not bound to send cards on their first day at home, but the sending of them is a little more courteous than it would be to signify in no way the receipt of the announcements.

"Dear Miss Van Rensselaer: Is it necessary to acknowledge a wedding announcement, and when doing so, will it be proper to send a small painted card of congratulations, inclosing my card; or should a message of this kind be written? If the latter, how do I address it, 'Dear Friends' or 'Dear Mr. and Mrs.,' and what should I say? W. H."

It is not necessary to acknowledge wedding announcements except that you should call or send your card on the bride's day at home. Do not send a painted card of congratulation. Write a sincere little note to the bride and tell her that you hope she will be very happy indeed. If the bride is not an intimate friend no written acknowledgment whatever is necessary.

"Dear Miss Van Rensselaer: I am asking your help in planning my wedding. It is to be just a simple home affair, with only relatives and four or five intimate friends. It has been my plan to receive in line with my aunt and uncle, with whom I live, and the man I am to marry and his parents. At a signal we would take our places and the ceremony would begin. Some of my relatives and friends found out our plan and seem to be opposed to it. It seems to be the desire of all that we come in just in time for the ceremony. One suggestion was that we come down and mingle with the guests a few minutes before. I have not met all the relatives of the man I am to marry, and that was one reason I thought it would be nice to meet them before the ceremony. My sister wishes to be my bridesmaid. If you can give me any suggestions I will be very glad, as I am now so undecided. E. K. S."

Why don't you wait until after the ceremony to meet your fiancé's relatives? It is never considered proper for the bride to see any one except her nearest relatives and dearest women friends before the ceremony, and she does not see the groom until they meet before the minister. You will find it much less embarrassing to greet your friends after the ceremony than before.

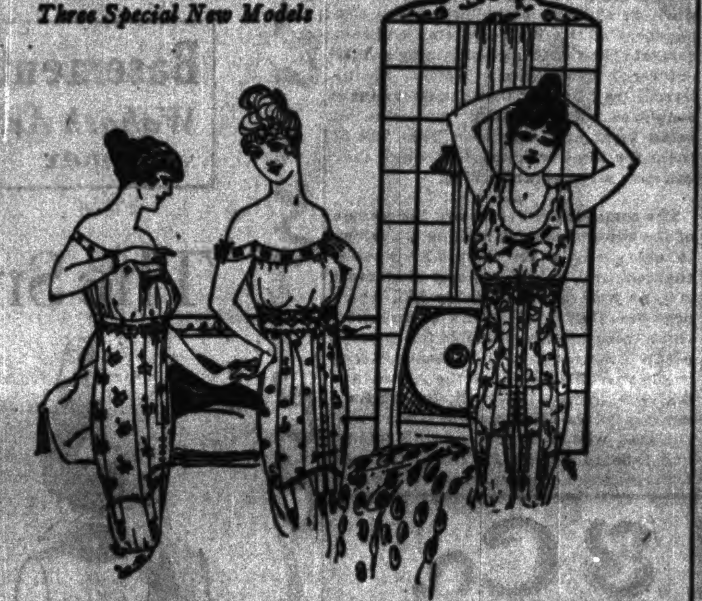
Three Special New Models



If you have fallen into a "rut" of buying corsets carelessly, when in need of another corset, let us exemplify what knowledge and trained service will accomplish.

Our experience is different from other corset shops, as we work directly with the manufacturer. Our ideas gained in practical fittings are the secret. We direct our efforts continuously to fulfill every fashionable physical requirement.

We know of no other corset shop that works as thoroughly to the point of excellence in producing models in style and quality. Just as thorough are we in selecting the correct model for the individual figure.

RHEA model designed for a figure large below the waist and small above. This model flattens the back wonderfully and holds the flesh around the hips and thighs firmly. The elastic gores in back and front below the waist give the freedom necessary. The top of the corset in front controls the flesh of the diaphragm and molds it carefully without discomfort. Made of handsome silk finish Broche, pink and white, price, $19.50.

STEVENS' SPECIAL model for a medium figure requiring a medium length corset, low bust and rather well boned. The material is a firm broche, a beautiful shade of pink and white. Price $7.50.

One of the most wonderful values ever shown for $3.00. Very dainty shade of pink, satin finish broche, built for the medium and slender figures who require a little height above the waist line. This model hugs the waist closely at the side front, giving the bust a splendid outline. The back is very flat and the skirt just a good length and not at all extreme.

MISS PEARL SINDELAR in "POTASH and PERLMUTTER"

Mr. Carr Is a Good Actor, But He Might Be Better.

By Percy Hammond.

PERHAPS Mr. Alexander Carr, in view of the large picture which decorates this page, will permit me to make a suggestion concerning the way he plays Mr. Perlmutter at the Olympic. It is, I may say at the beginning, an excellent characterization, so excellent that the two or three flaws in it become especially grievous to those who are fastidious about such things. One of these errors may be easily condoned. Mr. Carr's frequent interpolation of his musical comedy manner makes so many people glad that it is to be forgiven. When, however, he provides Mr. Perlmutter with unpleasant attributes that he should not possess, he harms himself, his play, and he renders his audience the less comfortable and happy.

I have reference to the malicious quality in Mr. Perlmutter's attitude toward Mr. Potash. It is pretty well known that Mr. Carr's regard for Mr. Bernard is measurable. They dress together in the theater and they are acquaintances of long standing, but—and I trust I violate no confidence by so relating—their love for each other is not like the lava flood that boils in Aetna's breast of flame. I am authoritatively informed that Mr. Carr would not, unless it were absolutely necessary, cut off his right hand for Mr. Bernard.

This, of course, has nothing to do with the way Mawruss treats Abe in the play. Yet it is a symbol, after a fashion, of his fundamental attitude. It has been said that Mr. Bernard has the more sympathetic part, and therefore, is more popular with press and public. Mr. Carr is to blame for that lamentable partiality. Mawruss is a fine, big hearted, noble, lower class Jew, tricky, expedient, superficially selfish, pugnacious, and irritable. He loves Abe as Pythias loved Damon, but Abe is slow and a bit stupid, and these qualities annoy Mawruss. In the acrid colloquies in which this vexation is manifested Mr. Carr is not merely peevish; he is aspic. His frown of hatred doubly falls upon poor Abe, malignant and detesting. In that scene wherein Mawruss defends his partner against Mrs. Potash's jealousy the true Perlmutter is evident, as it is in many other scenes. But elsewhere Mr. Carr descends upon Mr. Bernard like a scorpion; and I wish that he would not do so. However, I shall not be at all surprised if the next time I go to the Olympic I see Mawruss still hissing poisonously at Abe despite this mild expostulation.

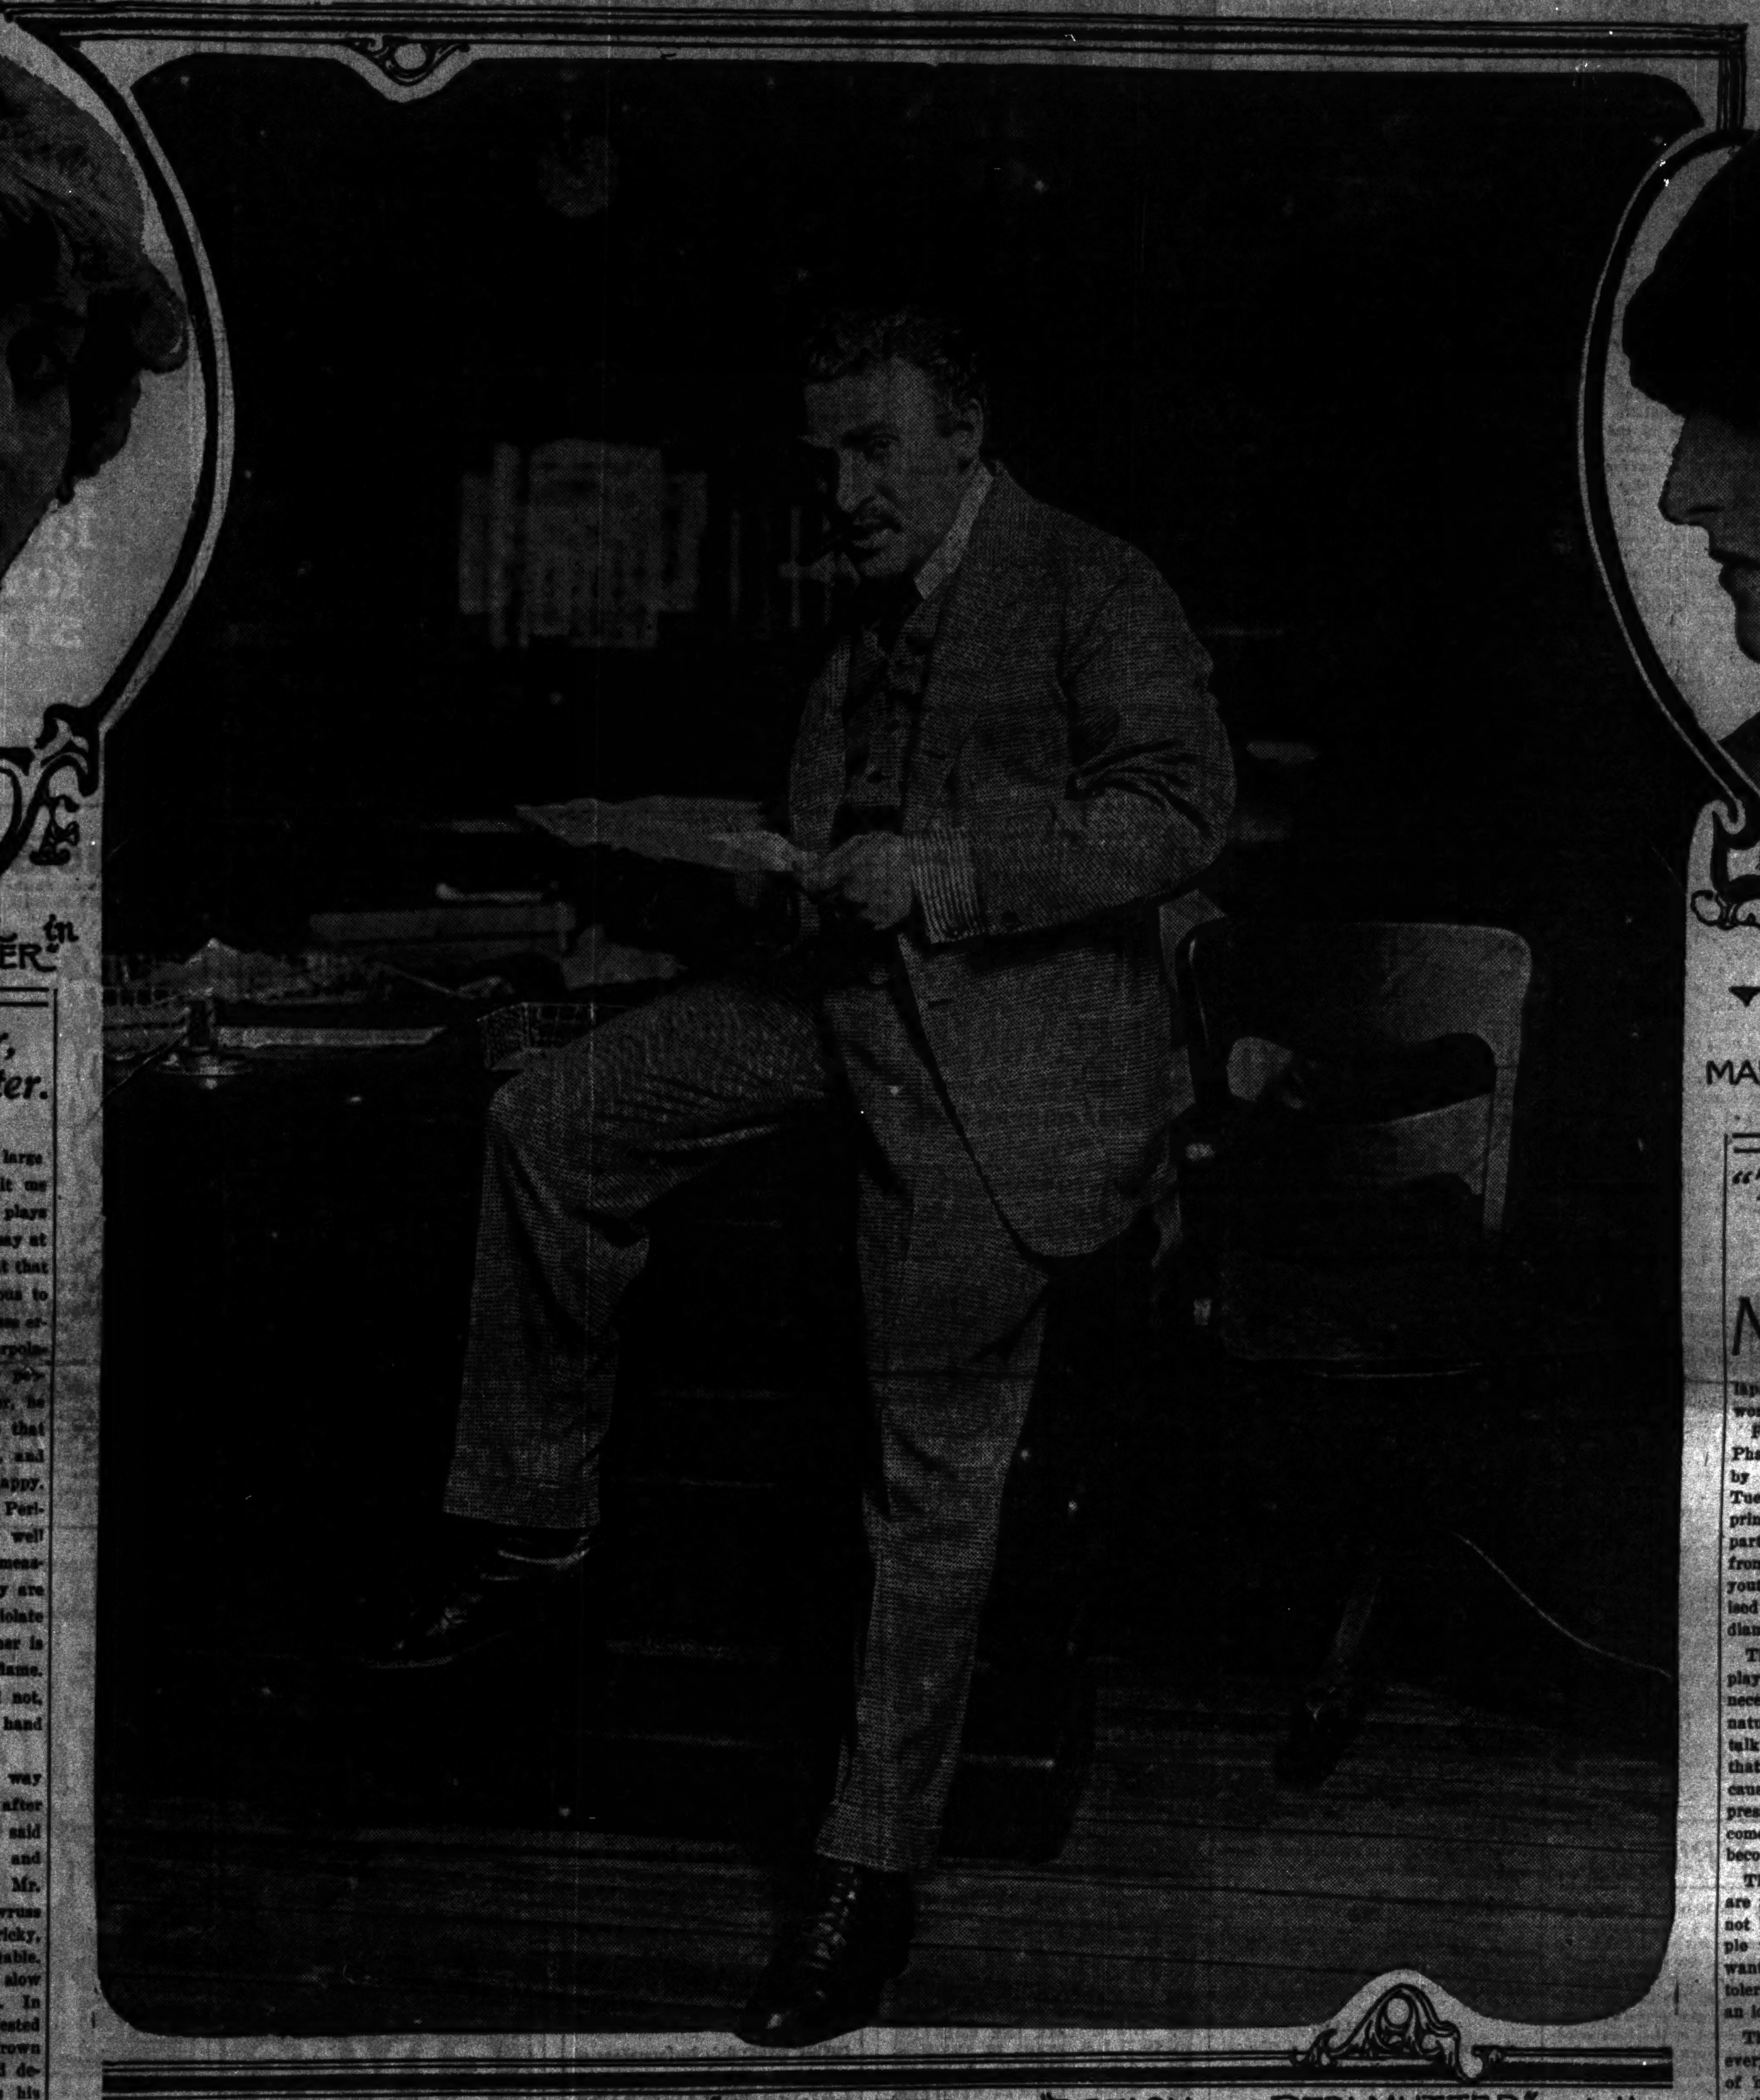
Years ago I journeyed from my native hamlet to Pittsburgh, Pa., there to see at the Bijou theater Oliver Doud Byron and son, Arthur, in a drama called "The Plunger." I think Mrs. Byron was in the play, too, a sister of Miss Ada Rehan—at any rate, an exuberant and effective actress of wholesome roles. Arthur Byron impersonated a noble lad, who uttered many grand speeches, and was fine and upstanding, though, I believe, engaged in some dishonest business or other at the behest of his male parent. However, he made an acute impression upon my childhood senses. I thought him the greatest actor in the world.

That enthusiasm has, of course, vanished with years devoted to the observation of the mighty players of our stage. Still, as I sat in the Princess theater last evening watching Arthur Byron impersonate the unhappy husband in the last act of "Today," I wondered if my youthful judgment was altogether awry. A fine exhibition of emotion —that last scene of Mr. Byron's in this play—a rugged, unkempt, irregular, thoroughly faithful picture of a man in mighty trouble. The character is not an endearing one. It is one of those lugubrious personalities affecting geniality than which there is no greater bore on the stage or off. Moreover, the morals of it are unpleasant. A man who complaisantly collects rent from the chatelaine of a wicked apartment should evoke small pity when he discovers his wife to be a visitor there. But Mr. Byron, handicapped as he is, stuns by his stark picture of despair, stippled in with all the vivid detail available. It is to be told that he has aid in this scene from Miss Bertha Mann, a bright young woman with a modern method of depicting emotion. When she is good she is very, very bad, but when she is bad she is splendid. And the shift from virtue to sin is an expert bit of acting.



ALEXANDER CARR as "MAWRUSS" PERLMUTTER in "POTASH and PERLMUTTER" at the OLYMPIC

MADAME YORSKA, at the MAJESTIC

"The Phantom Rival" Is Favored in New York.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Look well at you wife! If you have no wife, consider the ways of your sweetheart! Observe the moods of your maiden aunt, or note the uncertain mental lapses of cook! They are all under suspicion—all the women in the world! For—whisper—each has a secret love!

Ferenc Molnar, who wrote the calls him "The Phantom Rival," according to the American version made by Leo Ditrichstein and shown at the Belasco theater Tuesday night. Another might call him milady's dream prince. But whatever he is called, he is there, in the back part of every woman's brain—just across the gray cells from the chambers of her imagination—the ideal of her youth, the tender, impulsive, romantic lad who first promised to conquer the world for her and grab the gold and diamonds at the ends of the rainbow.

That is the argument and the basic theme of this new play, which adds one more to the novelties that seem a necessary lure to success this year. The discussion starts naturally enough in a restaurant scene, being the table talk of an actor and an author. The author contends that people no longer make a practice of theatergoing because there is no longer anything resembling ideas expressed in the drama. Theatrical entertainment has become standardized and commonplace and the public has become in a measure disgusted.

The actor replies, after the manner of actors, that there are no new ideas, and that if there were playgoers would not be interested in them. The people get what the people want. Which is naturally to imply that the people want what they get. However, he, being successful, is tolerant. If the author has a play, or a scenario, or even an idea for a play, he would be pleased to listen to it.

The author has—and it is the idea already stated—that every woman carries in the back of her mind a memory of her ideal lover which nothing, neither marraige, nor motherhood, nor any number or kind of experiences, can completely efface.

A married couple, breaking in upon the discussion, pass quickly to another table. They are quarreling. The man is nervous, irritable, overworked, and abnormally jealous. He accuses his wife of flirting with the actor. He questions her loyalty to him. He demands to know of whom she is thinking whenever it is quite plain she is not thinking of him.

A distinguished appearing young foreigner enters. There is the half light of recognition in his face as he catches sight of the married lady. He bows formally. The husband is enraged. He demands the name of the impertinent stranger. The wife remembers his face, but not his name. The husband threatens, cajoles, pleads. He must know when and where she has met this man. The wife, on the verge of hysterics, protests she cannot recall.

The quarrel is still on at the beginning of the second act, when they have reached home. And finally the husband worms from the now defiant wife that she had known the young foreigner seven years before; that he was a young Russian; that he had lived at a Brooklyn boarding house near her home; that he had played the piano and sung beautifully; that great things had been prophesied for his future, and that she was much in love with him. When he had left her to go with his colors to the war with Japan he had written her a letter in which he had promised that when he returned, whether it be as a conquering soldier, a famous statesman, a great artist, or even as "a bit of drift on the tide of life," it would be to lay his heart at her feet.

The husband is amused by the letter. A great soldier, indeed! A great mushpot! That's what he was. But the wife dreams on. No ordinary man can know what she knows of this dream lover of hers. With the letter in her hand she sits musing before the fire. There is a gradual dimming of the lights, and when they are turned up again the lover stands before her as a soldier, spurred, booted, and grandly uniformed. He has come for her. Through fire and blood he has waded to reach her. For her he has conquered millions and would conquer more. She cannot James K. Hackett's Canadian excursion in "Othello" lasted nine days and then ended in a fishing expedition in northern streams. It is said that Mr. Hackett will appropriate a portion of his prospective inheritance for the purchase of the Lyric theater, New York, from the owner, Reginald De Koven.

William Faversham calls upon all actors in America to refuse their services to Red Cross and other war benefits unless one-tenth of the receipts are given to the various actors' war funds of the embroiled nations. Many French, German, Austrian, Belgian, Russian, and Servian actors, it is said, are in the armies of their respective countries.

Eben Plympton, the actor-recluse, has been lured from his retirement to play Sir Toby Belch with Miss Neilson Terry and Henry E. Dixey in "Twelfth Night."

Of the performance of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" in London one critic writes: "Mr. Hawtrey had merely to be bland and imperturbable in the midst of alarms, and that, of course, he achieved with perfect success. The best fun came from Mr. George Tully, whose chief of police was a great fellow. There was some individual reality about him, too, and his bounce and his vigor and his rascality had an irresistible life. Miss Doris Lytton was pleasantly appealing as the fair journalist, and Miss Mona Harrison made a terrific feminine 'crook.' The most grotesque oddity of all, the local hermit and ghost, was turned into a clever and comical piece of the preposterous by Mr. Henry Wenman. The reception, in spite of some insignificant boorish interruption, was favorable."

Miss Nan Campbell, who played with Miss Blanche Ring at the Illinois in "When Claudia Smiles," is to be married to William Wilson Miller, senior member of the law firm of Hornblower, Miller, Potter & Earle of New York. Miss Campbell, at the suggestion of Mr. Miller, withdraws from the support of John Mason in "Big Jim Garrity" and retires from the stage.

"Melodrama," says W. A. Brady, "is the staple of the stage, the corned beef and cabbage of the theater. You sometimes like to drift off to truffles and pate de foie gras and fancy chefs d'oeuvre, but a good, big, steaming plate of corned beef and cabbage smells and tastes mighty good when you are hungry."

In the pictures:

Mr. Carr is seen in a typical pose as the irascible Perlmutter in the play at the Olympic. Until he acted this rôle Mr. Carr was a musical comedian, singing and jesting in "Louisiana Lou," "The Sweetest Girl in Paris," and other entertainments at the La Salle theater. Ambition and temperament are said to be among his most noticeable characteristics.

Mme. Yorska comes from Paris, where, 'tis said, she appeared prominently in the support of Mme. Bernhardt. Her plans to act here at the Fine Arts were changed for a tour of the variety theaters.

Miss Sindelar hails from melodrama and plays the efficient designer in "Potash and Perlmutter." Mr. Sindelar acts in this drama, too, as the book agent in the first act.

George Broadhurst, author of "Today," unlike other English dramatists, has sailed to, not from, Britain. His aged parents are there and he has gone to visit them during the uncomfortable days. Mr. Broadhurst came from England to State street, where he clerked in a dry goods shop before he embraced dramatics. Ere departing for England Mr. Broadhurst assisted in the severance of Alan Dale from the New York American by complaining of Mr. Dale's writings therein.

Frank Sheridan, an actor of much popularity in Chicago, has been engaged to take the part designed for Emmett Corrigan in "While the City Sleeps," the melodrama of Chicago night life, which is to be made known on Oct. 25 in the Auditorium, where it will be acted for three weeks for the Policemen's Benevolent association. Mr. Corrigan's engagement hung upon the outcome of the New York City reception of Charles Klein's new play, "The Money Makers," and, as that is described as a popular success, he is not available. Mr. Sheridan is easily remembered for his acting of the archbishop in "The Boss" and of the sagacious chief of police in "A Thief for a Night," with John Barrymore. Miss Mattie Ferguson, who specializes in parts of the kind, will play a comic Irishwoman, and Rodney Rancus, so long the melodramatic beau ideal of the once a week theaters, is to be a heroic policeman at war with the "system" which is just now dividing first page interest with the war.

"The Dummy," a crook play which had an all summer run in New York City, is to be tried in London by the same managers who found prosperity there with "Potash and Perlmutter."

William Harcourt is still prosecuting a suit against George Broadhurst for 10 per cent of the latter's enormous royalties on "The Man of the Hour," first produced eight years ago. The actor's allegation is that he was the means of enlisting the interest of William A. Brady in the Broadhurst play.

William Collier is to have a play written specially for him by George M. Cohan. There is in this arrangement the promise of good entertainment.

George W. Anson, a famous English comedian, is to come to this country to play in support of Miss Margaret Illington in Henry Arthur Jones' new play, "The Betrayal." This actor came to this country in 1896-97 to play in Audran's operetta of "La Poupee," and remained to become a member of Miss Julia Marlowe's company. His acting was especially good in "Ramola," a play made from the George Eliot novel by Elwyn A. Barron, at the time a critic of the drama in Chicago.

Otto Hauerbach, the librettist, is asking the permission of New York state to change his name to Harbach.

William Morris, the shrewd opportunist who annually imports Harry Lauder, paused in his westward flight to meet his homeward bound star last Wednesday to protest for Chicago publication against the further circulation of the interesting story that "'Tis a Long Way To Tipperary" is the favorite war song of the British troops preparing for battle. "It is a good song, of its kind," said Mr. Morris, "but it is not at all the British equivalent for 'A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight' in the Spanish-American war. When British troops are in camp or on march they sing the Lauder songs, and by British I mean English, Scots, Irish, and Welsh. If you will run 'Tipperary' over in your mind you must realize that it is not a melody to inspire the soldier on foot or afield. 'She Is My Daisy,' on the other hand, is just that kind of a melody."

Miss Effie Shannon, who "came back" after a long period of virtual obscurity in Mr. and Mrs. Hatton's "Years of Discretion," is to have the chief part in "The Children of Earth," the play by Alice Brown which won for her the Winthrop Ames $10,000 prize. Herbert Kelcey, who has been her professional associate for many years, also will be in the cast.

Why "G. B. S." Wrote "Caesar and Cleopatra."

MR. SHAW has added to the literature about his "Cæsar and Cleopatra," a summary of the reasons which caused him to write it and a statement of his ideas about Cæsar as a man and as a character in drama. This summary is addressed to Forbes-Robertson:

"My Dear Findon—'Cæsar and Cleopatra' is an attempt of mine to pay an installment of the debt that all dramatists owe to the art of heroic acting. Since Shakspeare paid up so handsomely on this score the British drama has been falling into heavier and [illegible] arrears. The heroic actor is [illegible] into everyday drama because [illegible] cannot spend our whole playgoing lives at 'Hamlet' or 'Macbeth'; 'Virginius,' 'Ingomar,' and 'Gamester' are outmoded; and 'Richelieu' does not carry a heroic actor very far in the twenty years of eminence which follow his long apprenticeship. Besides, our conception of heroism has changed of late years.

FORBES-ROBERTSON as CAESAR IN G. B. SHAW'S "CAESAR and CLEOPATRA"

"The stage hero of the palmy days is a pricked bubble. The gentlemanly hero, of whom Tennyson's King Arthur was the type, suddenly found himself out, as Torvald Helmar in Ibsen's 'Doll's House,' and died of the shock. It is no use now going on with heroes who are no longer really heroic to us. Besides, we want credible heroes. The old demand for the incredible, the impossible, the superhuman, which was supplied by bombast, inflation, and the piling of crimes on catastrophes and factitious raptures on artificial agonies, has fallen off; and the demand now is for heroes in whom we can recognize our own humanity, and who, instead of walking, talking, eating, drinking, sleeping, making love, and fighting single combats in a monotonous ecstasy of continuous heroism, are heroic in the true human fashion; that is, touching the summits only at rare moments, and finding the proper level of all occasions, condescending with humor and good sense to the prosaic ones, as well as rising to the noble ones, instead of ridiculously persisting in rising to them all on the principle that a hero must always soar, in season and out of season.

"I wrote 'Cæsar and Cleopatra' for Forbes-Robertson, because he is the classic actor of our day, and had a right to require such a service from me. He stands completely aloof in simplicity, dignity, grace, and musical speech from the world of the motor car and the Carlton hotel, which so many of the others, clever and interesting as they are, very evidently prefer, or at least think they ought to pretend to prefer, to the Olympian region where the classic actor is at home. Forbes-Robertson is the only actor I know who can find out the feeling of a speech from its cadence. His art meets the dramatist's art directly, picking it up for completion and expression without explanations or imitations, even when he follows up the feat by turning to ask what the prosaic meaning of the sentence is, only to find the author as much in doubt as himself on that point. Without him 'Cæsar and Cleopatra' would not have been written; for no man writes a play without any reference to the possibility of a performance; you may scorn the limitations of the theater as much as you please, but for all that you do not write parts for six legged actors or two headed heroines, though there is great scope for drama in such conceptions.

"That Forbest-Robertson's Cæsar should be famous in America before it has been seen here is a fact which speaks for itself on the subject of theatrical enterprise in London. However, we may be thankful that it has escaped the long run system, by which it would have been run to death at the first production, and Forbes-Robertson run to death's door with it. It will be played at the Savoy for four weeks only this year; but I hope we shall see it every year, as we should see all Forbes-Robertson's heroic parts, for the rest of his professional life.

"The American notices of the play showed, in spite of all my warnings to the critics, a widespread and dense ignorance of the nature of great men in general and the career of Julius Cæsar in particular. Just as all the military realism and elaborately accurate Balkan local color of 'Arms and the Man" was received in 1894 with incredulous ridicule as mere opera bouffe, so everything in 'Cæsar and Cleopatra,' which is simply dramatized Mommsen or transcribed Plutarch, has been pooh-poohed as fantastic modern stuff of my own, while the few modern topical allusions I have indulged in, including the quotation from Beaconsfield on Syprus, have passed unchallenged as grave Roman history.

"As to Cæsar, even Shakspeare's Cæsar, who is nothing but the conventional tyrant of the Elizabethan stage adapted to Plutarch's Roundhead account of him, would be too modern, too realistic, for some of the New York papers. The fact that Cæsar was a real flesh and blood man and not a statue with a phonograph in its mouth repeating 'I came, I saw, I conquered' and 'Et tu, Brute!' appears to strike the American journalists as a whimsical paradox.

"Cæsar was a very modern man, indeed; first a young man about town, dressed in the height of fashion; then a demagogue like Wilkes or Bradlaugh, with mobs in his pay; then, at 40, discovering that handling a provincial army was child's play to a man accustomed to manipulate Roman mobs; then conqueror and explorer; then, by force of circumstance and gameness for any destiny, political adventurer, gambling with Pompey for the empire of the civilized world, and winning; finally dead and turned to clay, assassinated by the nonconformist conscience.

"The reason Shakspeare belittled him and that no later English dramatist touched this greatest of all protagonists until I saw my chance and took it was simply that Shakspeare's sympathies were with Plutarch and the nonconformist conscience, which he personified as Brutus. From the date of Shakspeare's play onward England believed in Brutus with growing hope and earnestness until the assassination in the [illegible] repeated in Whitehall, and Brutus got his chance from Cromwell, who found him hopelessly incapable, and ruled in Cæsar's fashion until he died, when the nation sent for Charles II. because it was determined to have anybody rather than Brutus. Yet as late as Macaulay and John Morley you find Brutus still the hero and Cæsar still the doubtful character. It was Ibsen who killed him at last with the self-same steel that slew the Tennysonian King Arthur. That left the dramatic field free at last for Cæsar and for Forbes-Robertson.

"Yours faithfully,

G Bernard Shaw

Notes of the Plays and Players.

De Wolf Hopper and his company of Gilbert-Sullivan revivalists will, on Jan. 17, 1915, take a hand in the laudable work of providing Chicago with the lyrical sustenance which has been denied for the season by "our own opera company." Mr. Hopper will follow in the Auditorium the eight weeks' engagement of the Century Opera, and will indulge in the experiment for his visit of selling seats and boxes on the subscription plan which obtains with the Chicago Opera company. So far as is known nothing of the kind has ever yet been tried in this country for a comic opera repertoire. Another departure is that in the Hopper engagement the Chicago Opera company, as the lessee and manager of the Auditorium, will be a partner in the venture and not a mere landlord. All other companies visiting the theaters have rented it for the period of their engagement, assuming all risks and retaining all profits. It is the expectation that Mr. Hopper will be heard in at least three additions to his Gilbert-Sullivan repertoire—"The Sorcerer," "Trial by Jury," and the lovely "Yeomen of the Guard," which has not been sung in Chicago since the season of 1888-89, although it has ever since its premiere held its own with even "The Mikado" in the esteem of London.

John Bunny, who is said to get $1,000 a week when acting as a comic fat man for the photo plays, is one of the very few actual celebrities of the drama in celluloid who went into that calling from a long career in the spoken drama. Most of the pets of the motion picture patrons were either unknown in the theater before taking up the work or else were unconsidered players in minor ventures. As long ago as 1889-90, when the late John A. Hamlin produced "The Fakir," a farce by his son, Harry L. Hamlin, Mr. Bunny was an established comic player in the larger cities, and acted in that piece in support of the late Thomas Q. Seabrooke. He was for many seasons the player of Seth Holcomb in "Way Down East," having originated the part when that play was unsuccessfully tried out in Chicago. He was the Nick Bottom of Miss Annie Russell's revival in 1906-07 of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and is recalled for a performance which quite upset the poetic and romantic balance of that comedy. He rose enough in the esteem of managers to warrant Winthrop Ames' threatening to go to law to force the actor to become a member of the company of the New theater of New York City when that institution was dedicated in 1909.

Mr. Mantle's New York Letter.

deny him if she would for she is his, his, his! Even the husband recognizes the prior claim of so wonderful a lover, and arm in arm the two men leave to make the necessary arrangements.

So, then, do the other personages of the treasured love letter appear—the young Russian is a famous diplomat who has altered the map of Europe for her; as a great artist, a tenor, who has refused a $5,000 fee that he may sing for her alone; and, lastly, as the "bit of drift," a one-armed tramp, hungry and forsaken, but true always and forever to his great love for her.

The awakening is perhaps the happiest moment of the performance. The returned Russian comes to call. He is secretary to a man who has some dealings with the husband. The wife meets him. When they are alone she hangs expectantly on his first avowal of the deep love he always has borne her. But, alas! seven years have dimmed the memory of the real man. He can only recall that there was a boarding house and a pleasant friendship, perhaps a promise of love, between them. But it is nothing. Let it pass. He is more intent on praising the brandy her husband serves.

But surely he went to war? O, yes, he went to war. And was wounded—lost an arm or something? O, no; he was in the commissary department. Then he was not even a soldier? No, he could not be a soldier because—O, fateful irony—the surgeons found he had flat feet!

He was, then, just an ordinary dub after all. Puff! goes the dream lover, and the phantom rival is whistled down the wind. The wife is cured. Even a jealous, irritable, money making husband is a pretty good substitute. And there is good natured laughter on the lips of the wife as she admits it.

The play is superbly acted. Dr. Ditrichstein plays the returned Russian, his first star part, he having this season been elevated to that position by Mr. Belasco, and Laura Hope Crews scores the important success of her career as the wife.

Auditorium—"Funnyland," which would appear to be a miscellaneous entertainment put together with a view of providing a vehicle for John Bunny, who is announced to take a part as actor, singer, dancer, raconteur, mimic, and celebrity. That he qualifies as a celebrity is certain, for his name is, without question, familiar to a far larger number of persons of all ages, lands, races, and tribes than that of any other actor in all the world today. His company, which is assisting him in giving a miscellaneous program, consists in the main of performers who have been tried and not found guilty in the widespread activities of the variety theaters. First time next Saturday afternoon.

How Leo Donnelly Reached Stage.

If manifest destiny played any part in shaping Leo Donnelly's choice of the stage as a profession it was a long time becoming manifest! Donnelly is the actor of the self-satisfied salesman in "Potash and Perlmutter," and was engaged for the part the same day as Barney Bernard was "signed" to play Potash and a day before Alexander Carr was engaged for Perlmutter. Yet Donnelly's career on the stage does not date back as far as the publication of the first of the Montague Glass stories about Potash and Perlmutter, while the seasons as an actor, as distinct from a mere entertainer in the variety theaters, are fewer by three than the seasons since "Potash and Perlmutter" was first put into play form.

LEO DONNELLY

Here are some of the things Donnelly did before he went upon the stage:

Two years on the school ship Saratoga, in which time he virtually went round the world.

Backed a tour of a play called "The [illegible] Trotter," by the late Louis De Lange, after the play had failed twice—once with Maurice Barrymore as the star, and once, two years afterward, with the late William Hoey ("Old Hoss") as the star. Donnelly, who had fallen heir to [illegible], put a quarter of the sum into the play before he learned that it was written to fail.

Built and operated a roadhouse near Philadelphia. Philadelphia was not at the time ready for a roadhouse. Cost to Donnelly, $18,000.

Put a 10 cent cigar on the market. Overboomed it before the factory was ready to deliver the goods, went broke on the advertising, and the cigar, put on sale after the campaign had been forgotten, was neglected. Cost to Donnelly, $16,000. Being able to write, he gave notes for the excess $4,000.

Went to Havana as treasurer of a comic opera company made up of American performers. Of twenty-four chorus girls nineteen left the stage to marry Cuban men of means. Donnelly permitted the principals and the five other chorus girls to go back to the United States, but remained in Havana with an idea of going into business there.

A cablegram from Philadelphia told him of the death of another kinsman and of another bequest—this time $12,000. He paid off the $4,000 in notes, invested the remaining $8,000 in a new automobile oil, and went broke trying to market it.

Became a reporter on the Philadelphia Public Ledger, did well by the work, and stuck to it until in 1906 he was sent to get a story on shoplifting losses by one of the big Philadelphia department stores. The owners refused to talk for print. Donnelly hung around the store for a week, saw much, and then told the owners how they were being robbed, and offered to install a private detective system of his own. They accepted his offer, placed him in charge, paid him $7,500 a year, and then at the end of nine months suggested that he resign because he traced a heavy theft to an intimate friend of one of the firm.

Resigning, Donnelly became the private secretary of the multi-millionaire son of a Philadelphia beer brewer. The brewer's son had as much real use for a secretary as Nebraska has for a navy yard, and looked to Donnelly to attend to the needs of a string of hopeful pugilists whom the millionaire was backing.

At a big mixed entertainment for charity in Philadelphia, Donnelly stepped on to the stage to explain to the audience that Blanche Ring, one of the entertainers, was delayed, and to ask indulgence until the singer arrived. He talked against time for five minutes, improvising, until a signal from the wings notified him that Miss Ring was ready. When he attempted to retire, the audience insisted on an encore. A Keith booking followed.

Donnelly remained a monologue in the varieties until 1911, when he and Jean Havez, the song writer, formed a partnership for the writing of "acts" and "turns" for variety performers. They put out a sign reading: "Fun for Sale," filled $18,000 worth of contracts within the first year, collected less than $7,000, and wrote "Viola Violetta" for Gaby Deslys' second American engagement.

He made his actual debut as an actor in April, 1912, as Sammy Rosenthal in "Ready Money," played another Jewish character the next season in "The Iron Door," and then took up his present part in "Potash and Perlmutter." He is not a Jew, and is the only player of a Jewish character of importance in "Potash and Perlmutter" who is not of the race. His full name is Leo Ignatius Donnelly, and his father regards Robert Emmet as the greatest character in history.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

PALACE.

Al B. White, describing a moving picture play: "The minute he turns his coat lapel back in order to avoid the powder then you know how it will end."

Fisher and Green.

Meeting his business partner on the street: "Sam, I forgot to lock the safe."

"Well, what of it? Ain't we both here?"

"You don't take business seriously enough. That's why our business is going to the dogs. You should share in the responsibilities as well as the profits."

"But when there ain't any profits—vas mit the responsibilities."

"Is your watch going, Louis?"

"No. It went yesterday."

Arguing about their written contract of partnership: "When you wrote out that contract, Sam, why did you leave such a long space between the last item in it and the place where I should sign my name?"

"Suppose I get some good idea afterward?"

In their place of business: "That lady buyer from Chicago is coming today and the most painful thing I have to do is to introduce you as my partner."

"Why not let me introduce you?"

"Ach, business sure is rotten. Nobody ever comes in here except us."

"And I'm about to go out."

"Don't you do it. Every time you go out to get business they sell you something. You don't sell them anything; they always sell you something. Here now only yesterday they sold you an old second hand delivery wagon and what good does a second hand delivery wagon do us when we haven't any horse?"

"Well, I'll go out tomorrow and maybe they will sell me a horse."

Showing their sample garments to the lady buyer from Chicago: "Look at that fine lace on the edge of it."

"What kind of lace is it?"

"Hemstitch."

"Try it on, lady. Now isn't that a creation, Louis?"

"Sure, it's a cremation."

"She looks just like a flower."

"You bet, like a lily of the Lehigh valley."

Aside to his partner: "Let's give her that dress."

"That dress? Why it sells for $105."

"We can put it on the bill some other place, and then, you know, buyers have to be bought."

"Lady buyers? They are honest."

"Sure, you can't buy 'em. Just give 'em a dress or an automobile. Sure lady buyers are honest."

MAJESTIC.

Harry Breen: "'Himalaya', how the name rolls from the lip. Nine-fifteenths of the people don't know what it means and the other seven-eighths can't pronounce it. But 100 B. C. they had not named those mountains. A woman discovered an ostrich one day sitting on some eggs. In that country the natives have the ostriches trained so that they will eat off of your hand or eat off a leg. She watched the bird and thought it was laying an egg. 'O, come here, Henry,' she cried. 'Come and see the ostrich, [illegible] he is.'"

* * *

Emma Carus: "My life has been just one husband after another. But I'm an optimist. An optimist, you know, is a lady who doesn't care what happens just so it doesn't happen to her."

Jarrow: "I did this trick before President Wilson."

"Is that so?"

"Yes; before he was elected."

"I used to do this same trick to a potato."

"Why don't you now?"

"Well, you see, the potato got wise, so I had to cut its eyes out."

GREAT NORTHERN.

O'Connor, Willing, Bentley, and Willing.

John O'Connor: "John D. Rockefeller would give you a million dollars for your appetite."

Larry Willing: "I'll sell it to him for a dime. I'm not using it."

O'Connor: "If you overload your stomach with too much food you'll get peritonitis."

Willing: "I'd rather have that than nothing to eat."

L. Willing to Bunny Willing: "If your brains were dynamite and they happened to explode they wouldn't blow that hat off of your head."

B. Willing: "Is that so? If your head was whittled down to fit your brains you'd be able to wear a peanut shell for a Panama hat."

O'Connor: "Do you drink anything?"

B. Willing: "Yes, anything."

"I want you to take it seriously."

Willing: "That's the way I do take it. Do you drink anything?"

"That's my business."

"Have you any other business?"

Forbes-Robertson's New Leading Woman.

Miss Laura Cowie, the young English leading woman for Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, was born near Aberdeen, Scotland, the same part of the world from which Forbes-Robertson himself hails. Her original intention was to become a dancer, and while studying with this in view she was seen by Sir Herbert Tree and engaged for a two line part in his production of Comyn Carr's version of "Faust." For eighteen months Miss Cowie continued in Tree's company playing minor rôles and understudying Miss Marie Lohr, who was then Tree's leading woman. Miss Cowie was then given the rôle of Anne Boleyn in a revival of Shakespeare's "Henry VIII.," in which such well known players as Arthur Bourchier, Violet Vanbrugh, and Tree appeared. Her success as Anne Boleyn won for her the leading feminine rôles in other of Tree's Shakspearean revivals, as well as important parts in such plays as "Oliver Twist" and "The War God."

After leaving His Majesty's theater Miss Cowie was featured in the English provinces in a play called "Proud Maisie." When George Fawcett produced "The Great John Ganton" in London Miss Cowie was his leading woman. An appearance as Mizzi in "Seven Sisters" followed. Her last important engagement in London was as Hermina in Granville Barker's production in the "new style" of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

With Forbes-Robertson Miss Cowie will act Ophelia in "Hamlet," Maisie in Kipling's "The Light That Failed," the Slavey in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," and Cleopatra in George Bernard Shaw's "Cæsar and Cleopatra." Her appearance with Forbes-Robertson marks her first visit in this country.

MUSIC NOTES

Concerts to Stimulate American Music Draws Many Contestants.

JENNY DUFAU, WHO OPENS CONCERT SEASON TODAY
PHOTO MATZENE

By Ronald Webster.

OUT of the heap of announcements of coming concerts and recitals is one which concerns an orchestra of nine men and a conductor. I think it advertises one of the most important events of the season. The admission charge is 10 cents. The orchestra is self-supporting. It was started, one supposes, as an educational feature of the Chicago Woman's club. To call anything "educational" is a sure way of taking all the possibility of enjoyment from it. It is to be hoped that the woman's club does not insist that it is educational.

Two concerts by this orchestra will be given at Fullerton hall, in the Art institute, at 3 o'clock and 4:15 o'clock respectively this afternoon. The program is:

"Pomp and Circumstance"	Elgar
Overture, "Figaro's Marriage"	Mozart
"Cavatina"	Bohm
Waltz, "Southern Roses"	Strauss
Selection, "I Pagliacci"	Leoncavallo
"Tarantelle"	Moszkowski

Definite announcement is made of Glenn Dillard Gunn's plans for American musical independence. The first of the two popular American programs will be given on Nov. 2 and the second on March 11 in Orchestra hall. Thirty-five pianists are diligently practicing the McDowell concerto (No. 1 in A minor) for piano and orchestra. They will be heard behind a screen on Thursday and Friday of this week and most of them will go home disappointed. One of them will receive a prize of $200 from Charles G. Dawes. That one will play the concerto on Nov. 2.

The program is entirely American. As an example of what may be done with American work Mr. Gunn offered the following:

Overture to "Zenobia"	Coerne
Aria for baritone from "Zenobia"	Coerne
Serenade for orchestra	De Lamarter
Song—"Golden Eyes"	Freer
Song—"Nocturne"	Kramer
Song—"The Pilgrimage"	Dunham
Concerto in A minor	McDowell
"Angelus" (Third symphony)	Hadley
"A Southern Fantasie"	Humiston

"Zenobia" was presented in Bremen in 1905. It has not been performed in this country.

Next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 at the Auditorium theater the Apollo Musical club of 300 singers will give a special performance of Edward Elgar's beautiful choral work "Caractacus." This work was sung a number of years ago by the Apollo club. Four singers of considerable reputation have been engaged for the solo rôles—Marie Sundelius, a Swedish soprano who has filled many important engagements in the east; Paul Althouse, tenor of the Metropolitan opera; Theodore Harrison, bass, of Philadelphia, and Gustaf Holmquist, the well known bass of Chicago. Harrison M. Wild will be the conductor, Edgar Nelson the organist, and the entire Symphony orchestra will furnish the accompaniments.

Two more recitals are announced for Sunday, Nov. 8—Mme. Rosa Olitzka, contralto, and Ludwig Schmidt, violinist, at the Illinois, and Carol Robinson (debut) at the Fine Arts theater.

Elizabeth Wolff, soprano, who created the rôle of Madame Butterfly in this country, gives a recital on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 25, at the Fine Arts theater. She will be assisted by Miss Edna G. Peterson, pianist, and Ridgley Hudson, tenor. Walter H. Rothwell, Mrs. Wolff's husband, and conductor of the now disbanded St. Paul orchestra, will play the accompaniments.

Another concert is that of Mme. Marguerite Matzenauer of the Metropolitan Opera company on Nov. 1 at the Blackstone theater.

The management of the Chicago Symphony have given out the following list of "novelties" to be presented during the coming season of the orchestra. Common gossip says that Scriabine, who is represented, though I know nothing much about him, is one of those who believe that the eye and the ear ought to have more in common than they have at present. Some one of his pieces, if I remember correctly, was presented in London with colored lights, supposed to represent, I think, the color value of the tones. Another of the novelties is a sextet for strings by Schoenberg. That may also be listed, at a guess, among the sensations. At any rate, the list shows that Mr. Stock is willing to experiment, and that is something to be thankful for. Here is the list:

a—Poeme Lyrique, b—Scene Dansante	Glazounow
Overture, "Kaethchen von Heilbronn"	Pfitzner
Ouverture zu Einen Gascognischen Liederspiel	Mandl
Prologue to a Drama	Reger
Ballet suite	Reger
Prometheus	Scriabine
a—In a Summer Garden, b—Two Sketches	Delius
"Music for Orchestra"	Stephan
Symphonic poem, "Ormazd"	Converse
Two entr'actes from "Corregidor"	Hugo Wolf
English and Irish dances	Percy Grainger
"Bamboula," rhapsodic negro dance	Taylor
"Fifine of the Fair"	Bantock
a—Three Nocturnes, b—Gigues	Debussy
Kammer symphony	Sekles
Sextet for strings	Schoenberg
Symphony in C major	Roparts
Symphony in C major	Dukas
Symphony in D major	Mahler
Symphony No. 4	Sibelius
Erste Maerkische suite	Kaun
Fantasie "Une Nuit Sur le Mont Chauve"	Moussorgsky
Suite of dances from "Prince Igor"	Borodin
Symphony in B minor	Liapounow
Symphony in B minor	Volbach
Symphonic poem, "Le Souvenir"	D'Indy

Symphonic poem, "La Mort de Tintagiles"	Loeffler

The New York Symphony orchestra, that of Walter Damrosch, begins its season on Oct. 23. The soloists include most of those to be heard with the Chicago orchestra as well as a number of others. Among them is Ossip Gabrilowitsch, noted because he has not long hair. I think it caught fire once and he had it cut off. That's the story, anyway. The symphony society has been given an endowment of $100,000 by H. H. Flagler, its president.

Leo Slezak, known as the "giant Czech tenor," was refused when he volunteered at Austrian army headquarters. He has taken out his first papers for citizenship in the United States.

* * *

Mme. Jeanne Gerville-Reache, contralto, has issued a self-pronouncing calling card. In brackets is the inscription "Jer-vill Ray-Aah."

The following notice comes from Haensel & Jones: "George Hamlin, tenor of the Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera company, who was in Vienna when the war of the seven nations started, and who was three times under fire, finally made his escape from Europe and landed in Boston. Shortly before the war Mr. Hamlin sang for the kaiser, but it is not thought that the performance of the American tenor in any way hastened hostilities, for the peace loving singer offered War Lord Wilhelm nothing but German Lieder."

The Metropolitan Opera company of New York, after having been the butt of all the prophets in the country, announces now that the season will begin as usual on Nov. 16. M. Gatti Casazza, the general director, will arrive himself shortly. A kind of operatic Noah's ark has been advertised as the means of bringing over those of the company who are still there.

Harry Weisbach, concertmeister of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will be heard in recital in Orchestra hall on Thursday evening, Oct. 29.

* * *

Mrs. Katharine Howard-Ward is to present the organ program at the Sunday Evening club this evening. The numbers will include "Fantasie Symphonique," by Cole; "A Song of Sorrow," by Nevin; "Concert Caprice," by Kreiser, and "Coronation March," by Svendsen. Mrs. Herdien, Mr. Holmquist, and a choir of 800 will sing "Rise, Crowned With Light," by Otis. Mrs. Gannon and the choir will sing Chadwick's "Thou That Sendest Sun and Rain."

The Lighter Side of the War.

By A. B. R.

From the London Sphere: "One thing is certain this year—there will be no difficulty among bonfire committees in deciding who is to have the honor of being burnt in effigy on the 5th of November. There will be one guy über Alles." And yet some still maintain that the English have no sense of humor.

Mme. de Thebes' latest prophecy was to the effect that the German emperor would be killed on Sept. 29, the French would enter Germany on Oct. 29, and that the war would end on Nov. 7. So far no good. Seine Mjestät has been reported considerably alive in East Prussia since Sept. 29.

An enterprising statistician and psychologist has figured that 827,271 persons are daily clipping the dispatches on the war with the end in view of writing a history of "the greatest of all wars." Correlatively he deduces that a certain percentage of these will publish books, that there will be one book agent for every 150 books published, and that every man who boasts an office will lose forty-seven minutes listening to the fine points about the books, and that thus there will be lost to the world in hours more than—well, never mind the number of years.

ART AND ARTISTS.

JANE KUPPENHEIMER

KATHERINE CONROY

PHOTOS BY FREDERICK O. BEMM

FREDERICK H. RAWSON JR.

Miniatures of three children of prominent families, reproduced herewith, form the exhibit of Anna Lynch in the third annual exhibition of the Society of Chicago Miniature Painters, now of the Art institute. Katherine Conroy is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Conroy; Jane Kuppenheimer, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kuppenheimer, and Frederick H. Rawson Jr. one of the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson. Miss Lynch was one of the first miniature painters in the middle states to become a member of the American Society of Miniature Painters. Some of her work, including pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, Gustavus Swift Jr., and M. Haddon MacLean, have been exhibited before. Eighty-one miniatures are exhibited.

By Fabius.

GOING to Ralph Clarkson with the intention of getting a war story about art—a war story which would simmer down to the discussion of whether or not fighting inspires creative work, with possible thrilling details about starved or shot artists—I got nothing of the kind. Mr. Clarkson is back from a trip through Europe.

After the general statement that the war probably will give American artists an added impulse indirectly and through the medium of picture buyers, the conversation drifted around to old masters.

"Old masters" sounds as dry as the paint in them. But the subject proved interesting. "I think it is absurd," he said, according to my recollection, "that museums should cripple themselves by buying an 'old master' at large price, especially if it is of doubtful authenticity."

Another of his sentences was: "They shouldn't make museums into mausoleums."

He did not say that examples of the work of famous historical artists should remain unbought. His point was that instead of paying large sums for third class "old masters," often of doubtful authenticity, collectors should purchase good modern works.

"One thing the war will do," he suggested. "It will release many authentic historical pictures now owned by private persons in Europe. The museums and collectors won't be able to purchase many. There will be opportunity to purchase good pictures."

The venders of fake old masters will also be in their glory. Somehow our business men show generally an astonishing lack of business acumen in their dealings in pictures. Mr. Clarkson related the story which he says has become typical of collectors. "The man came to me and said, 'A week ago I would have asked you to see my 'old masters.' I now invite you to view a fine collection of fake old masters.'"

Sometimes the frauds have been detected—with severe irritation to the feelings of private families—when men have left their collections to a museum.

"Out of 400 pictures left to the Metropolitan in New York," I remember Mr. Clarkson saying, "the art committee accepted four, and they were doubtful about two of them."

From Mr. Clarkson I learned that John E. D. Trask, the director of fine arts of the Panama-Pacific exposition, has been in Chicago and is optimistic. Mr. Trask has most of his exhibits here. He sees the possibility of making Americans purchase American works of the best kind instead of the doubtful historical things they have been collecting.

All these opinions are Mr. Clarkson's in one sense. He is not to be held responsible, however, for their manner of expression, which is, undeniably, not his.

A circular issued by a committee of American artists tells of the condition of artists in Paris. It appears that the Societe des Artistes Francais, the Societe Nationale, and other organizations have formed a brotherhood, under the presidency of M. Leon Bonnat to give relief to the families of French painters, sculptors, architects, engravers, and other art workers who have gone to war. An appeal is made by the American committee by virtue of the debt so many Americans owe to Paris and Parisian teachers. Subscriptions are being asked for. William Bailey Faxon is treasurer of the fund and William A. Coffin, 58 West Fifty-seventh street, executive officer. In the list are Childe Hassam, Charles Dana Gibson, Edward W. Redfield, and many others.

50 Years in Chicago

Everything Known in Music

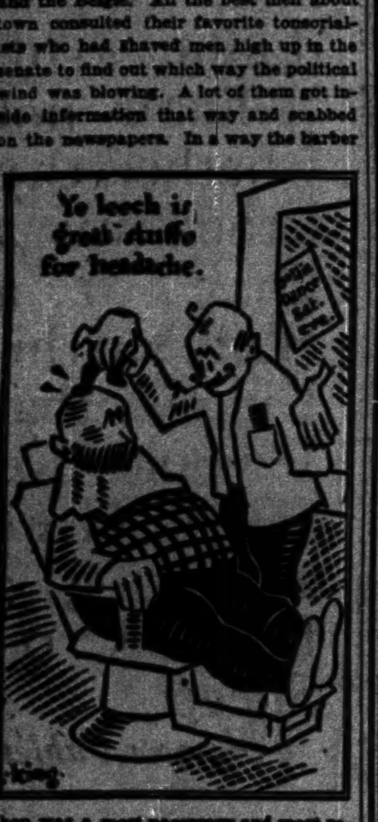
Consider, Children, the Barber Pole.

By Burton Rascoe.

BARBERING, it must be regretted is the most slandered of the learned professions. Barbers, once more venerated than physicians, are become pet subjects for the wicked art of the cartoonists. Merely to mention the word "barber" in some circles is to provoke uproariously undignified haw-haws. The word is become a synonym for a loquacious, oiled, and perfumed individual with curly hair in which hangs a comb in dire need of a dentist.

Barbering, it is presumed, has some vague and subtle something about its seriousness that appeals especially to the ridiculous. Maybe Monsieur Bergson, author of "Laughter," some time after he gets through bawling out the Germans, will enlighten us on the point. In the meantime it behooves us to consider the importance the profession of barbery has in time past been held by society; and forthwith deprecate and abhor the insipid persons who think barbers are funny.

In Rome as far back as 454 A. D. barber shops served as clubrooms where there were serious discussions over whether Claudia Vespasius or Lydia DDecimus was the niftiest dancer in town, whether it was true, as stated in the morning Papyrus, that the emperor had humming bird brains for luncheon yesterday, and whether Etruria would join its allies in accordance with the treaty in the war against the Gauls and the Belgæ. All the best men about town consulted their favorite tonsorialists who had shaved men high up in the senate to find out which way the political wind was blowing. A lot of them got inside information that way and scabbed on the newspapers. In a way the barber shop was a most necessary and most respected institution in those days.



Ye leech is great stuffe for headache.
King

Later on surgery was dignified until it became a part of the profession of barbering. Some of the tonsorialists who had condescended to watch the application of leeches for the cure of anything from rheumatism, chickenpox, and lumbago to bunions, got a few leeches and set up a little blood drawing business on the side, about in the manner in which bathrooms and cigar stands have been added to the barber shops in these later days. It didn't take much time or a great outlay of money and the returns made it worth while. Nearly everybody who got shaved had something the matter with him, so instead of asking for hair tonic, as customers who are flush do now, he would say: "I guess you can put the leech on my knee. I slipped on the pavement yesterday and now I got a charley horse."

Pretty soon the art of shaving and the art of dressing wounds went hand in hand. Surgery became a respectable occupation for even the most fastidious barbers. The barber surgeon set up a striped pole (yes, the same as they have now) in front of his shop as an announcement that the deft manipulator of the razor within was prepared to amputate warts, lance boils, dress sabre cuts, and bandage black eyes upon all occasions, provided the patient wait until ordeals on chins or heads were over.

The barber pole was highly significant. The fillet around the pole indicated the ribbon used in bandaging the wounds. At its base was a receptacle (now out of use) to indicate the basin which received the blood of the patient. The ball on top of the pole was warning that if the customers didn't use the barber's hair lotion they would soon be as bald as a doorknob. (Historians, however, are not certain on this point.)

Henry VIII. put a quietus on the barbers' side line and enacted that surgeons become a part of the barber shop help, like bootblacks are now. He hated to see good barbers wasting their time on bandaging arms, which any person could do. So he ordained that barbers confine themselves to minor blood operations and the drawing of teeth as a side line, while their flunkies, the surgeons, did the routine work. The surgeons were prohibited to do shaving or barbery of any sort under severe penalty.

George II. in 1745 spilled the beans for the surgery-barbery corporation. Several obnoxious individuals who had been doing surgical operations in competition with the barbers did some new stunts with the surgeon's knife and got George's ear. They knocked the barbers' work, said their operations for the removal of corns were crude stuff, and that George ought to get hep to himself and start a new profession of surgery in distinction to barbery. George fell for it and dissolved the combination. The surgeons got it back on them for being so fresh not so many years afterward, when fellows calling themselves chiropodists sprang into existence and declared that no man should have his corns removed by anybody except experts at the business.

Barbers are undeniably serious minded individuals. They are never so talkative as they are reported; few of them make slips with their razors and cut their customers' ears, and they are as dignified as a [illegible] of pallbearers when they are at work. They make as much money as the average lawyer or physician. They never have faces any more ludicrous than the average male of the species.

Now, then, where does all the humor that most people attach to barbers and barbering come in? I can't figure it out.

This Sale Is in Charge of Our Salespeople

By Whom It Was Organized

The management of our business for this occasion is in the hands of a committee of salesmen and women, elected by the selling forces from their own ranks. The usual executive staff for the time being has been completely superseded.

Our salespeople proposed this event in the beginning—and they enter into it heart and soul. It is their great chance to command recognition. That their effort is worth while is evidenced by the fact that two of our most successful buyers and several promising assistant buyers won their first spurs as captains—elected from the selling ranks behind the counters to conduct a Progressive Sale. Their advancement is evidence to our people that merit is the thing that tells in this establishment.

Your interest and profit in this event lie not alone in seeing how men and women from the ranks accept and carry off a great responsibility. They lie also in the most powerful savings on every personal need of the season—on every requirement for the home.

We commend to you a study of the offerings that fill this announcement. They are selections of goods made by the salespeople themselves and they know better than anybody else just what the public wants. Furthermore, we are sincere in saying that the prices are the lowest we ever saw attached to merchandise of like quality.

"The Blind Man and the Whelp."

"A blind man was wont, on any animal being put into his hands, to say what it was. Once they brought him a Wolf's Whelp. He felt it all over and, being in doubt, said: 'I know not whether thy father was a Dog or a Wolf, but this I know, that I would not trust thee among a flock of Sheep'."

—Aesop's Fables.

There is no excuse for newspapers allowing wolfish advertisers to range among their flocks of readers.

The medical faker, the loan shark, the fire sale swindler, the vendors of rotton oil and mining stocks, bear the marks of the wolf so conspicuously that even a blind editor should be able to identify them.

The Tribune rejects vast quantities of suspicious advertising. And that is why Tribune readers patronize so freely and liberally those whose advertising The Tribune does accept.

FOR MOTORIST AND MOTORCYCLIST

By High

Inquiries concerning motorists, motorcyclists, etc., will be answered. Address letters to "High Speed," care of "The Chicago Sunday Tribune."

MOTOR tourists who have the idea of seeing America next year, and who probably will journey overland to the Panama exposition, will find much improvement in the western roads, with a number of routes to select from, and with most of them well marked from one end to the other.

The motorists of Iowa have been energetic in enlisting the efforts of the business men of the state with a view of making and marking the roads that cross the state from east to west and from north to south, so that there is now a closely meshed network of highways open to motorist tourists, with good accommodations all along the various routes.

Naturally enough, the condition of the Iowa roads will divert motor travel from Illinois roads, particularly that going southwest into Texas and Oklahoma and over the southern route to the coast. To show what the Iowa people have done, Robert N. Carson, president of the Iowa division of the Chicago, Kansas City and Gulf highway, writes THE TRIBUNE as follows:

Inasmuch as I note you are frequently called upon for routing information, I am taking the liberty of sending you some data. I particularly desire to call your attention to the Red Ball route, a north and south highway which intersects numerous east and west highways in this state, also in Minnesota and Missouri. This route, motorists have said, is the best marked highway in the United States—that it is the plainest marked—the bright red ball over a background of white, three feet wide, on telephone poles.

Tourists from Chicago for the Twin Cities should be routed as follows: Chicago to Sterling, Ill., over Lincoln highway; Sterling to Davenport, Ia., over the Rock River Valley route (well marked with the R. R. V. R.). Then from Davenport to Iowa City over the famous River to River road, marked with the "R." At Iowa City the Red Ball route is taken, 300 miles to St. Paul or Minneapolis. A number of larger towns are located on the Red Ball route.

The distance from Chicago to Iowa City, via the route mentioned in my letter, is 281 miles, as follows: Chicago to Davenport, 173 miles; Davenport to Iowa City, 58; total, 281 miles.

There is a fine stretch of road from Davenport to Iowa City, fifty-eight miles, and racers have made the run in one hour and twelve minutes. I have made it frequently in one hour and forty-five minutes. This is a section of the River to River road. It will also be a section of the Chicago, Kansas City, and Gulf highway, marked with letter in black. This will be the shortest through marked route from Chicago to Kansas City.

They are progressive and aggressive in Iowa City, as a letter from E. S. Browning, a good roads enthusiast, will show:

We would like to call your attention to a new road, known as the Lincoln cutoff, which leads from the Lincoln highway, five miles west of Lowden, to the River to River road at Iowa City.

It is a marked road all the way and in excellent condition. By using this cutoff the tourist saves twenty-one and three-tenths miles between Chicago and Omaha, travels through a section of the state with four times the population to be found on the Lincoln highway, and has an opportunity to see many more points of real interest.

There is no better marked road in the state than the River to River road, and the saving in distance, together with the more numerous points of interest, appeals to every one.

Those tourists who are traveling over that section of the country covered by the Lincoln highway will be glad to know that the first section of the newly improved road in Indiana has been opened for traffic, this being in the neighborhood of Elkhart. It is stated that 75 per cent of the road from Omaha to Cheyenne is now well graded and so maintained with split log drags, the roads drying within six hours after a two inch rainfall. New grading is being done in Nebraska, and, in fact, all parts west of the Missouri river.

It is proposed that the entire country on the Lincoln highway celebrate its anniversary Oct. 31. The Lincoln Highway association is arranging for a patriotic program from one end of the country to the other, which will embrace automobile parades, concerts, patriotic addresses, sports, and other features to attract the people of the neighboring country to show them the work that has been done and what will be done in the future to provide a highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific and to make a monument to the martyred president.

Queries and Answers.

"I have been told that you publish maps of different automobile routes. We are particularly interested in the route from here to Jacksonville, Fla. A map giving the route from Louisville, Ky., to Jacksonville, Fla., would be sufficient. If you have such maps I would be glad to receive a copy. J. F. PENNELL,
"Berrien Springs, Mich."

"I have taken THE TRIBUNE for twenty-five years, and this is my first offense in asking for information. I am up against it now and want all the information you can give me. I expect to drive from here to Jacksonville, Fla. I am of the opinion I must drive east to get on the Montreal to Miami highway. Any information about highways from here to Jacksonville will be appreciated.
"FRANK L. BILL, Urbana, Ill."

"Please give the best route from Beardstown, Ill., to Jacksonville, Fla., and the distance.
"J. N. CRUSE, Beardstown, Ill."

"Your route and map out of Chicago in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE was a good one, and I have preserved it. Will you please print the best route from Chicago to Tampa, Fla. I will start on that trip in a short time with my car from Chicago.
"SIGHTSEER, Dwight, Ill."

"Will you please advise me if there is a well traveled automobile route from Chicago to Tampa, and if there is any choice of routes. I would be glad to have such information as you can give me. I contemplate such a trip by Nov. 1, and will be glad if I can get in touch with any person who has made this trip.
"B. E. B., Chicago."

There are two routes from Chicago to southeastern points directly to Florida. The first is by way of Indianapolis, Louisville, Nashville, Atlanta, and to the coast at Savannah. Owing to the fact that this road is not heavily traveled, particularly in Tennessee, and is exceedingly hilly, with numerous stretches of bad roads, the Automobile Blue Book advises tourists to go from Chicago direct over the road through South Bend, Kendallville, Bryan, Napoleon, and Bowling Green to Cleveland, thence to Pittsburgh. The road suggestion from this point on is through Uniontown, Cumberland, and Hagerstown, and then south through Winchester, Staunton, Roanoke, Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Camden, Columbia, and Augusta to Savannah. This road is about 280 miles longer than the one through Nashville, but is used almost exclusively by easterners traveling to the south. There is better accommodation, and all in all it is the road recommended.

"Please let me know the name and address of the manufacturer who sells the cheapest and best automobile theft preventing lock which is attachable to any make of car. R. S. K., Detroit."

THE TRIBUNE cannot pass upon the merit of any article, and, besides, there are so many such devices that it would be impossible to tell what is best suited for your car. Such articles are carried by automobile supply houses in large quantities and a salesman can easily tell you what is most applicable to your machine.

"Will you please send me an automobile route from Chicago to Highland Park? I wish to go through the ravines on the way, but want to get the best roads possible. A few days ago I was going to Highland Park and struck some miserable roads, and thought possibly there was a good road there and sometimes taking in ravines.
"J. C. F., Chicago."

Sheridan road, with the exception of a few spots, is good all the way from Lincoln park to Highland Park and passes through all of the pretty scenery on the lake shore. The road is signboarded most of the way, but is so well traveled that it is almost impossible to go astray. You will strike some rather rough going in the neighborhood of north Wilmette and Kenilworth, but these are the only two points.

"I am a steady reader of THE TRIBUNE and would like to take an automobile ride from Woodstock to Chicago. Will you please give me the best route and state if the roads are good for automobile travel. I should also like the distance between towns. J. B., Woodstock, Ill."

Leave Woodstock in Dietz street, turning in Jefferson street, and then in Calhoun and Madison streets, taking the direct road into Ridgefield and straight through to Crystal Lake and Algonquin. At Algonquin keep straight ahead, cross the river to the first cross road, with a schoolhouse at the corner. Turn right or straight south into Elgin. At Elgin take Grove avenue, National street, and Villa street, which will take you directly into Chicago through Maywood and Oak Park. The distance is about sixty-two miles.

"We intend driving to Elmore, Mich. If you can publish the best route to Kalamazoo it will be considered a favor by a constant reader of THE TRIBUNE and one who never before has asked a favor.
"A. W. V., Chicago."

The best road, although possibly a little bit longer, is to go through South Chicago and Hammond to the Ridge road, then directly east to Hobart, Valparaiso, and Laporte to South Bend. From here take the road through Niles, Dowagiac, Decatur, and Paw Paw into Kalamazoo. It is 106 miles to South Bend and seventy miles from South Bend to Kalamazoo. The road is good all the way with the exception of that portion of the Lincoln highway east of Laporte, which is exceedingly rough.

"I think the Saxon car is powered with a Continental motor. At least it runs quietly, and I believe it is a good motor. Is this your opinion? Please publish in THE TRIBUNE the address of the company making it. S. ANON, Chicago."

The Saxon car is equipped with a Continental motor, made by the Continental Motor company of Detroit. The Saxon car is also made at Detroit, Mich.

"Please give me the best route and condition of road from Chicago to Rockford. F. H. H., Chicago."

Follow Lake street through Maywood and Melrose Park into the Elgin road, which will take you through Addison and Ontarioville. At Elgin cross the river and go west in Highland avenue, which is the north leg of the Elgin road race course, passing through McQueens, Marengo, and Belvidere, straight into Rockford, the distance being eighty-eight miles. The road is good from Chicago to Elgin and some distance beyond, but for several miles east of Belvidere it is badly cut up and rough.

"Please give me the best route from Chicago to Marquette, Mich., and the condition of the roads. I will be more than obliged if you let me know as soon as possible. B. F. LASHER, Elgin, Ill."

Follow Sheridan road from Chicago through Evanston, Highland Park, Lake Forest, Waukegan, Kenosha, and Racine to Milwaukee. From here branch off northwesterly to Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Appleton, Green Bay, and Oconto to Powers, which is 325 miles. At Powers you would turn west to Iron Mountain, thirty miles, and then north to Marquette, which is seventy-eight miles more. You will find good roads all the way to Powers with the exception of a stretch in the neighborhood of Big Sumaco, and from Iron Mountain to Marquette the roads are none too good.

Motorcycle Show Opens Tomorrow.

By Reed L. Parker.

THOUSANDS of dealers are eagerly awaiting the opening tomorrow of the third annual motorcycle, bicycle, and accessories show at the First regiment armory. The many important developments in the line of new models and the question of prices all will be taken up by the dealers. The show will continue until the 17th. Manufacturers promise the greatest exhibition since the first three years ago.

A custom that has been prevalent in past years has been discontinued this year; that is the announcing of models two to three months previous to the opening of the show. This year the dealers have been kept in the dark as far as the 1915 models are concerned and are anxiously awaiting the opening. Only a few makers have revealed their 1915 models, but if glimpses of these are to be taken as samples there will be some important changes in the trade.

The armory has been beautifully decorated for the occasion. The entire floor space has been apportioned and the booths and exhibit space have been railed off. More than 100 manufacturers will be represented.

One new device that has never been shown will be the three speed device. This is a series of gears for the transmission of power and the regulation of speed. It enables the motorcyclist to vary his speed from low to intermediate and high. There will be exhibits from all parts of the country.

Several special nights have been arranged. Wednesday will be ladies' night, on which night they will be admitted free. Thursday will be "Safety First" night. Friday will be devoted to the Federation of American Motorcyclists.

A test of a Rayfield carburetor on a 1915 Overland was made last week. The carburetor was tested for economy, acceleration, low throttling, speed, and for hill climbing ability, without any change in the adjustment. From a standing start the car attained a speed of thirty miles in 12 1-5 seconds. On economy the official test showed the car ran 24.2 miles on a measured gallon of gasoline. The gasoline being the ordinary grade of 58 test.

F. E. Edwards' report showed the car throttled to three miles on high gear and quickly accelerated to forty miles per hour. Charles Merz of Indianapolis, who was at the wheel, took the car at Hubbard's Hill and climbed from a standing start to a speed of eighteen miles an hour at the top. He then returned to the bottom of the hill and starting at twelve miles an hour on high gear finished at eighteen miles. The official weight of the car, fully equipped and carrying four passengers, was 3,620 pounds.

With approximately one-half its 7,500 mile sealed bonnet reliability test completed and its engine running even more sweetly than when the car was dispatched from the city hall, Chicago, on Sept. 28, by Superintendent of Police James Gleason, the Mitchell light four high speed motor automobile is swinging westward from the Blue Ridge mountain district, with Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Mississippi river valley cities as its nightly destination points. So well has the car responded to the driving of Pilots Frank Zirbes and Ray Barnet on the long hard grind through Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, the New England, and Atlantic seaboard states, with never a skip or miss that might have jeopardized the seals attached to the bonnet at the start of the thirty day reliability task of 250 miles or more each day, that the drivers have wired the engineer and designer, J. W. Bate of the Mitchell-Lewis Motor company, they are sorry the test was not made a nonmotor task.

Among the distinguished Americans who have volunteered for automobile ambulance service in the war zone is Robert Bacon, former American ambassador to France. He visited the headquarters of the Packard Motor Car company in Paris to purchase a car for American ambulance service use. R. N. Goode, the manager, expressed his desire to provide a car for ambulance service without charge, and to drive it himself. He immediately had a car equipped for the work. The first job was a dash for Collommiers with Mr. Bacon and two doctors to get a wounded English general. Mr. Bacon in a small car furnished by the French government has since been accompanying Goode's ambulance on its various trips to rescue wounded warriors.

One of Good's assistants, named Clark, has left for voluntary service with the Third army signal corps, driving one of the cars formerly operated in connection with the European rental service. His bunkmate is Baron Henri de Rothschild, who volunteered for service in the English army as chauffeur.

Intimate glimpses back of the war curtain of Paris are in a letter just received by the Packard Motor Car company at Detroit from R. N. Goode, manager of the Packard Motor Car company of Paris, dated Sept. 6. The letter reached America via London. Goode writes:

Your cable to insure safety of the office staff first came this morning and shows you feared capture of Paris by the Germans. We have been too busy to worry over such an outcome, but are taking care of the men, and no one need stay who does not insist.

For several days we had German aeroplanes over the office every day. One was plainly steering for the Eiffel tower. We jumped into a car and raced for the slope of the Trocadero, from where we watched it circle while machine guns, rifles, and cannon barked all around. It was too high up, and soon flew off chased by a French machine. It was brought down just outside the city.

Road travel is intensely interesting. Returning from Bordeaux this morning we saw streams of refugees camped along the way, people from the northern provinces, with nothing but their clothing and bedding. At the entrance and exit of each town and at railway crossings one must show his papers.

The roads are closed at night. You can't buy a can of gasoline within 150 miles of Paris.

There must have been a car ditched or abandoned every five miles all the way to Bordeaux. The rush is over now, but for four days it was a panic. Paris taxicabs were jogging along as far as Bordeaux, loaded with trunks and various belongings.

Paris is rapidly being hemmed in by trenches and barriers. Only three or four gates are open to carts and automobiles. Before each gate frowns a barricade of cobblestones.

It is my idea to keep the cars running as long as we can get permits to circulate. All arrangements are made, in case the Germans get into the city, to place seals on our premises, putting them under protection of the American embassy. All Americans will be thus protected.

Motor trucks undoubtedly get the hardest use, and often the greatest abuse, of any kind of motor vehicle.

The strain on the wheel, axle and transmission bearings is enormous as they bump along, heavily laden, over rough pavements.

Hyatt Quiet Bearings, with their flexible spiral rollers, cushion road shocks—absorb vibration, reducing noise—tend to keep gears and shafts in alignment and relieve the surrounding mechanism of undue strain.

Two books, one about motor car bearings in general for prospective purchasers, the other for automobile owners, will be sent on request.

Real Riding Comfort

NEW underslung rear springs make the Overland one of the easiest and most comfortable riding cars in the world.

Being unusually long and of a new underslung design these rear springs have unusual flexibility.

The Overland type of rear springs is illustrated above.

See how the springs are placed under the axle; that they are long, have a very wide opening, and are of generous dimensions. Notice that the frame is dropped which makes possible a much lower hung and more graceful body. The road clearance is not affected.

The wide opening of the springs permits great up-and-down play—the maximum of flexibility.

These springs are unusually long; in fact are longer, in proportion to the wheel base, than the springs used on most all of the highest priced cars. This means a much more cushioned action.

The Overland swivel seat gives absolutely free movement of the springs, prevents binding and reduces possibility of breakage.

In short the exceptional elasticity of the Overland underslung rear springs makes the car ride with perfect ease and absolute smoothness under all conditions.

Shock absorbers are useless.

The 1915 Overland has grace, style, a beautiful finish, smooth riding qualities and every modern comfort and convenience. It comes complete.

Our dealer will be glad to demonstrate its merits at any time and place you appoint.

Right off the Reel

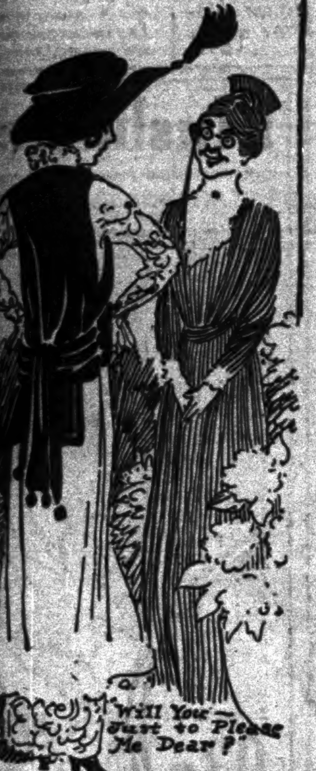
The Love Affairs of Peggy

[Copyright: 1914: By The Tribune Company.]

This episode contains, besides Peggy, a dictionary, a suffragist, a parrot, and several other things. Do you think it will make an interesting reel? If not, tell us. What do you think of the series anyway? And whom do you vote for as "Peggy"?

DESPITE the fact that Bess had told him I was strong minded, Elliott Holt (sounds like a made up name, and it is, for after I am gone, journal, if anybody comes rummaging into you to get their curiosity gratified they'll be fooled) began to devote himself to me. I think—he's a lawyer, you know—he took me up at first as a study. He probably thought: "Behold! Here is a dual personality. I'll look her up and make notes on her in the margin of my mind, to which, if ever it is needful, I can refer." So he began being nice to me—and I was nice back.

Not that I liked the creature. Heavens, no! But it peeved Bess so to see that her false words had had, apparently, so little effect. So I looked my prettiest and smiled my sweetest and counted ten before I answered him when he asked me did I think it was Shakspeare or Bacon and my views on vacuum. Privately, when I asked mother what about vacuum, she responded: "The only vacuum I know anything about is what is not included in the ingredients of that dinner the man at the door bamboozled me into buying. There probably is such a thing, but, pshaw! Run and get me the carpet sweeper, Peggy!" So that was all I got out of her. Dad merely grinned when I broached the subject to him and remarked I could search him. So I found myself much in the dark and obliged to only smile mysteriously when young Mr. Holt evinced a mad desire to be told something along this line.



"Will You—Just to Please Me Dear?"

But he was lovely to me, even if he was using me as a sort of clinic. He sent me perfectly adorable flowers and boxes of the yum-yummiest candy you ever ate in your life. I shall never forget Bess' expression the day she sampled a piece and asked where did I get it, and I told her. Har har! Life with all its little drawbacks is sweet!

Mother and dad liked him fine. They catalogued him as an intelligent young man with a family tree. I asked them why they didn't call him a monkey and be done with it, to which remark they eyed me severely and told me I was becoming too facetious for my age. O, la! It's a parentally unappreciative century. [Journal, that is some phrase! I'll borrow it when I write my book.]

One day he asked me if I wouldn't come with him to see his aunt.

"She is an ardent ultra feminist," he said, "and I know would love to know you. I have told her about you and she is so interested."

"O," I said. "Is she? What did you say she was?" He repeated.

"O, yes," I said. "Please excuse me just a minute."

I tore to the library. The word is probably in the dictionary, but I haven't been able to find it yet. However, she is what she is and I went with him to call, all tucked up in my new fall suit.

I thought she looked a little disappointed when she saw me, and I suddenly did feel all fussed up, for she was dressed as plain as plain could be, with not a sign of a furbelow or a touch of color. But she was nice and cordial. She did most of the talking, for, after she had asked me several things about which, journal, I had never even heard, I decided that [illegible] silence was my cue and I took it.

I entered the conversation monosyllabically. Thus:

"Too true!
"Ah!
"MM-mm-mm!
"Of course.
"No!"

And so on ad infinitum, said she, lapsing into Latin—land knows what it means!

Just as I was leaving she clapped her hand on my shoulder.

"My dear," she said, "I almost forgot to ask you something which has been in my mind ever since Elliott has spoken of you and your advanced mind. In connection with our feminist club we have organized a young women's auxiliary, and I would like you at our next meeting to read a paper on 'Shall the Mothers of Men Be Rolling Stones?' Will you—just to please me, dear?"

I don't know what made me do it, journal, but—I promised! And she beamed upon me, and Elliott held up his head with a "look what I've found" expression and tucked me into the automobile with respect and deference. I might be strong minded but, believe him, it was something to know a girl who could read a paper on "Shall the Mothers of Men Be Rolling Stones?" Didn't I know what he was thinking? Just couldn't I tell? Why, his expression just oozed it!

I felt delightfully important—until I found myself alone in my room. Then cold fear gr-r-ripped me. Me—I—was to read a paper before a lot of women on—ye gods, "Shall the Mothers of Men Be Rolling Stones?" Well, should they? And why in the world sh-should or sh-sh-shouldn't they? Oo-oo-oo-ooo (meaning cold chill, journal), what should I do? I couldn't write the paper in the first place, and I'd be scared to death to read it in the second and—br-rr-rr-rr! O, what should I do! Woozily I debated.

Ask mother? Never! If I did that woman would have something on me the rest of my life. Not one of my grandchildren but would have the story handed down to 'em. Ask Bess? Well, I should just guess not! Play sick? That would do me no good. Elliott's aunt would merely get up and announce that owing to my unfortunate illness the reading of my paper on "Shall the Mothers of Men Be Rolling Stones?" would be postponed until the next meeting. And, journal, I simply couldn't be sick forever—unless I went to an insane asylum or a sanitarium or something. I might get into the first all right, which wouldn't be fun, but I couldn't get into the second, which might be nice on account of the disgustingly robust condition that is mine. I heaved a sigh. I would have to go through with it. If I fell—let me fall. So I went to work.

I looked up everything with the word "roll" in it. Of course I would start my paper by saying "A rolling stone gathers no moss." That was a good lead. Well, then what should I say? The things with "roll" in didn't give me any ideas. So I went on the "stone," trail, and, failing there, I read up on everything I could think of referring to mothers. But I couldn't find a single link. There were mothers; things that rolled, including the ocean, bread, thunder, and false hair; and stones of every variety. But whether or not the mothers of men should be rolling stones, I could not find out.

On the Thursday afternoon before the fatal Saturday when the paper was supposed to be ready, when mother and the maid were out and I sat in the hammock on the side porch weeping into the dictionary, an auto stopped at the door and honked. I wiped my nose and eyes and crouched behind the vines. No good. Elliott had gotten a glimpse of my dress and in a minute he came up the steps.

"It's a scrumptious day! Come for a ride, Peggy! Why—honey girl, what's the matter?" I gulped and tried to be dignified, but I was too far gone. So I did then just what I felt like doing—picked up the dictionary and slammed it through the vines out into the yard and sobbed, glaring after it:

"I don't care—the nasty old thing! I'm not strong minded—I'm weak mindeder than anybody I know. I don't know if the mothers of men shall be rolling stones or not, and, what's more, I don't care! And you can march straight over and tell your aunt. So there!"

I started to march into the house, but something big and broad and gently heaving stopped me. It was Elliott, and he heaved because he was laughing so hard. He put his arms around me and whispered things to me I shan't even tell you, journal. Some of 'em though he repeated to dad and mother when they came upon us unexpected like. Mother grabbed me and wept over me and dad said sort of huskily while he shook Elliott's hand.

"We like you—but she's pretty young!"

"O, think of his family tree!" I pleaded.

The three of them laughed, and, just like she had some sense, Polly squawked through the window:

"Home rule for Ireland! Poor little cuss!"

The Voice of the Movie Fans.

Dear Miss Tinee: Being a reader of your paper, I thought I would write you a few lines on what I think is the cause of so much crime in this city and other places. I think the moving pictures are a great deal to blame, as I think they are crime breeders. They show how easy it is to crack a safe and to hold up and kill and kidnap young girls and many more things that certainly must have some impression on the mind of the young and even older people. If they would show clean plays, good scenery, and other things more fit for people to see the moving picture business would be more pleasing to people.

BLANCHE E. BURLINGAME.

Dear Miss Tinee: I read in your "kicks from movie fans" an article from a gentleman who objected to kissing. In my opinion, a love scene would not be complete without at least one, but I agree with the movie censors that "a three foot film is long enough," and what is objected to most is "mush." Possibly the greatest reason for the popularity of "Broncho Billy" and Warren Kerrigan is that they are never "mushy," in the films anyway. With them it is either given in a respectful manner or left to your imagination, to which I can see no reasonable objection. However, my particular objection is that in nearly every instance stenographers sit in an uncomfortable position and take dictation with their books in their hands. I have been in the business ten years and never did it myself or saw any other stenographer do it. Otherwise, I feel all right. A. L. M.

Dear Miss Tinee: I wish to register a "vurry" serious objection to the music doled out to us in some of the moving picture theaters. I was recently compelled to leave a house where splendid pictures were being shown because the discords perpetrated by the man at the piano nearly made me jump out of my skin. If they will give us music let it be music, not caterwauling.

NOT A DYSPEPTIC.

Ruth Stonehouse

WE have with us today Ruth Stonehouse, the popular little leading woman of the Essanay company's eastern studio. Miss Stonehouse, who is 21 years of age, was born in Denver, Colo., and the early years of her life—the earlier ones—were spent in the west. Her schooling she received at Monticello academy. Before becoming a "movie" actress she was a professional dancer and appeared in vaudeville.

"I like pictures a lot better than the stage, though," Miss Stonehouse says emphatically, "and I'm perfectly fascinated with my work. I like tragedy leads best, but lately I've been appearing in all sorts of leading parts. My favorite photo-play and also the one in which I think I was best was "The Hour and the Man." I rather liked myself in "Her Trip to New York."

The hobbies of this little fair haired actress are oriental rugs, pictures, and Japanese curios. Her favorite book is Washington Irving's "Sketch Book," and the sports she likes best are horseback riding, fishing, baseball and—hearken—shooting!

"I'm married," she acknowledges demurely, "and am fond of my husband (He's Joe Roach, the scenario writer), and I believe in national censorship of photo-plays." Miss Stonehouse and her husband have a cunning apartment near the studio and declare they find housekeeping great sport! On the whole, girls, I think we like her! Don't we?

E. S. and T. K.: The James Morrison you refer to was located in New York the last I heard of him. I have no information regarding his age. Earle Williams is still with the Vitagraph company. You're welcome.

MRS. SMITH: Since your club is so interested I am sorry not to be able to give you the information you wish regarding Ben Wilson's private affairs. I understand that Crane Wilbur has been a grass widower for a short time.

M-512: The "Cutey" part you refer to was taken by Wallie Van. Lillian Walker says she is not married. She is in her early twenties.

H. S.: The main offices of the Mutual company, of which the Keystone is a branch, are located at 29 Union square, New York; 1600 Broadway is the address of the Universal company.

M. M.: You're right. Kathlyn Williams played in "The Spoilers." No, she and William Farnum are not related. Nor do she and Mr. Santschi always play together.

JEAN M.: Alice Joyce is married to Thomas Moore. I don't know their ages. Too bad!

AUDREY K.: No, I don't think anything has happened to Earle Williams. His studio address is care of the Vitagraph company, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. You're welcome.

BESS: Yes, Arthur Johnson's smile is vurry sweet.

PINS AND NEEDLES: I don't know whether or not Florence La Badie answers letters, but I do know that she wouldn't mind having you write to her. Address her in care of the Thanhouser studio, New Rochelle, N. Y. I don't know why all the women are crazy about J. Warren Kerrigan. None of them ever told me. He's mighty good looking, I admit.

L. F.: In order to pronounce the name of Bessie Eyeton correctly, pretend her eye weighs a ton and say eye and ton together. I don't know whom you mean.

PEARLINE: My mother doesn't allow me to give my pictures away.

SHIRLEY: Bessie Learn of the Edison company took the part you mention. Yes, she's still with that company, but has been abroad. You're welcome.

MOVIE FAN: Hello, 13 years old! A letter addressed to Kathlyn Williams in care of the Selig company, 20 East Randolph street, Chicago, will reach her. If you're pining for an answer, better enclose a self-addressed and stamped envelope. This advice costs you nothing.

ANXIOUS: A stamped and self-addressed envelope will bring you a complete list of all the producing companies.

STANLEY J.: This is too much! Not even for you will I consent to clamber over the family trees of the stars! I am no tracer.

K. W.: Bessie Eyton isn't married. She has never told me her age. I don't know how old Kathlyn Williams is nor am I informed regarding the other question you ask regarding her. Why don't you write and ask the lady? Her address is care of the Selig company, 20 East Randolph street, Chicago.

PEARLE D.: For a stamped and self-addressed envelope I'll send you the information you request. Gladly!

WINNIE S.: Glance back over the column for answers to your questions.

CORDOVA AND BESS: If I remember correctly, Mary Fuller's eyes are hazel. No, she's not married. Blanche Sweet is not married. She is in her early twenties.

H. W. R.: I have no information regarding the private affairs of Herbert Rawlinson. Sorry.

TABBY: That wasn't a nice thing to say. Are you a cat?

F. G. C.: Reports from the front state that Gertrude McCoy is not married. (They may have been censored.)

VERY TRULY MINE: Managers of moving picture companies are usually to be found at their posts of duty at the studios. Send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope and I'll send you a complete list of studios. But if I were you it seems to me I wouldn't be so anxious to put my little boy to work. He'll only be a child once. Let him have his childhood. School and home and mother are the things he needs most in the world just now.

BETH: No, Ed Coxen isn't married. (Long drawn breath of relief?)

GRACE F.: Arthur Johnson was married once upon a time. At present I believe he's a grass widower. I don't know what woman you refer to. A number are to be seen at various times in pictures with him and Lottie Briscoe. Of course your favorite's picture could appear in the "Frame" if she received votes enough. You'll have to be your own judge of beauty.

HOOSIER: Thomas Santschi never lived in Indiana, I am told. Sorry to disappoint you.

H. P. H. K.: Since you don't mention companies, I can't give you the names of the people in whom you are interested.

CLARA B.: Roscoe Arbuckle is the fat man's real name. I have no information regarding his private affairs.

ROSLYN P.: Address Mary Pickford and Owen Moore, care of the Famous Players, and Wallie Van and Lillian Walker, care of the Vitagraph company, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

TESSIE R.: Kathlyn Williams is divorced.

PEGGY: No, Peggy, just at the present time there isn't much chance for a girl of your age entering the "movies." The field is overcrowded. And just why, I wonder, are all you girls threatening me to run away? Don't you dare!

BEN: I don't like your letter.

In Movie Land

Mabel Trunnelle is well known and admired among the motion picture fans for her delightful portraying of the young girls in the Edison films. Miss Trunnelle has played almost every known character except that of a Japanese girl. As she had always hoped that some day she might play this part Miss Trunnelle chuckled with glee upon learning that her hope would be realized in the film "Greater Love Hath No Man," by Mary Imlay Taylor. Miss Trunnelle became deeply interested in her part and spent every spare moment in embroidering the pretty Japanese gown which is shown in the picture. The portrayal is delightful from every standpoint.

Owing to the demand for first class photographers in the motion picture business of Los Angeles, the Polytechnic High school of that city will open a course in the study of lenses, cameras and optics, plate and paper work, and the chemistry of photography. Students above the tenth grade are eligible.

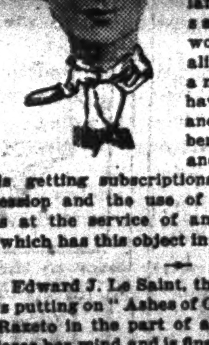
Many are the penalties of fame. Witness the latest visited upon Harold Lockwood:

"If you rise above the ruck or are boasting of your luck,
It is always wise to ponder as you knock wood
Unless, of course, you be from harm and care as free
As that handsome, debonair young actor Lockwood."

Edna Maison of the Universal company who is such a favorite with children, has two big dolls and a Teddy bear hanging in her room. They are not entirely new and Edna is a big girl for dolls now, but they were all presented to her by small girls who were happy in the giving. The little girl who presented the Teddy bear drops in occasionally and says: "May I borrow your Teddy bear to play with?"

Francis Ford and Grace Cunard will be seen in a two reeler, entitled "The Ghost of Smiling Jim," in which Ford will take the part of Smiling Jim and Grace Cunard that of his daughter, while Harry Schumm will be the heavy for a change. In addition to being the girl, Grace Cunard will be seen earlier in the picture as the mother who dies.

Thomas Commerford, the versatile character man with the Essanay company, delights in working in plays with a moral, and will appear shortly in "Whatsoever a Woman Soweth."



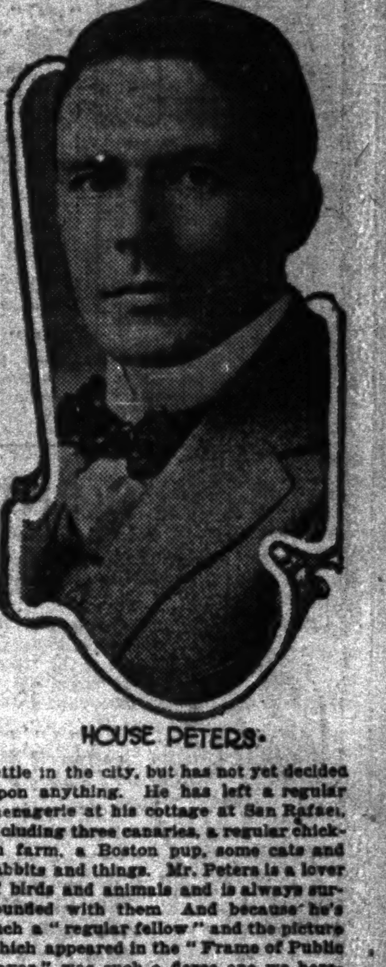
Myrtle Stedman of the Bosworth is spending much of her time raising funds for victims of the war. "And not for the wounded men of any particular nation," she says, "for all wounded men are alike to me." She and her friends have been making and selling a number of pretty things and Miss Stedman is getting subscriptions from the profession and the use of her lovely voice is at the service of any entertainment which has this object in view.

Edward J. Le Saint, the Selig producer, is putting on "Ashes of Gold" with Stella Razeto in the part of a young girl who loses her mind and is finally brought back to reason by her lover in a novel manner. Miss Razeto is supported by Guy Oliver, Jack Macdonald, and others.

Al E. Christie, producer of Nestor comedies, is putting on a city picture entitled "Ups and Downs," in which Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, and Vicky Forde do a lot of chasing each other up and down an aerial railroad. Eddie as an outraged husband and Lee as a musical professor keep the pot a-boiling over with fun. These two comedians know the art of playing up to each other.

"The Silent Valley," a two reel feature recently released, and featuring King Baggot in a role ultra-rural, proved such a success and so diverting that the Imp company has decided to release several other film dramas, disclosing Mr. Baggot in the rough and ready. "The Mill Stream," a two reel feature, will be the next along this line. Most of the sittings for it were laid at Smithtown, Long Island, where Mr. Baggot, with his company, has been motoring every sunny day for the last two weeks. It is a gripping drama of the elemental, showing this actor in a rôle of original qualities. Charles Lessey is the director of the piece.

Hist, girls! News of House Peters! He is visiting Los Angeles and is making the acquaintance of the photoplayers and doing the rounds of the studios. He may settle in the city, but has not yet decided upon anything. He has left a regular menagerie at his cottage at San Rafael, including three canaries, a regular chicken farm, a Boston pup, some cats and rabbits and things. Mr. Peters is a lover of birds and animals and is always surrounded with them. And because he's such a "regular fellow" and the picture which appeared in the "Frame of Public Favor" was such a fierce one we herewith print another.



HOUSE PETERS.

Caryle Blackwell is well on the way with Richard Harding Davis' story, "The Man Who Could Not Lose," in which, it is said, he has an essentially "Blackwell" part. "The Man Who Could Not Lose" is a comedy.

Vote for the Picture of Your Favorite Player.

Sidney Bracy received the highest number of votes this week. His picture, therefore, will appear in The Frame of Public Favor next Sunday. Of the other players voted upon, the following six are the leaders:

Florence La Badie, Lyllian Leighton, Dorothy Kelly, Bessie Learn, Edith Storey and Bessie McCoy.

If you want to see a picture of your favorite player, send in your vote to "Right Off the Reel," care of this paper. You may cut out and make use of this form if you desire.

One of those "once in a lifetime purchases," for the Max Meyer Co. (who own a number of departments in the Stumpf & Langhof Store, Grand Ave. and 2nd St., Milwaukee, Wis.) have not been in business very long, but long enough to see that they had too many departments in the space they occupy, and so they took drastic action and sacrificed these splendid laces, embroideries, notions, buttons and trimmings, giving their remaining departments the chance to spread out they so badly needed. WEST RAVENSWOOD SELLS ITSELF

No "boom talk" predictions of future value, or of what WILL happen, is needed to sell our home sites.

It is only necessary to come out and see the property.

Its desirability and worth are self-apparent. This "Health Suburb" is as near to the ideal as you have ever hoped to find.

If you have seen other subdivisions and have been disappointed; if you have listened until your head ached to the "future prospects" talk, come out today and allow us to drive you through our properties. Let us show you a district with a "present" instead of one with but the POSSIBILITY of a "future."

Lots 30x125, with all improvements in and paid for, are selling as low as $650. The Ravenswood Branch of the N. W. L. [Western-av. station] is right at the entrance of the subdivision. You have five different means of transportation at your service; you can get to the Loop in 26 minutes. All the comforts of the home lover are yours at West Ravenswood.

War Increases Land Values
[PRIVATE CAR EXCURSION, TUESDAY, OCT. 20.]

NEVER IN ALL HISTORY was there such a tremendous and unanswerable argument for investment in land as the effect of the European war on property in Belgium and the battle-ridden districts. When peace returns to that territory, the families who own land will have an asset of greatest value with which to begin again the building up of their shattered fortunes. Securities and stocks are worthless, industries ruined, cities destroyed, but the land and its fertility remains as good as ever.

WAR INCREASES LAND VALUES. It emphasizes the fact that nearly all wealth comes from the land. The nations of Europe must fall back on the soil to pay their war debts and recover their wealth.

THE HIGH PRICES for farm products that will be obtained by the 350,000 farm renters in Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa will give them profits that to a great extent will go into the purchase of new lands. Although the European war will increase the price of some things our farmers have to buy, the balance will be greatly in their favor. Last month's government crop report from the Department of Agriculture states that five of our principal crops have already increased $[illegible] more than they were a year ago—viz.: Wheat, $[illegible]; corn, $[illegible]; oats, $[illegible]; barley, $8,000,000, and hay, $21,000,000. The longer the war, the higher the price. Earl Kitchener, the great English military authority, has stated the war will last 18 months. In our Civil War, from 1861 to 1865, corn advanced from 27c to 56c a bushel; wheat, 70c to $1.50; oats, 17c to 40c; cattle from $3.15 per cwt. to $7; hogs from $3 per cwt. to $9.80.

ANY MAN who wants farm land ought to see the opportunity now in the Swigart Tract. There is sure to be a large influx of farmers into this favored Michigan district in Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford Counties. In fact, the movement has already commenced. Those in a position to know claim there will be a greater tide of immigration from Europe as soon as peace comes than in any period in the history of the United States.

I have 50,000 acres available now, with recent fine additions. How long will it be before immigration forces its occupancy? How quickly will these lands again double, treble, and quadruple in price? I have lands from $10 to $35 per acre, and a great deal of the best of them at $15 per acre. Terms as low as $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month on 40 acres. An insurance feature in the contract is an added protection. When you move on the land, you will find us permanently organized to help you there. We have a seed-supplying arrangement, operate demonstration farms, a large orchard, and employ agricultural instructors to go regularly from farm to farm, instructing the settlers and improving their methods, thereby getting larger crop returns.

MY NEXT PRIVATE CAR EXCURSION will be Tuesday, Oct. 20, by the P. M. R. R., leaving my main office, Chicago, at 11:30 a. m. Fare, $8.80 round trip to Wellston, rebated on purchase. You get back to Chicago at 7:20 a. m. Thursday or Friday of the same week. Automobiles and guides furnished free. Office remains open Saturday afternoons and Monday evenings.

INVESTMENT WITH SERVICES.

A corporation controlling the manufacture and sale of a 5 cent product, practically no limitation on sales, has now a number of openings for men of ability, who are qualified to act as branch managers; position carries substantial salary, plus a liberal bonus on volume of business.

The business is absolutely clean, highly profitable, and already a proven success. The selection of localities in the state of Illinois will be made strictly with reference to shipping facilities and for strategical position. Some of the points that we would most favorably consider are Rock Island, Aurora, Rockford, Galena, Springfield, Quincy, Kankakee, East St. Louis, Jacksonville, Cairo, Centralia, Elgin, Decatur.

The investment required will range from $5,000 and upwards, depending upon locality. Returns on investment with services will range from $2,500 annually upward with an adequate annual increase. Some localities should pay as high as $10,000 a year or more. This is not in any sense a promotion scheme, but strictly above board business proposition, one that you can submit to your banker or your lawyer.

The record of the men back of the corporation is absolutely clean. There is no risk in the sense of a speculative risk. Nothing is left to chance. To the man who wishes to embark in a business that to all intents and purposes will be his own business, to the man who wishes to anchor himself for the rest of his life in a profitable undertaking, we have the opening. We have no time for curiosity seekers, or brokers.

In answering this advertisement state the amount you have available for investment and such particulars about your past business experience and record as you naturally would expect to ask us, and we in return will give you full particulars by letter and arrange for a meeting to discuss all details.

Address all communications to D. P. McINTYRE, First National Bank Building, Champaign, Ill.

A MILLION A DAY.
Here's a chance for the investor with $500 and up to buy stock in the most rapidly expanding business in Chicago—a business with extraordinary earning capacity, based on a product that almost amounts to a monopoly.
We offer $100,000 worth of 7% preferred stock, par value $100 a share, with a bonus of an equal amount of common, for the specific purpose of handling orders from the big packers and manufacturers of food products, for our patented sealed container, which does away with expensive tin cans and glass bottles.
The sale of this block of stock will enable us to increase factory capacity to a million or more containers daily. Present facilities entirely inadequate to keep up with orders booked. Biggest concerns in the United States are calling for our product in immense quantities.
Proof of every statement available to investors. This is one of those exceptional opportunities you cannot afford to pass by without investigation. Address S F 77, Tribune.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been entirely taken apart, each part examined, and if necessary replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values, these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

Every Mother Owes Them to Her Children

California's Sun-Made Raisins

Grown and Cured in the Open Vineyards by California's Glorious Sunshine

California's sun-made raisins, madam, form the most nutritious fruit food that any home can serve. Do you know the many ways of serving raisins?

Children love them; and children ought to have them, for nothing that they eat is better for them.

Little folk need sugar. Here is the purest of all sugar—wholesome sun-made sugar from delicious amber-colored California grapes.

Give them these clean, healthful raisins after school in place of questionable candy. Serve raisins in some tempting way at least once every day. The entire family will find an added zest in countless dishes. And there is not another food that produces equal benefits.

"The Gems of Food"

Note that one pound of these raisins equals in food value 1⅓ lbs. of beef; 1 lb. of bread; 2 lbs. of eggs; 4 lbs. of milk; 4¾ lbs. of fish; 4⅙ lbs. potatoes.

Yet the cost per pound, considering food value, is lower than for any of these foods. Cut the cost of living every day by serving some nutritious delicacy made with raisins.

Try These—Send for Free Recipe Book

We have prepared at great expense a beautiful book in four colors containing 52 prize recipes. We will send a copy free to any housewife who writes for it. Here are dishes you have never tasted—delicious foods the whole family would enjoy. Serve a raisin-dainty once each day for ten days as a test—see what your folks will say.

Your Dealer Has Them

Your dealer can supply you with California's sun-made raisins. He sells them under several different brand names. Three varieties: Seedless, for making cakes and cookies; Seeded (seeds extracted) for ordinary cooking purposes in raisin bread, etc., and Layer (loose and in clusters, containing seeds) to serve as a dessert with nuts.

Send for the recipes—see how to use these raisins.

FRESNO, CALIFORNIA

Ask Your Baker for California Raisin Bread

Thousands of bakers and confectioners are now baking California raisin bread according to a famous recipe furnished them by us. Go try it. See what this bread is like. Then serve it with the white bread at every meal.

Children and grown-ups, both, need such bread. There is no better food. And it provides a healthful, mild laxative quality.

Don't miss all the benefits that California's sun-made raisins can bring into your home.

The Army as an Investment

By Lindley M. Garrison

Secretary of War

IN round numbers it costs the United States $1000 per man annually to maintain its standing army. The most recent available figures show the total enlisted strength of the army to be 91,402, with an upkeep charge of $92,076,145.51, exclusive of the cost of the Military Academy at West Point.

A force of 100,000, as authorized by Congress, hardly compares, in numbers alone, to the millions of men engaged by the European powers in the war now waging. But it must be remembered that the greatest value of this standing army lies in its use as a strong, forceful nucleus in time of war—a center around which could be built up a much greater fighting force for offensive and defensive work.

The United States has no need for the immense standing armies maintained abroad. Conditions are essentially different here. Our principal need is for a well-trained, well-disciplined nucleus for the army of war—a standing army which will also be of value in time of peace, instead of being an immense burden and heavy tax.

The longer I have been associated with the army—the better I have become acquainted with its personnel and felt its quality—the greater my pride in the Army has grown. The more I have seen of it the more greatly I have become impressed with it as an organization adapted for the performance of any great national duty that it may be called upon to do. Everybody is familiar with our military history in Mexico, in Cuba, in Porto Rico, in the Philippines and in Panama.

First in Peace

SOON after I took office as Secretary of War it became my duty to set out post-haste from Washington for Ohio, where floods of unusual severity had devastated a wide area and paralyzed the industries of a score of cities and towns.

I went accompanied by the Chief of Staff and other officers of the Army for the purpose of studying the situation on the spot, and extending the fullest aid the national government could give through the Army.

And I saw at close range the promptness and forcefulness with which the Army works, the directness and precision of its methods, its versatility and capability. Seeing which, I came to realize as never before what an efficient organization it is, not only from a military point of view, but in its capacity to accomplish almost any feat that is possible to organized effort.

I find it difficult to think of any undertaking which the Army is not equal to handling.

The construction of the Panama Canal, the greatest engineering feat of the age; the erection of the Washington monument; the construction of the new Government Printing Office, the Library of Congress, the Army War College; the construction of the Poe and Weitzel locks in the St. Marys Falls Canal, through which the enormous volume of traffic of the Great Lakes passes; the promotion of commerce by the maintenance of the navigability of all federal waterways and the improvement of harbors and by the prevention of encroachments thereon; the improvement and control of the Mississippi River; relief work in connection with the San Francisco earthquake and fire, Mississippi floods; the handling of the Fiftieth Anniversary meeting of the Union and Confederate soldiers at Gettysburg, at which about 55,000 veterans, the majority of them aged and decrepit, were sheltered and fed and their health and comfort safeguarded during a week of midsummer heat, with a minimum list of casualties—these instances, and many others that could be cited, show the readiness, the effectiveness and the capacity of the Army to do almost any kind of national service.

The achievements of the Army in connection with the eradication of yellow fever and the use of typhoid prophylaxis as a preventive of typhoid fever, its notable work in cleaning the streets and sewers of Havana and rehabilitating that city, the varied employment of the Army in establishing and maintaining civil government in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands, are all matters of general knowledge, as well as the excellent work that has been done in Alaska in promoting the development of that territory by the building of roads, bridges and trails.

It has been well said that what our Army needs more than anything else is, first, a trained reserve to draw upon in time of war; second, a more widespread interest on the part of the public.

But I should reverse the order.

Service the Keynote

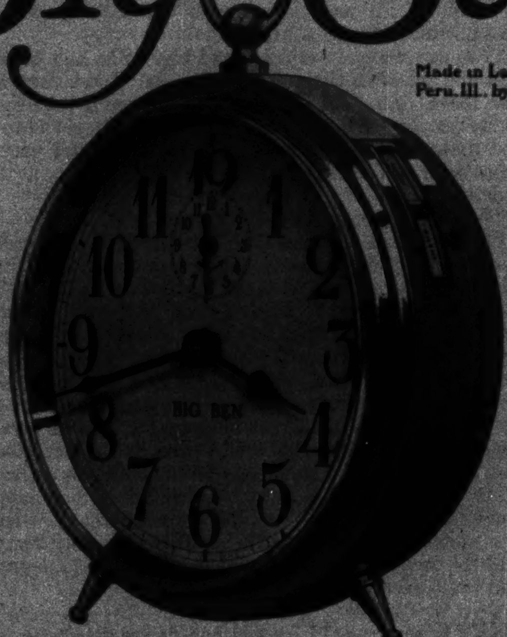
I FEEL sure that when once a proper interest and pride in our small but admirable army are aroused throughout the country—as they ought to be because it is OUR Army, doing OUR service and devoting itself to OUR interests—it will not be long before a trained reserve will follow.

Soldiers speak of the Army as the service. And the word service sounds the keynote of the spirit and work of the United States Army.

Lindley M. Garrison

Big Ben

Made in La Salle and Peru, Ill., by Westclox



Once upon a time

there was an alarm clock who wanted to get up in this world.

So he had himself fitted with a regular watch escapement, a light running motor, selective alarm calls, and large easy-winding keys.

Then, so they could see him in the dim morning light, he ordered himself a great big white dial and large, black, clean-cut hands.

When he was dead sure he could make a clean sweep, he hung out his shingle and bid for business.

Today there are three and a half million names on his calling list—he's got the biggest practice in the alarm clock business.

His name is Big Ben, and his imprint "Made by Westclox, La Salle, Illinois," is the best oversleep insurance that anyone can buy.

Fact is, he is really two alarm clocks in one—an intermittent alarm ringing every other half minute for ten minutes, a long alarm ringing five minutes straight without interruption unless you shut him off. Price $2.50 anywhere in the States. $3.00 anywhere in Canada.

FIVE-FOOT-TEN FROM KANSAS

BY JOHN FLEMING WILSON

Illustration [illegible] N. Marchand

"Who are you?" I asked her as we dried out on the sand

THE sultry table at which we sat was round-ringed with beer stains; the waiter was somnolent; Panama was drowsing in the afternoon of a hot April. Captain Mallow drummed idly with his fingers and surveyed with disgust the antics of two spider monkeys chained to the beam of the doorway.

"I hate these betwixt-and-between things," he remarked. "They aren't little enough to cuddle in your hand and they're not big enough to interest you."

"I fancy you like elephants," I responded. "You can't tuck them under your jacket; they don't sing, and they keep you busy wondering what they might do if they feel like doing something."

"I was referring to sensible people like you and me," Mallow responded slowly. "Gimme big women and big ships; big men and high seas; gimme a throat burned with thirst or lemme be drunk; I'd rather starve till I was chilled to the bone than have merely three meals. I'd rather lose my temper entirely than be only stirred up."

I had known Mallow for only a week, and he had strangely occupied my thoughts during that period. He was over six feet tall, square shouldered, lean hipped, taciturn, surly. He was also industrious and sober. So far as I knew he spoke to no one but myself. His steamer—a tramp—lay inside Naos Island, flying the British flag.

"Well," I answered, "I suppose all you big fellows like big things. It must be something for you to command respect in any crowd. I'm only five-foot-eight and I have to fight for my right of way."

He scanned me thoughtfully and shook his head. "I didn't mean it just that way. I'm thinking of a girl. She's five-foot-ten and came from Kansas. Last time I saw her she weighed one hundred and eighty-five pounds and——"

He fell silent and I stared into the soundless, dozing street. A vigilante curbed his mount before the doorway and whistled to the monkeys. They screamed back at him. He laughed mirthlessly and rode on.

"She never whistled," Mallow continued seriously. He lit a cigar. I believe I ordered beer. We did not drink it. I myself was too busy studying my companion. He evidently was on the point of making me a confidant; I saw his dark eyes cloud, as if some invisible wind of passion swept them. He spoke:

"She always said I had no imagination. I think that is true. It has bothered me at times. I have been informed that imagination is necessary to the understanding of women. So I will just give you the facts."

"Why?" I demanded coldly.

"Possibly you may understand," he said gravely. He sank into reverie a while.

"You see she was very tall and big. She had been born and raised in this town in Kansas. I have never been there. She told me there were no young men up to her height. Says she to me, 'I couldn't get married there. I was too tall. The boys wouldn't even dance with me.' That was the fact of the case, as I understood it."

"Where did you meet her?" I asked.

"In Honolulu. I was then master of a schooner loading for Shanghai; my cargo was pretty well in and I went for a swim at Waikiki. I went to the reef and was coming in slowly. I was half way to the beach when I heard what I thought was a shark cleaving the water. I turned, and it was a big girl. She forged alongside and we talked. She was a good woman for the water, most as good as a native . . . she could beat me with that long easy stroke of hers. And now and again she would dive like a porpoise and I would see the shimmer of her shoulders underneath the blue of the water. Once I took her hand and we went down together till the white coral glistened just under us. A lot of little box fishes twinkled away and she looked at me and smiled. Then we came up and went ashore.

"WHO are you?" I asked her, as we dried out on the sand below the Japanese Inn.

"'Mary Flaherty,' she told me. 'I'm a stenographer in the big hardware store on King Street.'

"I looked at her and saw that she was a tremendous creature, yet trim as an albicore. The colors of the sky were in her eyes. We talked. She told me what I've told you.

"'And no one will marry you because you are so tall?' I said at last.

"'No one,' says she in a whisper. Then I knew that she was in trouble. The world is full of women in trouble; they're mostly thin and about five foot tall and wear shoes with high heels. She wore sneakers. Her blonde hair fell over her face like rain. Maybe I was crazy. I have no imagination. What I said was, 'I'm six feet tall, and I want you.'

"That was plain enough, wasn't it? She paid no attention to my offer of marriage. She laughed and her lips were red. I don't yet understand what she meant. She asks me, 'Do you like mignonette?'

"'It's my favorite posy,' I told her.

"'When I was a kiddie I used to lie down and put my face into it in gran'ma's garden,' she says.

"'Sure,' I answered. 'I had a gran'ma myself. She wore grey gowns and stuck a bunch of mignonette in her belt.'

"She pulled her bare feet up under her short skirt and thought a while. Then she looked at me oddly. 'You know I was in love once,' she told me softly. 'He was only five-feet-six. The other girls made fun of him when he took me to a dance. I think I'll never forget him.'

"Something in this made me cross. I can't tell you why. I simply asked her the reason of her being in Honolulu.

"'Oh, I went to business college instead of to sociables and dances,' she informed me. 'I worked home a while and then I came as far as here with a girl who was going as a missionary to China.'

"WE SAT there quite a while, as the sun dropped, and presently I inquired whether she couldn't forget that little fellow in Kansas.

"'I'm not sure,' says she. 'What did you mean when you said you wanted me?'

"'For my wife,' I told her. 'I'm taller than you are and I feel lonesome. Still'—I stopped right there. I meant what I said, but a man can't be too careful. The service reads 'Till death do us part.' That means that either the husband or the wife must go first. And we hadn't gone through all the preliminaries . . . we hadn't met by lamplight . . . I don't know anything about Kansas. I looked at her a while and then I said, 'Yes, I'll marry you.' I meant it.

"Pretty soon she put her slender hand over to me. I tucked it into my own. The sun went down and the lights were lit on the hotel lanais."

Mallow looked owlish in the sunlight that streamed in the doorway. The spider monkeys swung endlessly on their chains.

"For heaven's sake, man," I said irritably, "keep to your yarn."

He looked at me soberly. "I see you don't know what marriage means," he resumed. "It isn't exactly love; it's serious—Till death do us part. I'm not religious especially. But a promise is a promise—unless divorced. That's different. But ordinarily it has always struck me that it would be fairer if both went together."

I lost my temper at this preposterous statement.

"She never liked profanity," he said simply, this dull skipper. "So I never use it."

"I beg your pardon," I muttered.

"That's all right," he said, amiably enough. "Her rules apply only to me."

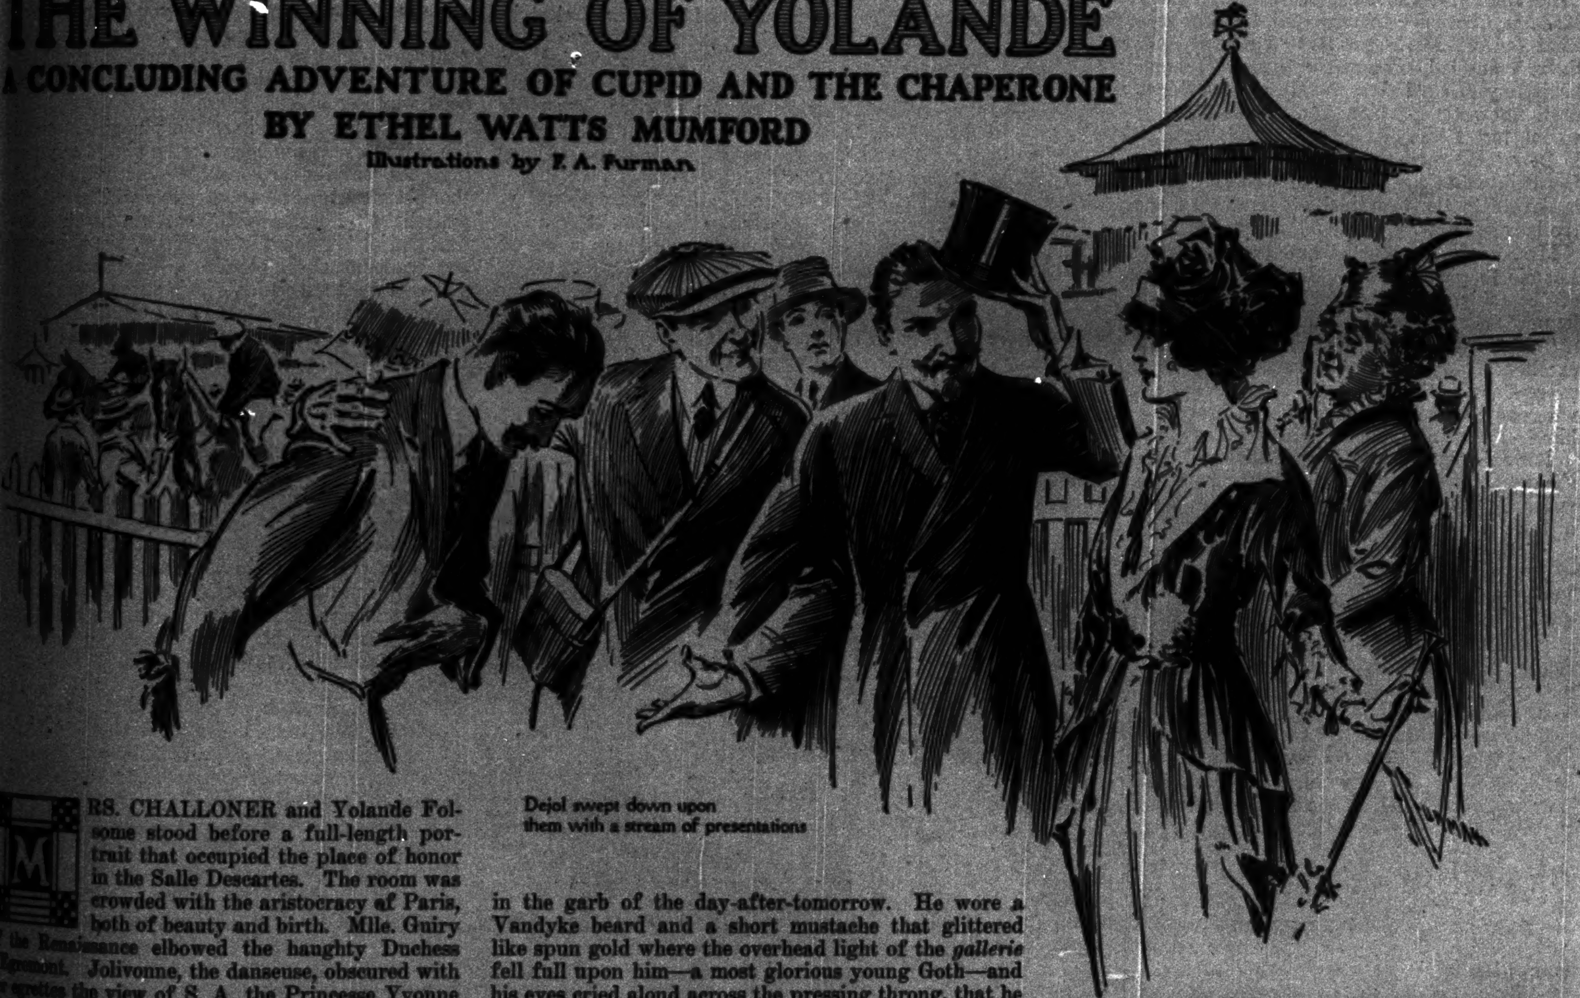
"Well?" I responded. (Continued on page 250)

THE WINNING OF YOLANDE

A CONCLUDING ADVENTURE OF CUPID AND THE CHAPERONE

BY ETHEL WATTS MUMFORD

Illustrations by F. A. Furman



Dejol swept down upon them with a stream of presentations

MRS. CHALLONER and Yolande Folsome stood before a full-length portrait that occupied the place of honor in the Salle Descartes. The room was crowded with the aristocracy of Paris, both of beauty and birth. Mlle. Guiry of the Renaissance elbowed the haughty Duchess d'Egremont. Jolivonne, the danseuse, obscured with her egrettes the view of S. A. the Princesse Yvonne of Argaime. All classes were one in admiration of the genius of Raphael Gaule, portrayer par excellence, of feminine charm and loveliness. The exhibition appealed to Smart Paris and Smart Paris was there in its best furs, laces and pearls, quite as much "on the line" as the masterly paintings that adorned the grey walls. Mrs. Challoner glanced from the girl at her side to her framed semblance. The likeness was amazing. There was the same satin-soft hair, gold-bronze in color, waving back from an ivory brow; the same short straight nose; the mouth, a trifle full, and very red—a generous, unselfish, loving mouth; there were the selfsame deep, violet eyes, drooping a little at the corners, and following the long oriental eyebrows by a touch of darkened color. The girlish figure stood revealed in youthful elegance, and the slender hands, in spite of their delicacy, hinted at clasp vigorous and warm.

"Yolande," Mrs. Challoner exclaimed, "it's a real triumph, such a portrait as that. It's marvellously you!"

Yolande smiled and nodded. "Isn't it," she assented. "Mother is going to have Paula painted too, when she comes over for her trousseau."

Mrs. Challoner colored. The mention of either of her former charges, both of whom had shown extraordinary ability to elude her chaperonage and acquire husbands of their own choosing, made her feel uncomfortable.

THEY had been so absorbed in contemplation of the portrait that they had not noticed the attention they were attracting. Mrs. Challoner suddenly discovered herself and Yolande to be centers of interest. There were little whispers and nodding of heads as the dilettanti compared the painted presentment with the beautiful original. Yolande, too, became self-conscious; but it was not the homage of the crowd that gave her pause—wholesale admiration was something to which she was accustomed. The flush that suddenly mantled her cheeks surprised her, and the strange perturbation seemed to emanate directly from the ecstatic gaze of a young man, stationed across the room.

To be sure, he was but one of many who gazed with evident approval, but the look was different. She had a sudden impulse to bow, a flash of half-recognition. Then she realized that the young man was a stranger. He was tall, very tall for a Frenchman, and blonde as a Saxon. Had he worn a wolf skin and thong sandals he might have posed as a young Goth. But modern custom had clothed him in the garb of the day-after-tomorrow. He wore a Vandyke beard and a short mustache that glittered like spun gold where the overhead light of the gallerie fell full upon him—a most glorious young Goth—and his eyes cried aloud across the pressing throng, that he had, then and there, laid his heart before the little feet of the girl from over-seas.

Yolande was puzzled. Surely she must know him — there was something very familiar. But how forget such an appealing personality and retain only a vague feeling of "having-seen-before?"

The young man moved nearer. His eyes seemed to plead for recognition. Yolande stiffened and turned away, the blood crowding to her temples, a strange, heavy throb in her heart. She slipped her hand through her chaperone's arm, as they turned toward the exit.

"Permettez, Madame." The yellow-haired young giant stood bowing before Mrs. Challoner, holding in his hand her fur scarf which had slipped from her shoulders in her passage through the press of visitors.

Mrs. Challoner smiled her thanks, and hesitated. Surely she knew him. Or was she mistaken? She looked again, and realized that she did not — doubtless some fancied resemblance. She also realized that while the furs were offered to her hand, and the impressive bow was addressed to her, the eyes of the stranger were fastened upon Yolande with the look she had learned to know and dread.

"A THOUSAND thanks," she said hurriedly with a nod of dismissal, as she steered toward the door. Calling a taxi, she bundled in her charge and seated herself beside her. As the cab started she had a hurried view of the handsome youth as he stood on the steps of the Salle Descartes with a look at once disappointed and respectful. "Do you know that man?" she asked suddenly.

"What man?" Yolande inquired, coloring.

"The one who gave me back my scarf," the chaperone particularized.

"I thought I did," said Yolande slowly, "but I don't."

"That's odd — I had that impression too," Mrs. Challoner acknowledged. "I wonder now ——"

She erased him from her mind and conversation, but not for long — no longer, in fact, than the prompt arrival of Mr. Benjamin Loomis to take them out to dinner.

"Well, little chaperone, another ten strike, I opine," he greeted them in his booming voice.

Mrs. Challoner looked at him in amazement and trepidation. The big benevolent Powder King seemed to be possessed with occult powers — and had he not seen her out-generaled by Cupid on two occasions, that were not disastrous only because Chance had made them the reverse?

"What do you mean?" she quavered, fear in her sapphire eyes, as they entered the limousine.

"Mean?" he rumbled comfortably. "Well, that my very moneyed young friend, Pierre Déjol, has discovered your lovely Yolande, and has held me up for an introduction."

"Déjol?" repeated Miss Folsome and Mrs. Challoner in one breath.

"Yes, Déjol," reiterated Mr. Loomis. "Don't pretend to forget him, either of you, for he isn't to be forgotten. He's a French version of a football idol, and about the liveliest business man in Paris. I happen to know — we both manufacture powder." At which apparently innocent remark the big man chuckled again.

"INDEED," said Mrs. Challoner guiltily, remembering the retriever of her furs.

"Oh," said Yolande. Again she felt a sudden stopping of her heart, an inexplicable half-frightened thrill.

"And here we are at Paillards," Mr. Loomis announced, "and I'll bet a hat Déjol is there now, pawing the air. I hope you'll be delighted to meet him, because the chances are you can't help yourselves. If I didn't fix it for him, he'd blackmail somebody else. After all," looking full defiance into Mrs. Challoner's eyes, "I'm on the side of Cupid, you know."

They entered the little chopped-off corner entrance and found themselves in the brightly lighted restaurant, being conducted to upholstered seats along a mirrored wall.

A tall form rose to greet them, towering above the groups of diners like a lighthouse on the sands — Déjol. He was superbly unconscious of his physical proportions, making not the slightest effort to conceal his joy at the meeting, and, the presentations over, he plunged into explanations.

"I see your portrait first, Mademoiselle. I fall in love with that," he prologized. "Then I see you — ah, I make to find out who you are and whom you know. So I go straight to the dé-tec-tives."

"Detectives!" exclaimed Mrs. Challoner.

He smiled. "Surely, the Préfecture must know who all foreigners are. I follow you in your taxi to the Elysée Palace Hotel. There I learn your name and country. Then I fly for information to my friend, Grosgean of the Police. 'Yes,' say he. 'The Mademoiselle have been here with Madame, her mother. Monsieur is a richard manufacturer of armor plate for battleships. Then Madame Folsome, she absent to home.' 'Home,' " he repeated beaming.

"That mos' beautiful English word! Then comes Madame Challoner to represent Les Convenences—what you call Mrs. Grundy." He bowed politely to the reverend lady's representative. "'Whom do they know, my friend?' I cry. 'It is importance that I shall know them at once. Whom do they know, whom, too, I know?' 'Ah,' say Grosgean, 'there is le Député Lepine, and there is the de Mailles of St. Germain, and there is also the Monsieur Loomis, who is devote to the beautiful Madame Challoner, with the hair of snow.'"

Mrs. Challoner started and turned scarlet. Mr. Loomis laughed, and sought her hand under cover of the table. Déjol continued his narrative, which he now addressed exclusively to Yolande.

"'Ha!' say I, 'Monsieur Benjamin Loomis—good! excellent! My friend, you have save me! He shall present me to this wonderful Mademoiselle, who has with one glance captured my heart forever.'—I go to him—I demand. Here I am!"

It was Yolande, who now started and colored, but she did not seem displeased. Her eyes flashed to the speaker's tense, earnest face, and their message was at least one of interest.

"You will permit, therefore, that I pay my, what you call 'addresses' to the young lady, chere Madame? Doubtless my good friend here has told you that I am ver' well feexed—yes, even as your fortunes in America are counted. My father was a chemist, one of the first inventors of France. I, too, am an inventor. I am already décoré," he proudly thumbed a little scarlet button in the lapel of his coat. "My people are honorable people, and I am myself, 'pas mal'—'some boy,' as you would say in your idiom. Mademoiselle, you will pardon my speaking so—how is it you say—'off the bat?' But I cannot help myself." He smiled again his magnetic smile.

"M. DÉJOL is all he says he is," Mr. Loomis endorsed, "and that's going some, as you may have noticed. And now, my good Jeanne, that you have got your proposal off your heart before the soup goes by it, let's have dinner."

With any other quartette such a beginning would have spelled a restraint. But not so with Déjol. To Mrs. Challoner, the openness of the attack was a reassuring novelty. Yolande for a moment was somewhat overpowered, but as her extraordinary cavalier did not again refer to his intentions, and devoted himself to the task of being entertaining, she regained her composure and found herself drawn to him by the sheer vigor and charm of his personality. Déjol talked wittily, his odd use of slang phrases, laboriously acquired, was amusing, and his total lack of vanity left him free to laugh at himself with unaffected heartiness. Dinner over, he summarily took charge of the party.

"My automobile is waiting," he announced. "It is now my evening. We will run out to Enghein. We will see the fireworks and look at the fools who play baccarat—bon!"

The car was a huge Pullman affair, lavish in every detail—two men on the box, robes of costly furs, fittings of "vermeil" and upholsterings of old brocade. They sped on cushioned springs, swaying gently where other vehicles tipped and jolted.

Bending devotedly toward the beautiful American, he continued his intimate chat. What did she like? Travel or chateau life? What was her favorite color, and what the flower she preferred? And did she like dogs—what kind of dogs? Was she fond of athletics? And did she like to sit up late?

Mrs. Challoner would have broken up the tete-a-tete, but Cupid had a powerful ally in the big man with the snapping black eyes and the rumbling voice. If, as the astute chief of police had stated, he was "devote to Mme. Challoner" he was certainly doing everything in his power to live up to the reputation.

The quartette was never separated, yet it resolved itself into two duets, whether they sat sipping champagne on the terraces overlooking the little lake of Enghein, or stood behind the tense groups of gamesters at the tables. On the return journey they were all somewhat silent, a trifle weary.

The indomitable Déjol had very quietly possessed himself of Yolande's hand. She struggled a moment, and then relaxed her fingers to his palm. There was nothing forward even about that forward action; it was as earnest and open as his handsome face and kind eyes. Somehow she found the contact very sweet, very soothing. She realized that she was tired; that the young Goth beside her seemed a tower of strength and protection. She closed her eyes with a little sigh of content. When she opened them again the motor was rolling over the pavements of Paris. They were nearing their destination.

Suddenly she gasped. Her glance had fallen upon an immense poster sign, illuminated by a row of electric bulbs. An advertisement that placarded France from end to end, as familiar as the Gold Dust Twins, or Phoebe Snow of her home advertising. It featured the lower half of a man's face, a bearded face with smiling lips that disclosed glistening and perfect teeth in a cordial smile, and beside it, in huge letters, "Poudre Dentifrice Déjol!"

The sight electrified Yolande. She sat up abruptly.

"Déjol!" she cried. "Look! Of course it was the poster we recognized. Oh!" The oh! was a cry of consternation. But Déjol did not so interpret it.

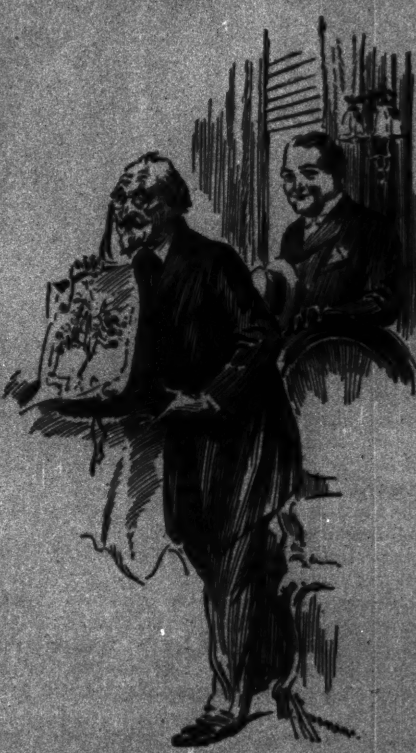
"Yes," he said gleefully. "As you see, one of my father's chemical discoveries. But the Tonique Capilaire Déjol is all my own!"

"I told you we both manufactured powder," Loomis hastened to say.

There was an ominous silence in the little palace on wheels.

"What is wrong? What is the matter?" Déjol inquired with naive distress as the car drew up in front of the hotel entrance. "Have I offend?"

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Loomis, grasping the situation. "I guess Miss Yolande doesn't like to think of your face plastered all over Paris. It does make it sort of common, I suppose."



He produced an illuminated parchment, in the semblance of a tree

"Oh," their host beamed. "Is that it? Of course! I understand! You see," he added pathetically, "I have no—what you call 'women folks' in your idiom—whose feeling I must consider; but that will be all right in the morning, you shall see—Bon soir; and a thousand thanks for your kind company."—Benjamin Loomis turned an anxious inquiring glance on the little chaperone, clearly he was calling for help.—His despairing S. O. S. received no comforting reply—her face was enigmatic—he sighed—he had hoped—just a little hope—that Mrs. Challoner was relenting.

With Déjol he sadly went out into the night, as the ladies entered and disappeared in the elevator. In the salon of their suite the two women faced each other.

"Tooth powder!" gasped Mrs. Challoner. "Whoever would have thought! Of course, your mother, my dear, won't care for you to keep up the acquaintance."

"Hair tonic!" added Yolande in a tragic whisper. "But, oh, I do like him," she murmured under her breath.

Morning brought a huge basket of American Beauties, and noon deposited at Yolande's shrine a miniature Pomeranian puppy with a gold collar. An avalanche of flowers for Mrs. Challoner bore a note in the impressive scrawl of Benjamin Loomis:

> Now, don't boggle over tooth powder; it's good powder. Let the boy have a chance. He's a good boy—and, say—I'm not bad myself—think it over.

Luncheon time and the limousine brought Déjol, clean shaven!

"Ha," he cried, showing all the well-known, [illegible]cable teeth in a happy smile, "you see, now I [illegible] known by ze powder no more. You like [illegible] And they did like him. Cleancut lips and [illegible] well-set jaws gave him an aristocratic air that [illegible] been wanting before.

"I have been thinking," he plunged at once [illegible] the subject next his heart,." 'the night,' as your [illegible]ing goes, 'carries the consul.'—Is it not so? I [illegible] thought perhaps the tooth paste will trouble [illegible]moiselle's mother. Well, that will be all right—[illegible] fix. Déjol is good for dentifrice, but it is no [illegible] for Mademoiselle Yolande — Parfaitment!—[illegible] you will want ancestors. It is always so in the [illegible] try democratic. That was what make Napoleon [illegible]ular—he make washwomen duchesses, he make [illegible] gamin Marechals of France, all right. I have [illegible]tors tomorrow."

In vain Mrs. Challoner summoned her dignity; [illegible] vain she strove to explain that "they really must [illegible] Déjol was no more to be withstood than a delight[illegible] friendly young tornado. While they declined [illegible] invitations and refused his proffered plans, [illegible] whisked them off to Chantilly, and the races;—[illegible] must, there were no "buts" about it. His horse [illegible] running, and he could have no possible chance [illegible] winning unless Mademoiselle saw him.

Forgotten was the fatal dentifrice. Who [illegible] think of such humble necessities in the face of Cr[illegible]sus Antinous? The big car brought them whirling to the course, through the lovely forest roads, [illegible] enchanting glimpses of the white chateau seated [illegible] its murmuring water-ways, past the hidden [illegible] of that fairy place,—"La mansion de Sylvie,"—[illegible] to the green sward of the Race Track, where it [illegible] to a stop in the club enclosure.

Yolande was in a daze of happiness. It seem[illegible] to her that she had always known her wonder[illegible] Goth; had been his sister in play, before he had [illegible]come her lover. They talked incessantly, [illegible] personally, as lovers talk.

Mrs. Challoner, in spite of the wrath to come, [illegible] hypnotized into acquiescence. The friendly tornado had whirled her, too, off her feet. She was [illegible] careering through a world of luxury and laugh[illegible]

"That is my horse," Déjol exclaimed suddenly, [illegible] a big golden chestnut was led from the paddock. He is just the color of my Capilaire—hair restorer—so I named him Tonique. He will win, now you, Mademoiselle are here—you shall see. For you he will go like, what you call, the slippery lightning."

"Tonique!" The word brought the Chaperone back to earth with a jolt. But Yolande was beyond such trivialities. She would have quaffed the tonique as Olympian nectar, and puffed her face with the dentifrice. She had become as unconscious of incongruities as Déjol himself.

"Tonique," she repeated, "what a beautiful, what a wonderful creature! I love him!"

"He is yours, Mademoiselle!" he cried rapturously. "Oh, it is a pleasure to give you that which you like! And may I call you Yolande? For I cabled to your father last night, that I would beg your hand—"

"Oh, goodness gracious!" exclaimed Mrs. Challoner, "Yolande!—what will your father say?"

YOLANDE paled and hesitated. Evidently she wished to say something, but could not. She turned frightened, protesting eyes on Déjol.

"Don't you think," she ventured, "you are rather—taking things for granted?"

"Mais oui!" he exclaimed. "Oh, I know. You will say 'No!' twice like that—'NO!' 'NO!' Then I shall threaten to go away, to enlist,—to hunt lions—or something and you will call me back and say 'Yes.' But why waste all the time? I am furious with all the years I have not known you!"

Mrs. Challoner intervened. "If you please," she said icily, "until Mr. Folsome authorizes your advances, will you kindly speak of other subjects. I confess I am amazed. You are audacious, Monsieur Déjol."

He was humbled.

"A thousand pardons!" he cried. "I offend—I am sorry—I am abject. It is because I am [illegible] that I am so. Mr. Loomis will tell you, I am not a ladies' man. I am a hard-working inventor, manufacturer. I do not take many things to heart, but when——"

"Well," the chaperone interrupted, "you will please not take Miss Folsome to your heart until you are given permission—but what is all the cheering about?"

Déjol jumped. "Mon Dieu! It is the race! I had forgot. Mon Dieu!—what is that? Ah—ah, a—! Tonique!

YOU alarm me. Are you to be sent to prison?"

"You wouldn't look upon it as a prison, but it seems like one to me. Do not laugh. I cannot explain to you now. Another day I shall tell you everything, so pray take me for what I am today, and ask no questions. I have asked none of you, so do be equally generous with me."

"True," she said, "you have asked no questions of me. You take me for what I am today, and yet you know nothing of my yesterdays or my tomorrows. It is only fair that I should be equally confiding. Let there be no more questions. Are we, however, to take each other seriously?"

"By all means," he cried. "There will come a day when you may appreciate the full extent of my seriousness."

"You speak in riddles."

"Is the time ripe for me to speak in sober earnest?" he questioned softly. She drew back again in swift alarm.

"No! No! Not now — not yet. Do not say anything now, Mr. Schmidt, that may put an end to our — to our adventure."

She was so serious, so plaintive, and yet so shyly prophetic of comfort yet to be attained, that his heart warmed with a mighty glow of exultation. A sweet feeling of tenderness swept over him.

"If God is good, there can be but one end to our adventure," he said, and then, for some mysterious reason, silence fell between them. Long afterward — it seemed hours to him! — she spoke, and her voice was low and troubled.

"Can you guess why I am being watched so carefully, why I am being followed so doggedly by men who serve not me but another?"

"Yes. It is because you are the greatest jewel in the possession of a great man, and he would preserve you against all varlets, — such as I."

She did not reveal surprise at his shrewd conjecture. She nodded her head and sighed.

"You are right. I am his greatest jewel, and yet he would give me into the keeping of an utter stranger. I am being protected against that conscienceless varlet — Love! If Love lays hands upon me — ah, my friend, you cannot possibly guess what a calamity that would be!"

"And Love will lay hands upon you, Bedelia,——"

"I am sure of that," she said, once more serene mistress of herself after a peculiarly dangerous lapse. "That is why I shudder. What could be more dreadful than to fall into the clutches of that merciless foe to peace? He rends one's heart into shreds; he stabs in the dark; he thrusts, cuts and slashes and the wounds never heal; he blinds without pity; he is overbearing, domineering, ruthless, and his victims are powerless to retaliate. Love is the greatest tyrant in all the world, Mr. Schmidt, and we poor wretches can never hope to conquer him. We are his prey, and he is rapacious. Do you not shudder also?"

"Bless you, no! I'd rather enjoy meeting him in mortal combat. My notion of bliss would be a fight to the death with Love, for then the conflict would not be one-sided. What could be more glorious than to stand face to face with Love, hand to hand, breast to breast, lip to lip until the end of time? Let him cut and slash and stab if you will, there would still be recompense for the vanquished. Even those who have suffered most in the conflict with Love must admit that they have had a share in the spoils. One can't ignore the sweet hours when counting up the bitter ones, after love has withdrawn from the tender encounter. The cuts and slashes are cherished and memory is a storehouse for the spoils that must be shared with vanity."

She laughed joyously, naturally. "You really are quite wonderful, Mr. Schmidt. Still I must change the subject. I trust the change will not affect your glibness, for it is quite exhilarating. How long do you purpose remaining in Interlaken?"

"That isn't changing the subject," said he. "I shall be here for a week or ten days — or perhaps longer." He put it in the form of a question, after all.

"Indeed? How I envy you. I am sorry to say I shall have to leave in a day or two."

His face fell. "Why?" he demanded, almost indignantly.

"Because I am enjoying myself," she replied.

"I don't quite get your meaning."

"I am having such a good time disobeying my father, Mr. Schmidt, and eluding pursuers. It is only a matter of a day or two before I am discovered here, so I mean to keep on dodging. It is splendid fun."

"Do you think it is quite fair to me?"

"Did I induce you to come here, good sir?"

"You did," said he, with conviction. "Heaven is my witness. I would not have come but for you. I am due at home by this time."

"Are you under any obligations to remain in Interlaken for a week or ten days?"

"Not now," he replied. "Do you mind telling me where you are going to, Miss Guile?"

"First to Vienna, then — well, you cannot guess where. I have decided to go to Edelweiss."

"Edelweiss!" he exclaimed in astonishment. He could hardly believe his ears.

"It is the very last place in the world that my father would think of looking for me. Besides I am curious to see the place. I understand that the great Mr. Blithers is to be there soon, and the stupid Prince

He gave the head of the detective agency a blowing up who will not be tempted by millions, and it is even possible that the extraordinary Miss Blithers may take it into her head to look the place over before definitely refusing to be its Princess. I may find some amusement — or entertainment as an onlooker when the riots begin."

He was staring at her wide-eyed and incredulous. "Do you really mean to say you are going to Graustark!"

"I have thought of doing so. Don't you think it will be amusing to be on the scene when the grand climax occurs? Of course, the Prince will come off his high horse, and the girl will see the folly of her ways, and old Mr. Blithers will run rough shod over everybody, and — but, goodness, I can't even speculate on the possibilities."

He was silent. So this was the way the wind blew, eh? There was but one construction to be put upon her decision to visit the capital of Graustark. She had taken it into her head "to look the place over before definitely refusing to be its Princess!" His first thrill of exultation gave way to a sickening sense of disappointment.

ALL this time she was regarding him through amused, half-closed eyes. She had a distinct advantage over him. She knew that he was the Prince of Graustark; she had know it for many days. Perhaps if she had known all the things that were in his cunning brain, she would not have ventured so far into the comedy she was constructing. She would have hesitated — aye, she might have changed her methods completely. But she was in the mood to do and say daring things. She considered her position absolutely secure, and so she could afford to enjoy herself for the time being. There would be an hour of reckoning, no doubt, but she was not troubled by its promise of castigation.

"Poor Prince!" she sighed pityingly. He started. The remark was so unexpected that he almost betrayed himself. It seemed profoundedly personal. "He will be in very hot water, I fear."

He regarded her coldly. "And you want to be on hand to see him squirm, I suppose."

She took instant alarm. Was she going too far? His query was somewhat disconcerting.

"To be perfectly frank with you, Mr. Schmidt, I am going to Graustark because no one will ever think of looking for me in such an out-of-the-way place. I am serious now, so you must not laugh at me. Circumstances are such that I prefer to seek happiness after a fashion of my own. My parents love me, but they will not understand me. They wish me to marry a man they have picked out for me. I intend to pick out my own man, Mr. Schmidt. You may suspect, from all that you have seen, that I am running away from home, from those who are dearest in all the world to me. You know that I was carefully watched in Paris. You know that my father fears that I may marry a man distasteful to him, and I suppose to my mother, although she is not so ——"

"Are his fears well founded?" he asked, rudely interrupting her. "Is there a man that he has cause to fear? Are — are you in love with some one, Bedelia?"

"DO NOT interrupt me. I want you to know that I am not running away from home, that I shall return to it when I see fit, and that I am not in love with the man they suspect. I want you to be just with me. You are not to blame my father for anything, no matter how absurd his actions may appear to you in the light of the past few days. It is right that he should try to safeguard me. I am wayward, but I am not foolish. I shall commit no silly blunder, you may be sure of that. Now do you understand me better?"

She was very serious, very intense. He laid his hand on hers, and she did not withdraw it. Emboldened, his hand closed upon the dainty fingers and an instant later they were borne to his hot lips.

"You have said that I came here in search of a light adventure," he whispered, holding her hand close to his cheek as he bent nearer to her. "You imply that I am a trifler, a light-o'-love. I want you to understand me better. I came here because I ——"

"Stop!" she pleaded. "You must not say it. I am serious — yes, I know that you are serious too. But you must wait. If you were to say it to me now I should have to send you away and — oh, believe me, I do not want to do that. I — I ——"

"You love no one else?" he cried rapturously.

She swayed slightly, as if incapable of resisting the appeal that called her to his heart. Her lips were parted, her eyes glowed luminously even in the shadows, and she scarcely breathed the words:

"I love no one else."

A less noble nature than his would have seized upon the advantage offered by her sudden weakness. Instead, he drew a long, deep breath, straightened his figure and as he gently released the imprisoned hand, the prince in him spoke:

"YOU have asked me to wait. I am sure that you know what is in my heart. It will always be there. It will not cut and slash and stab, for it is the most tender thing that has ever come into my life — or yours. It must never be accused of giving pain to you, so I shall obey you — and wait. You are right to avoid the risk of entrusting a single word of hope to me. I am a passer-by. My sincerity, my honesty of purpose remains to be proved. Time will serve my cause. I can only ask you to believe in me — to trust me a little more each day — and to let your heart be my judge."

She spoke softly. "I believe in you, I trust you even now, or I would not be here. You are kind to me. Few would have been so generous. We both are passers-by. It is too soon for us to judge each other in the full. I must be sure — oh, I must be sure of myself. Can you understand? I must be sure of myself, and I am not sure now. You do not know how much there is at stake, you cannot possibly know what it would

GREAT STAKES IN THE BATTLE SCALES

THE WAR AND WHY

BY THE AMBASSADORS TO THE UNITED STATES OF THE POWERS AT WAR

DEFINING the causes and consequences of the great war in Europe the Ambassadors of the European Powers have addressed the following important personal communications to The National Sunday Magazine:

BRITISH EMBASSY

Washington, August 27, 1914.

Editor National Sunday Magazine:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter and to thank you most cordially for your offer of space in The National Sunday Magazine in which to make a statement of the causes and consequences of the European conflict.

I have carefully considered your suggestion and my feeling is that the causes could not be put more clearly or forcibly than they have been in the speeches of the British Ministers in Parliament and in the official correspondence laid before Parliament which I enclose herewith. (Signed) CECIL SPRING-RICE,
(British Ambassador.)

Sir Edward Grey (Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs) to Sir Edward Goschen (British Ambassador to Berlin.)

FOREIGN OFFICE

London, August 4, 1914.

THE King of the Belgians has made an appeal to His Majesty the King for diplomatic intervention on behalf of Belgium in the following terms:

"Remembering the numerous proofs of your Majesty's friendship and that of your predecessor, and the friendly attitude of England in 1870 and the proof of friendship you have just given us again, I make a supreme appeal to the diplomatic intervention of your Majesty's Government to safeguard the integrity of Belgium."

His Majesty's Government are also informed that the German Government has delivered to the Belgian Government a note proposing friendly neutrality entailing free passage through Belgian territory, and promising to maintain the independence and integrity of the kingdom and its possession at the conclusion of peace, threatening in case of refusal to treat Belgium as an enemy. An answer was requested within twelve hours.

We also understand that Belgium has categorically refused this as a flagrant violation of the law of nations.

His Majesty's Government are bound to protest against this violation of a treaty to which Germany is a party in common with themselves, and must request an assurance that the demand made upon Belgium will not be proceeded with and that her neutrality will be respected by Germany. You should ask for an immediate reply.

Sir Edward Grey to Sir Francis Villiers (British Minister to Belgium.)

FOREIGN OFFICE

August 4, 1914.

YOU should inform Belgian Government that if pressure is applied to them by Germany to induce them to depart from neutrality, His Majesty's Government expect that they will resist by any means in their power, and that His Majesty's Government will support them in offering such resistance, and that His Majesty's Government in this event are prepared to join Russia and France, if desired, in offering to the Belgian Government at once common action for the purpose of resisting use of force by Germany against them, and a guarantee to maintain their independence and integrity in future years.

Sir Edward Grey to Sir Edward Goschen.

FOREIGN OFFICE

August 4, 1914.

WE HEAR that Germany has addressed note to Belgian Minister for Foreign Affairs stating that German Government will be compelled to carry out, if necessary, by force of arms, the measures considered indispensable.

We are also informed that Belgian territory has been violated at Gemmenich.

In these circumstances, and in view of the fact that Germany declined to give the same assurance respecting Belgium as France gave last week in reply to our request made simultaneously at Berlin and Paris, we must repeat that request, and ask that a satisfactory reply to it and to my telegram of this morning be received here by 12 o'clock tonight. If not, you are instructed to ask for your passports, and to say that His Majesty's Government feel bound to take all steps in their power to uphold the neutrality of Belgium and the observance of a treaty to which Germany is as much a party as ourselves.

GERMAN EMBASSY

Washington, Sept. 2, 1914.

Editor National Sunday Magazine:

His Excellency, the German Ambassador, wishes me to send you the enclosed article for publication as proposed in your letter to Count Bernstorff— (Signed) Councillor of the Embassy:

By the successful war of 1870-1 in which France had been the aggressive party, Germany obtained her unity. Since then she has lived in peace until the present conflict. This period has been favorable for the development of Germany's resources and strength, the ambition of the whole nation being bent upon the progress of industry, commerce and economic interests in general.

When Germany in these forty-three years tried her best to maintain peace in Europe, she did not do so for the purpose of gaining the approval of the other nations, but rather acted in her own interest. Within her boundaries there are already living people of French, Polish and Danish extraction, and it is not such an easy task to assimilate these heterogeneous elements that German statesmen should wish to increase the foreign element by adding new territories to the Empire. On the other hand, every year of peace has strengthened the German nation. Her population surpassed in number that of France so rapidly that the latter's wish for revenge on account of her defeat in 1870-1 was about to lose the chance of realization by mere lapse of time.

These circumstances make it clear that there could not be any reason for the Germans to risk their national existence by a new war. That the French nation too did not wish the war became evident when, some weeks ago, the danger of an international conflict grew apparent.

IN THE White Papers of both England and Germany it is stated that these two countries tried their best to pass through the last crisis without armed conflict. When, nevertheless, the war came, it was caused entirely by the policy of Russia.

Since 1909 Servia knew that whatever she might choose to do her big Russian friend would never allow Austria to enter upon a war with the Servians. Feeling shielded by powerful Russia, Servia, therefore, started an unscrupulous agitation against Austria. Repeatedly within the last years Servia brought Europe near the brink of war. The murder of the successor to the Austrian throne was but a single act caused by this agitation against the very existence of Austria.

There were only two possibilities left for the latter, viz.: either to suffer the unity of her country to be undermined by Servia or to put an end to this dangerous agitation. Before deciding for the latter Austria formally declared to Russia that she had no intention of acquiring Servian territory but only wished to establish permanent peace at her borders; the move against Servia, therefore, would be an entirely defensive measure.

The Russian Government, nevertheless, threatened not to remain neutral in a Servian-Austrian conflict. The reason for this attitude is to be found in Russia's Pan-Slavian ambition. Russia immediately started to mobilize her army near the Austrian border endangering by this measure the peace of all Europe. Germany and Great Britain together with other nations tried everything in their power to preserve peace, but their steps were made futile by Russia's mobilization at the German border quickly following that at the Austrian frontier. Germany learned of these movements at a moment when she had succeeded in re-establishing direct communication between the Governments of Russia and Austria. Although the Russian mobilization was an imminent danger to Germany the German Imperial Government took a last step to avoid war by presenting an ultimatum to Russia. This not being accepted and Russian soldiers entering German soil even before the time of the ultimatum had expired Germany could not but consider herself in a state of war with Russia.

Thus it is clearly shown that the European conflagration is the direct outcome of Russia's policy and that it has by no means been caused by Germany.

Under present conditions peace can only be restored by removing the Pan-Slavian agitation. The question is whether or not Russian autocracy will triumph over western culture. It must be left with the judgment of the American people which outcome they would prefer.

Manchester, Mass., Sept. 9, 1914.
Editor National Sunday Magazine:

RUSSIAN history is identical with her expansion to the Sea; first to the Baltic in the north, then to the Black Sea to the south, last to the Pacific to the east. The still prevailing tendency to extend her way to the south found its picturesque expression in the legendary will of Peter the Great, and the dream of Empress Catherine to install on the throne of Constantinople her second grandson whom she christened Constantin.

It is certainly a legitimate Russian interest to secure the free access to and exit from the Black Sea as an outlet for her principal commodity, wheat. Hand in hand with this commercial consideration of first importance works a sentimental motif, Pan-Slavism, which yields a wonderful sway over the imaginative Russian. Pan-Slavism is a feeling not easily defined; its source is partly national, partly mystical. Religion and racial pride combine to make most Russians firm believers in their destiny to unite all orthodox Slavs under the aegis of the Czar. The Roman-Catholic Poles, the deadly enemies and victims of autocratic Russia, were excluded from this ideal unity, and it is only recently under the pressure of war that Czar Nicholas promised them autonomy and the constitutional rights suppressed by his predecessors. Another characteristic of Pan-Slavism is its contempt for western modern civilization with its individualism and personal liberty. It stands up for rural communism and is based on the conviction of the superiority of the orthodox religion, this fountain of superstition and ignorance and firm stronghold of despotism. It also despises "the decaying German race." The Russians have a feeling of spiteful hatred for the Germans, who for generations tried to teach them discipline and method. Pan-Slavism, whereas it is satisfied with the meager concession of desultory civic rights within the boundaries of the northern Empire, works abroad as a revolutionary power. Under its inspiration the Balkan Confederation was formed against Turkey in 1912 which led to the end of Turkish rule in Macedonia.

The Russian advanced posts on the Balkan Peninsula are Servia and Montenegro. And Servia would have never dared trespass on the patience and forbearance of Austria-Hungary, were she not sure of the support of Russia. To complicate matters the policy of Russian expansion does not stop at Constantinople. Russia wants not only the opening of the Bosphorus but also the breaking up and dividing of Asiatic Turkey. But here she finds Germany in her way, who wishes to conserve Turkish rule in Asia in order to build railways, execute works of irrigation, and settle German emigrants on the reclaimed lands. Turkey's strongest friend has been Germany. This explains the statement of a Russian historical writer: The way to Constantinople goes not only through Vienna but also through Berlin.

AS LONG as Russia stood alone, her rivalry in the Near-East with Austria-Hungary backed up by Germany was not to be feared. But the inability of the high-spirited French nation to reconcile herself with the loss of Alsacia, led up to the most unnatural alliance of the radical Republic with the Eastern Theocracy. The French billions went to strengthen the Russian Empire, its armies and finances and to develop its railroads.

In the mind of Russian statesmen the alliance with France never was meant to help her to realize her wild dreams of revenge; they wished to make use of French capital, and to enhance their military power in order to impose by mere pressure upon Germany and Austria their Pan-Slavistic policy. Unfortunately English jealousy of Germany's gigantic trade expansion induced Edward VII to draw closer to Russia and to form the so-called Triple Entente with France with a view of isolating Germany. From this moment the balance of power in Europe was disturbed, and the feeling of superior strength of the Russian group formed a dangerous incentive to make use of it against the weaker group. This feeling was the immediate reason of the extraordinary efforts of France with a population of 39,500,000, to raise an army as great or even greater than that of Germany with 67,500,000. Germany exposed to two attacks had to follow suit, and by levying a war contribution of over a billion of marks to increase her peace establishment by over 100,000 men. Russia immediately answered by obtaining from the Duma an appropriation for the increase of the annual contingent of recruits by 125,000 during three years, which means a total increase of 375,000 men. The atmosphere was charged with electricity. It was clear to everybody in Germany that Russia and France were enhancing the efficiency of their armies at a pace and at such cost, that the final clash was fast drawing nearer. Emperor William, when he heard, while still negotiating with Czar Nicholas with regard to the latter's general mobilization order, had to strike fast and hard by at once declaring war. Nobody who followed closely the events can doubt that it was Czar Nicholas who forced the issue on Emperor William, convinced

They get all the vitality, all the energy that the greatest vim-food can supply them.

The rest, whatever else they eat, get less of some things which young folks need.

You know that—all folks know it.

They miss, in addition, a delicious dish. You serve nothing so luscious—so tempting to children—as well-cooked Quaker Oats.

Few children—few grown-ups—get as much as they need of this spirit-giving Quaker.

Quaker Oats
Matchless in Taste and Aroma

Quaker Oats leads—leads all the world over—because of its taste and aroma.

It comes in big flakes, made only from the plump and luscious grains. All the puny, starved grains are discarded.

So careful are we to get only the cream that we get but ten pounds of Quaker Oats from a bushel.

The Quaker process includes dry heat and steam heat—hours of both. It enhances the flavor. Thus we bring to the tables of a hundred nations the most delicious oat dish that's known.

You get this when you ask for Quaker Oats. And you pay no extra price. Thus you create and continue a love for this food of foods. You lead folks to eat an abundance. Don't you consider that worth while?

as he was of the superiority of the resources of the Triple Entente and anxious to crush German supremacy in the center of Europe and with it the Austrian rule over millions of South-Slavs.

As to the consequences of the present crisis, it is difficult and premature to indicate them now. I only point out that every solution which would disturb the balance of power and leave one group at the mercy of the other, would not be a permanent peace, but only an armistice with the prospect of an early new conflagration. As to Austrian-Hungary everybody knows that she alone constitutes the framework within which numerous racial fractions lived peaceably and developed themselves freely for centuries. If this framework were broken or only too much weakened lasting anarchy, internecine fighting would for a long period prevent the establishment of a settled state of things in the Southeast of Europe. The crushing of the German Empire would mean the ruling of Europe by autocratic reactionary Russia, unchecked by enfeebled France — a retrograde step which cannot be regretted sufficiently by every lover of democracy and progress.

If on the other side German trade is wiped off the seas and German colonies taken away, the exclusive marine rule of Great Britain would entail unheard-of hardships and restrictions on the neutral seafaring Powers. I need not say that the United States have no interest to see the Atlantic under the sway of Great Britain alone, and the Pacific ruled by England and her yellow ally.

THE CASE OF RUSSIA.

TAKING issue with the emphatic assertions made by the German and Austro-Hungarian Ambassadors in the foregoing articles, the Russian Ambassador, M. Bakhmeteff, states through The National Sunday Magazine that "the Russian Empire needs no defender" and that "recent dates and facts have proved by whom the war was instigated and begun."

M. Bakhmeteff declined to make a signed statement for the reason, he explained, that it was "against the rules of the Imperial Russian Service to do so" and against his own ideas "to enter into any kind of polemic discussion in the press. And furthermore," he added, "those who take interest in the causes and development of the war can form their judgment and conclusions from recent facts and dates that have already become historical — and from present events."

M. Jusserand, French Abassador to the United States, prefers to observe silence and to let the facts and developments of the war speak for themselves.

Five-Foot-Ten From Kansas

"We talked it over in the moonlight. I persuaded her that she wasn't thinking of that little fellow in Kansas.

"'Let's get married,' I said finally.

"We stood up there on the beach in our bathing suits and I saw again how big and splendid she was . . . I have seen figureheads of ships as full breasted and strong. She held out her hand.

"'I'll marry you,' she said quietly, and walked away.

"I went down to the schooner and I couldn't sleep. It seemed as if the ship were lonesome. I could see her standing by the weather rail in a gale of wind and smiling at me. I have no imagination, so it was very real to me.

"Next morning I went to the hardware shop. She was sitting at a desk, dressed all in trim white, typing letters. I was right in front of her before she looked up. She blushed.

"'I've come for you,' I told her. 'I've found a preacher to tie the knot.'

"She looked at me a long time, sighed, closed her desk and went into the inside office. Pretty soon she came out with her hat on. We went and were married. When that was over I told her that we sailed that night and to get her stuff aboard. 'I'll send a couple of hands to fetch it down,' I promised.

"She came down at noon and the cook fixed up a good meal. We sat there in the saloon, with the rumble of the winch in our ears, and didn't talk much. I never felt so lonely in my life, for I could see she wasn't thinking of me; I wonder what she was dreaming about . . . she never told me . . .

"That night we made out the pass and I laid our course for the China coast. The trades were blowing strongly. When I came down about eleven o'clock she was sitting in a chair by the table, crying, with her face in her hands. So I slipped away to my own room. One mustn't worry women when they are crying, you know. But when I came back — I couldn't sleep — she was gone. I went on deck and stayed there till breakfast time. I went down and she was there, with a light red gown on, and her shoulders shone through it, and she looked at me and laughed. I didn't understand, but I laughed, too. I felt happy.

"That day we swept out before the trade wind into the open Pacific. She stood beside me all the time, swinging back and forth to the plunge of the close-hauled schooner. She still wore her red gown and she had on silk stockings over her ankles and white shoes with a red bow. Once she touched me on the arm with her light fingers. I had to pull away. I am only a rough seaman. Women are a mystery . . . one must respect one's wife . . ."

THAT impossible mariner and unspeakable fool stared out into the silent street and sighed. The monkeys swung on their beam and squeaked childishly. A lottery ticket seller paused before the doorway and mumbled, her black-and-grey hair frizzling in the heat.

Mallow went on: "We were twenty-two days to the Riu Kiu Islands and she stood my watch with me all that time; but every evening she sat by the table and cried into her hands. Of course, I didn't worry her. She was thinking of that little fellow in Kansas. I went to my room and tried to sleep. But sometimes I would hear her singing in her room, in a kind of sweet voice. I remember those songs . . . she sang 'em so often. They were kind of chantey-like."

He paused, looked down at the table, and said, "I will always remember them."

"What were they?" I demanded. "Women sing instead of talking sometimes."

He looked around with a stern expression on his face. "This is no — I can't repeat 'em in here."

So we went out and over to the room I had in the Internacional. As we passed through the upper corridor he spied a piano in a large reception room. Without further words he went and sat down and struck a chord with his strong, stiff fingers. With a simplicity of a child he began to sing:

Mother Mary, I am lonely,
Mother, I am cold;
Give me arms that warm me, Mother,
Clinging arms that hold.
Mother Mary, I am greeting,
Hear a daughter's cry;
Warm me! gentle Mother Mary!
Warm me, or I die!

I STARED at the huge fellow in astonishment. His eyes were damp and he was staring at the blank wall.

"That was what she sang till we left the Riu Kiu's behind us. By this time she knew that I would never intrude on her. I respected her too much. And she was so splendidly and greatly beautiful. She wore clothes that seemed like yells." He sighed, and was silent.

"And where is she now?" I demanded.

"We went back with a cargo to Los Angeles," he said dully. "Then she left me. I send her a hundred a month and she writes to me."

"Where are you going now?" I asked.

"To Callao. That will take me still farther away. But she writes that she is happy. I haven't seen her for a year."

"Where from Callao?" I demanded.

He got up from the piano bench and sighed. "To Honolulu," he answered. "I'll have to go . . . I'd like to go back to Los Angeles. You see, she's my wife. I'd like to see that she's comfortable."

"I'm sailing tomorrow for San Pedro on the City of Para," I told him. "Let me have your address there."

He gave it to me. "I'll call and see how she is getting on," I told him.

"I wish you would," he responded dully. "Tell her — you might see whether she — well, she might make another voyage with me."

Three weeks later I landed in San Pedro and took the trolley for Los Angeles. In my hand I held a bit of paper with 11,171 Figuroa Street written on it in a cramped hand. That street, I knew, is one of the longest in the world. At Third and Main streets

136 Atlantic St.

I caught a taxi. Forty-five minutes later I was ringing the bell of a pleasant-looking bungalow. The door was opened by a woman at least five-foot-ten. She blushed when she saw me.

"My husband sent me a wireless about you," she said quietly. "Will you come in?"

"I don't know," I replied. "What did he say?"

She pulled a bluish-white paper from her bodice, and handed it to me. It read:

> SS. Maurice via San Juan del Sur.
>
> Mrs. Harry Mallow—
>
> Friend from Panama will arrive SS. Para.
> MALLOW.

I reread it and then looked at the magnificent creature before me. She was dressed in green.

"He has gone to Callao," I said briefly. "He will be in Honolulu in ten days. He needs you."

"Is he sick?" she demanded anxiously.

"He is a fool," I replied. "I am sailing for the Islands day after tomorrow. Will you come with me and meet him?"

Womanlike she glanced back at the rooms opening into the hallway. She seemed to consider a great many things. Then she said curtly, "I'll go, of course. Will you——?"

"I'll book you on the Ventura," I told her. "I'll be here at nine day after tomorrow and take you down."

She dipped into housewifely details of what she must do in the meanwhile. I listened. She spoke vaguely of arrangements about the house. I broke in:

"Madam, you must meet him in Honolulu. I give you my word your husband is in need of you."

"I'll go anyway," she sighed. The door closed behind me.

Prompt to the minute I called for her two days later. She had but one trunk and a couple of suit cases.

"Most of my stuff is aboard the Maurice," she told me.

Once aboard the Ventura she vanished. Eight days later she touched me on the arm. "He's not in yet!" she whispered.

I pointed to a smudge of smoke down Molokai channel. "That's him coming," I said.

"But he won't know I'm here!" she breathed.

"He's thinking of you," I replied. "Go to the Moana down at Waikiki, and I'll meet him."

The liner docked and she went off in a hack, a great figure of a woman, with her slender hands in her lap. I went to George's and had an alligator pear salad. Then I wandered down to Wilder's Wharf and watched the Maurice berth. Mallow stared at me wonderingly when he came ashore with his papers for the customs house.

"I don't see how you came——"

"Ask no questions," I responded. "I saw your wife. She is well and sends her love to you."

He stiffened. "She was quite comfortable?" he said quietly.

"Perfectly," I answered him. "How soon will you be through? Come and have a swim at Waikiki."

He considered this thoughtfully. At last, as we were entering the customs house, he spoke. "Yes . . . you know I met her there . . . ."

So at dusk we drove out to the Moana. The tide was in and the beach was covered with bathers. He left me to get a swimming suit. I feed the driver and reached the hotel a minute later. I found her seated in the big lounge, her eyes filled with fear.

"Into your bathing clothes!" I said sharply. "We are going for a swim."

Without a word she retired, her supple figure attracting all eyes.

I met her on the beach. "Now for the reef," I said, as we waded in.

She swam powerfully, breasting the breakers as they roared in, with absolute aplomb. Soon we were out where the waves did not break. I saw the shimmer of her white body as she dived. Then I distinguished another figure ahead. I recognized the master of the Maurice. He was swimming slowly, looking always seaward as he topped a swell. I touched her arm.

"There he is — your husband," I said.

She trod water a moment and stared. Then she dived and I fought a crested swell, ducked under a canoe that was rushing inshore and turned. On the beach I sat long, drying out in the tepid air that eddyed in the bight. It was quite dark when two figures emerged from the water. They did not see me. They were both tall. The woman spoke in a broken voice:

"You never could understand."

He answered her triumphantly.

The Winning of Yolande

There, I told you. Your horse has won, Mademoiselle. It is the good omen — congratulations! I must kiss the hand!"

He kissed both — and two more protesting, reluctant ones belonging to Mrs. Challoner. A moment later Déjol was surrounded by a crowd of gesticulating young men, who showered him with slaps on the back and "han'-shaks." Flushed with excitement he slapped and shook and "Mon Dieux'd" them in return. The two ladies retreated a little from the enthusiastic ovation. But they were not to be spared. Déjol swept down upon them, with a stream of presentations. "Le Marquis d'Errol," "Le Conte Artors," "Le Prince d'Arenbourgh," "Le Baron du Gostac." They must meet the real owner of the peerless Tonique, the wonderful Mademoiselle Folsome.

During the afternoon they moved with a train of titled squires. Evidently the magnificent tooth powder Prince Charming was a very popular potentate. They had tea in the bois on their way home, and were barely allowed time to dress before Déjol accompanied by his warm-hearted sponsor, was back again, waving tickets for the Opera Comique and bubbling suggestions for dinner.

Benjamin Loomis looked at Mrs. Challoner quizzically.

"By this time, my dear Jeanne," he whispered, "I hope you have realised that you are Cupid's storm centre. He is wherever you are — and this time it's a cyclone — when you come to earth I shall be there to catch you."

"I'm beginning to be afraid," she murmured.

"Forget it for tonight. Leave the chaperoning to me."

She laughed a little ruefully. "Very well," she said. "I shall just have a good time, and hold you responsible."

"I wish you always would," he answered seriously; and meeting reprobation in her eyes, he hastened to change the subject. "I cabled a very strong endorsement of our young friend to Folsome. He doesn't know me, but he knows of me; and I've known that lunatic lover for years. And if she'd spent her life hunting for the perfect husband, she couldn't make a better selection."

DÉJOL was as good as his word. Still with his sponsor and witness in tow, he arrived, followed by a frail, elderly gentleman in shiny black array.

"Ancestors," announced Déjol, waving his hand at the elderly gentleman, who might have been a magician or an undertaker, but who, on unstrapping a legal-looking pigskin case, proved himself a genealogist. He produced an illuminated parchment, in the semblance of a tree whereon hung various golden globes, labeled with euphonious names.

"Voici," he cackled in an attenuated voice, as if his researches among ancient documents and tomes had filled his lungs with antique dust. "The family tree of the House of Des Jolais, corrupted during The Terror, for reasons of safety to Déjol." He unrolled the arboreal monstrosity. "A Des Jolais was with the Norman Conqueror — the estates of Jolais are Norman — near Arques-la-Batelle. The remains of the chateau are still extant——"

"And as good as bought," interrupted the reinstated Des Jolais. "Ah, my dear Mademoiselle Yolande, that is some name for you, hein? 'Yolande la Jolie des Jolais.'

"Look," he continued excitedly, "here we have married into Acquintaine, and there — that shield with the demicats gules, the Royal House of Bavaria. That was an Austrian grand duchess, and this a princess of Spain. I will have all the portraits, and the documents, shall I not, my old one?" The "old one" assured him that all should be produced or traced. "Ha!" Déjol carolled, "that will please the Democratic régime, will it not? All will be well. And whether it is true or not, I do not care, ma mie — and neither do you. This is only for the family of that great Jeffersonian simplicity — hein?

His creative imagination had already peopled his world with an enthusiastic set of connections by marriage. Consequently the cable that was at that moment delivered to Mrs. Challoner was a rude shock.

JOHN T. HALL, Pres., 8 Columbus Circle, NEW YORK

Have received absurd proposals. Leave Paris at once. Dismiss upstart Tooth Powder merchant instantly. FOLSOME.

SO HYPNOTIZED had they all been by Déjol's ardor that the message came like a thunder-clap. The corners of Yolande's mouth drooped. She rose silently and crossed to the window. Mr. Loomis snorted. Mrs. Challoner continued to re-read the plain communication, as if she might find some word of relenting. Déjol's face went white, then his eyes slowly darkened as the pupils distended, his big jaws set, his golden hair seemed to stiffen with anger.

"Upstart — hein!" he exploded. "What of it? My father was a great chemist — I am a great chemist. We have given to the world what will help the world. We give them health and the cleanliness. Does he think that it is better to invent dynamite and lyddite — or to make plates for the warships, or guns to kill — hein? The fool! If he is your father, my dearest, still I must call him so — ha! it makes me laugh. I could have such — what you call, renown, too — if I were not first of all a human man. Do I make public my process for making the Déjol silent big gun, no! Do I permit to make my 'projectile Déjol'— that would tear his, this Folsome's, little paper armor like so much gold leaf — No! —a thousand times. But patent, I do. That no other shall ever perpetrate upon this world, so mangled, and torn by war, these so deadly things — no! Me, and before me, my father, work for the good, the help of mankind. Our money has not come from blood and tears, millions can go by — I will not take them from engines of destruction, no! We are upstarts, then — well, we at least start — up!"

He stood erect and glowing — Preux Chevalier of a newer and saner code of honor. Yolande turned toward him with a little cry, holding out her arms. He moved as if to clasp her to his heart, then with a courtly bow, he bent and kissed her hand.

"First, I must cable your father, Mademoiselle, that I care not one — what you call damn — for his message. That I shall marry you at once — e-me-di-ate! in England."

Mrs. Challoner spoke, her voice had a far away sound, her eyes were wide and fixed on the face of Benjamin Loomis, whose brows were drawn together in a frown. "Then — this 'projectile Déjol,' if it were on the market, would ruin Mr. Folsome, wouldn't it ——?"

The portent of her question dawned slowly on Benjamin Loomis; but with the instantaneousness characteristic of him, Déjol had seen the point.

"Oh, ho, oh!" he carolled in jubilation. "She have found it, Mrs. Challoner, she have found it, the beautiful blackmail! Oh, Mon Ami!" He seized Mr. Loomis and shook him. "Cable quick — that the procedé Statol — is mine. He knows of it, they all do, though they can find out nothing. Tell him I will forget mankind for the one woman. Tell him I will at once the manufacture begin. He is ruin — flat ruin — his armor plate is as good as being not at all!— Oh, oh! Mme. Challoner, how can I thank you for the so beautiful blackmail!"

Suddenly Mr. Loomis began to gurgle, the gurgle became a rumble, the rumble turned to a roar. With head thrown back and tears streaming from his eyes, he laughed, like Olympian Jove, and gasped for breath, and laughed again.

"Jeanne!" he managed to ejaculate, "Jeanne, who's for Cupid now? Oh, ho — the — the chaperone! Ho, ho!" He got to his feet, rocking with mirth. "It's all over but the shouting," he announced. "Just leave it to me! yours! Déjol — yours — the Statol' process! — and I never knew! Oh, ho, I've got to make Folsome come across, or you've got me ruined, too!— your confounded Statol would make the Folsome steel works look like thirty cents.

They started toward him, contrite, almost frightened. But he waved them back, still laughing.

"Leave it to me," he boomed. "Lunch on me tomorrow noon — I'll have that consent."

He did. He spread the cable messages of capitulation before them on the luncheon table, in the private room at Larues, where he convened his conspirators. Four glasses of champagne clinked above the articles of Peace Triumphant.

"And now,"— the blonde son of Gaul held out his arms.

Sweetly, quietly, Yolande crept into them. For an instant their lips met.

Mrs. Challoner turned away, her eyes were no longer sapphire cold, the violets had become dew wet. She met the gaze of the big man across the table, and scarlet roses flamed in her cheeks.

"Aren't we all silly," she said. Let's drink to Love's Young Dream!"

"Love's Dream," echoed Benjamin Loomis, taking the hand that the defeated little Chaperone unconditionally surrendered. "Our Dream, too — yours and mine!"

The Prince of Graustark mean to me if I were to discover that our adventure had no real significance in the end. I know it sounds strange and mysterious, or you would not look so puzzled. But unless I can be sure of one thing — one vital thing — our advantage has failed in every respect. Now, I must go in. No; do not ask me to stay — and let me go alone. I prefer it so. Good night, my comrade."

He stood up and let her pass. "Good night, my princess," he said, clearly and distinctly. She shot a swift glance into his eyes, smiled faintly, and moved away. His rapt gaze followed her. She entered the door without so much as a glance over her shoulder.

"My princess," he repeated wonderingly, to himself. "Have I kissed the hand of my princess? God in heaven, is there on earth a princess more perfect than she? Can there be in all this world another so deserving of worship as she?"

Late at night she sat in her window looking up at the peaceful Jungfrau. A dreamy, ineffably sweet smile lay in her dark eyes. The hand he kissed had lain long against her lips. To herself she had repeated, over and over again, the inward whisper:

"What will my dear, simple old dad say if I marry this man after all?"

In a window not ten feet away, he was staring out into the night, with lowering eyes and troubled heart, and in his mind he was saying:

"What will my people do if I marry this woman after all?"

CHAPTER XX.

LOVE IN ABEYANCE.

TWO days went by. They were fraught with an ever-increasing joy for the two who were learning to understand each other through the mute, though irresistible teachings of a common tutor. Each succeeding hour had its exquisite compensation; each presented the cup of knowledge to lips that were parched with the fever of impotence, and each time it was returned empty by the seekers after wisdom. There were days in which Love went harvesting and prospered amazingly in the fields, for each moment that he stored away against the future was ripe with promise. He was laying by the store on which he was to subsist to the end of his days; he allowed no moment to go to waste, for he is a miser and full of greed.

Not one word of love passed between these two who waited for the fruit to ripen. They were never alone together. Always they were attended by the calm, keen-eyed Mrs. Gaston, who, though she may have been in sympathy with their secret enterprise, was nevertheless a dependable barrier to its hasty consummation.

She had received her instructions from the one now most likely to be in need of a deterring influence: the girl herself. After that evening on the porch, Bedelia had gone straight to her duenna with the truth. Then she made it clear to the good lady that she was not to be left alone for an instant to confront the welcome besieger. And so it was that when Robin and Bedelia walked or rode together, they were attended by prevention.

He understood the situation perfectly and was not resentful. He appreciated the caution with which she was carrying on her own campaign, and he was not unmindful of the benefits that might also accrue to him through this proscribed period of reflection. While he was sure of himself by this time, and fully determined to risk even his crown for the girl who so calmly held him at bay, he was also sensible of the wisdom of her course. She was not willing to subject herself or him to the dangers of temptation. As she had said, there was a great deal at stake; the rest of their lives, in truth. At times he thought she was playing the game too well for one who professed to be concerned about the future.

On the third day he was convicted of duplicity. She went off for a walk alone, leaving him safely anchored in what he afterwards came to look upon as a prearranged game of auction-bridge. When she came in after an absence of at least two hours, the game was just breaking up. He noted the questioning look that Mrs. Gaston bestowed upon her fair charge, and also remarked that it contained no sign of reproof. The girl went up to her room without so much as a word with him. Her face was flushed and she carried her head disdainfully. He was greatly puzzled.

The puzzle was soon explained. He waited for her on the stairway as she came down alone to dinner.

"You told me that your friends were not in Interlaken, Mr. Schmidt," she said coldly. "Why did you feel called upon to deceive me?"

He bit his lip. For an instant he reflected, and then gave an evasive answer. "I think I told you that I was alone in this hotel, Miss Guile. My friends are at another hotel. I am not aware that ——"

"I have seen and talked with that charming old man, Mr. Totten," she interrupted. "He has been here for days, and Mr. Dank as well. Do you think that you have been quite fair with me?"

He lowered his eyes. "I think I have been most fair to both of us," he replied. "Will you believe me when I say that in a way I personally requested them to leave this hotel and seek another? And will it decrease your respect for me if I add that I wanted to have you all to myself, so to speak, and not to feel that these good friends of mine were ——"

"Why don't you look me in the face, Mr. Schmidt?" she broke in. He looked up at once prepared to meet a look of disdain. To his surprise, she was smiling. "I have talked it all over with Mrs. Gaston, and she advised me to forgive you if you were in the least penitent and — honest. Well, you have made an honest confession. I am satisfied. Now, I have a confession to make. I have suspected all along that Mr. Totten and Mr. Dank and the shadowy Mr. Gourou were in the town."

"You suspected?" he cried in amazement and chagrin.

"I was morally certain that they were here. Today my suspicions were justified. I encountered Mr. Totten in the park beyond the Jungfraublick. He was very much upset, I can assure you, but he recovered with amazing swiftness. We sat on one of the benches in a nice little nook and had a long, long talk. He is a charming man. I have asked him to come to luncheon with us tomorrow, and to bring Mr. Dank."

"Good Lord, will wonders never ——"

"But I did not include the still invisible Mr. Gourou. I was afraid that you would be too uncomfortable under the hawk-like eye of the gentleman who so kindly warned us at the Pavilion Bleu." There was gentle raillery in her manner. "I shall expect you to join us, Mr. Schmidt. You have no other engagement?"

"I — I shall be delighted," he stammered.

She laid her hand gently upon his arm and a serious sweetness came into her eyes.

"Come," she said; "let us go in ahead of Mrs. Gaston. Let us have just one little minute to ourselves, Mr. Schmidt."

It was true that she came upon the Count in one of the paths of the Kleine Rugen. He was walking slowly toward her, his eyes fixed thoughtfully upon the ground. When she accosted him, he was plainly confused, as she had said. After the first few passages in polite though stilted conversation, his keen, gray eyes resumed their thoughtful — it was even a calculating look.

"Will you sit here with me for a while, Miss Guile?" he asked gently. "I have something of the gravest importance to say to you."

SHE sat beside him on the sequestered bench, and when she arose to leave him an hour later, her cheek was warm with color and her eyes were filled with tenderness toward this grim, staunch old man who was the friend of her friend. She laid her hand in his and suffered him to raise it to his lips.

"I hope, my dear young lady," said he with simple directness, "that you will not regard me as a stupid, interfering old meddler. God is my witness, I have your best interests at heart. You are too good and beautiful to ——"

"I shall always look upon you as the kindest of men!" she cried impulsively, and left him.

He stood watching her slender, graceful figure as she moved down the sloping path and turned into the broad avenue. A smallish man with a lean face came up from the opposite direction and stopped beside him.

"Could you resist her, Quinnox, if you were twenty-two?" asked this man in his quiet voice.

Quinnox did not look around, but shook his head slowly. "I cannot resist her at sixty-two, my friend. She is adorable."

"I do not blame him. It is fate. She is fate. Our work is done, my friend. We have served our country well, but fate has taken the matter out of our hands. There is nothing left for us to do but to fold our arms and wait." Gourou revealed his inscrutable smile as he pulled at his thin, scraggy mustache. He was shaking his head, as one who resigns himself to the inevitable.

After a long silence Quinnox spoke.

"Our people will come to love their princess, Gourou."

"Even as you and I, my friend," said the Baron.

And then they held their heads erect and walked confidently down the road their future sovereign had traversed before them.

When Mrs. Gaston joined Robin and Bedelia at the table which had been set for them in the salle a manger, she laid several letters before the girl who picked them up instantly and glanced at the superscription on each.

"I think that all of them are important," said Mrs. Gaston significantly. The smile on the girl's face had given way to a clouded brow. She was visibly perturbed.

"You will forgive me, Mr. Schmidt," she said nervously. "I must look at them at once."

He tried not to watch her face as she read what appeared to be a brief and yet evidently important letter, but his rapt gaze was not to be so easily managed. An exclamation of annoyance fell from her lips.

"This is from a friend in Paris, Mr. Schmidt," she said hesitatingly. Then, as if coming to a quick decision: "My father has heard that I am carrying on atrociously with a strange young man. It seems that it is a new young man. He is beside himself with rage. My friends have already come in for severe criticism. He blames them for permitting his daughter to run at large and to pick up with every Tom, Dick and Harry. Dear me, I shudder when I think of what he will do to you, Mrs. Gaston. He will take off your head completely. But never fear, you old dear, I will see that it is put on again as neatly as ever. So, you see, Mr. Schmidt, you now belong to that frightful order of nobodies, the Toms and the Dicks and the Harrys."

"I see that there is a newspaper clipping attached," he remarked. "Perhaps your father has been saying something to the newspapers." It was a mean speech and he regretted it instantly.

She was not offended, however. Indeed, she may not have heard what he said, for she was reading the little slip of printed matter. Suddenly she tore it into tiny bits and scattered them under the table. Her cheeks were red and her eyes glistened unmistakably with mortification. He was never to know what was in that newspaper cutting, but he was conscious of a sharp sensation of anger and pity combined. Whatever it was, it was offensive to her, and his blood boiled. He noted the expression of alarm and apprehension deepen in Mrs. Gaston's face.

BEDELIA slashed open another envelope and glanced at its contents. Her eyes flew open with surprise. For an instant she stared, a frown of perplexity on her brow.

"We are discovered!" she cried a moment later, clapping her hands together in an ecstasy of delight. "The pursuers are upon our heels. Even now they may be watching me from behind some convenient post or through some handy window pane. Isn't it fine? Don't look so horrified, you old dear. They can't eat us, you know, even though we are in a dining-room. I love it all! Followed by man-hunters! What could be more thrilling? The chase is on again. Quick! We must prepare for flight!"

"Flight?" gasped Robin. Her eyes were dancing. His were filled with dismay.

"It is as I feared," she cried. "They have found me out. Hurry! Let us finish this wretched dinner. I must leave here tonight."

"Impossible!" cried Mrs. Gaston. "Don't be silly. Tomorrow will be time enough. Calm yourself, my dear."

"Tomorrow at sunrise," cried Bedelia enthusiastically. "It is already planned, Mr. Schmidt. I have engaged an automobile in anticipation of this very emergency. The trains are not safe. Tomor-

It Does Really End Corns

After all these years many people still ask if Blue-jay really does end corns.

What a question!

Blue-jay is ending a million corns a month. Perhaps half the corns that develop are being removed by it.

Were there any question do you think we would offer to send you samples free?

You can prove in two days that corns are needless. Apply Blue-jay tonight. It is done in a jiffy. Then forget the corn. In 48 hours the corn will loosen and come out.

That's the usual thing. Stubborn corns may take a little longer, but they come out just the same. And without any pain or soreness.

row I fly again. This letter is from the little stenographer in Paris. I bribed her—yes, I bribed her with many francs. She is in the offices of the great detective agency—'the Eye that never Sleeps!' I shall give her a great many more of those excellent francs, my friends. She is an honest girl. She did not fail me."

"I don't see how you can say she is honest if she accepted a bribe," said Mrs. Gaston severely.

"Pooh!" was Miss Guile's sufficient answer to this. "We cross the Brunig Pass by motor. That really is like flying, isn't it?"

"To Lucerne?" demanded Robin, still hazily.

"No, no! That would be madness. We shall avoid Lucerne. Miles and miles to the north we will find a safe retreat for a day or two. Then there will be a journey by rail to—to your own city of Vienna, Mr. Schmidt. You——"

She faced Robin coolly. "It will be necessary to abandon our little luncheon for tomorrow. I am sorry. Still Mr. Totten informs me that he will be in Vienna shortly. The pleasure is merely postponed."

"Are you in earnest about this trip by motor tomorrow morning?" demanded Robin darkly. "You surely cannot be——"

"I am very much in earnest," she said decisively. He looked to Mrs. Gaston for help. That lady placidly shook her head. In fact, she appeared to be rather in favor of the preposterous plan, if one were to judge by the rapt expression on her countenance. "I had the supposedly honest word of these crafty gentlemen that I was not to be interfered with again. They gave me their promise. I shall now give them all the trouble possible."

"But it will be a simple matter for them to find out how and when you left this hotel and to trace you perfectly."

"Don't be too sure of that," she said, exultantly. "I have a trick or two up my sleeve that will baffle them properly, Mr. Schmidt."

"My dear," interposed Mrs. Gaston severely, "do not forget yourself. It isn't necessary to resort to slang in order——"

"Slang is always necessary," avowed Bedelia, undisturbed. "Goodness, I know I shall not sleep a wink tonight."

"Nor I," said Robin gloomily. Suddenly his face lightened. A wild, reckless gleam shot into his eyes and, to their amazement, he banged the table with his fist. "By jove, I know what I shall do. I'll go with you!"

"No!" cried Bedelia, aghast. "I—I cannot permit it, Mr. Schmidt. Can't you understand? You—you are the man with whom I am supposed to be carrying on atrociously. What could be more convicting than to be discovered racing over a mountain pass—Oh, it is not to be considered—not for an instant."

"Well, I can tell you flatly just what I intend to do," said he, setting his jaws. "I shall hire another car and keep you in sight every foot of the way. You may be able to elude the greatest detective agency in Europe, but you can't get away from me. I intend to keep you now that I've got you, Bedelia. You can't shake me off. Where you go, I go."

"Do you mean it?" she cried, a new thrill in her voice. He looked deep into her eyes and read there a message that invited him to perform vast though foolhardy deeds. Her eyes were suddenly sweet with the love she had never expected to know; her lips trembled with the longing for kisses. "I shall travel far," she murmured. "You may find the task an arduous one—keeping up with me, I mean."

"I am young and strong," he said, "and, if God is good to me, I shall live for fifty years to come, or even longer. I tingle with joy, Bedelia, when I think of being near you for fifty years or more. Have—have you thought of it in that light? Have you looked ahead and said to yourself: fifty years have I to live and all of them with——"

An Achievement

General Howard Carroll, captain of coastwise transportation industry, as a raconteur is somewhat negligent at times as to the vintage of the yarn spun. At a club gathering recently one of his stories had the good fortune to get a laugh at exactly the right place.

"Bully," said the General. "I thought that yarn would go here, I told it for the first time last night at home; and when I'd got through my daughter looked at me admiringly and said:

"'Why, Father, that was a new one!'"

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It if your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that everyone should use.

5 grains Optona (1 tablet).
2 ounces water.

Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Optona system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription very easily. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.

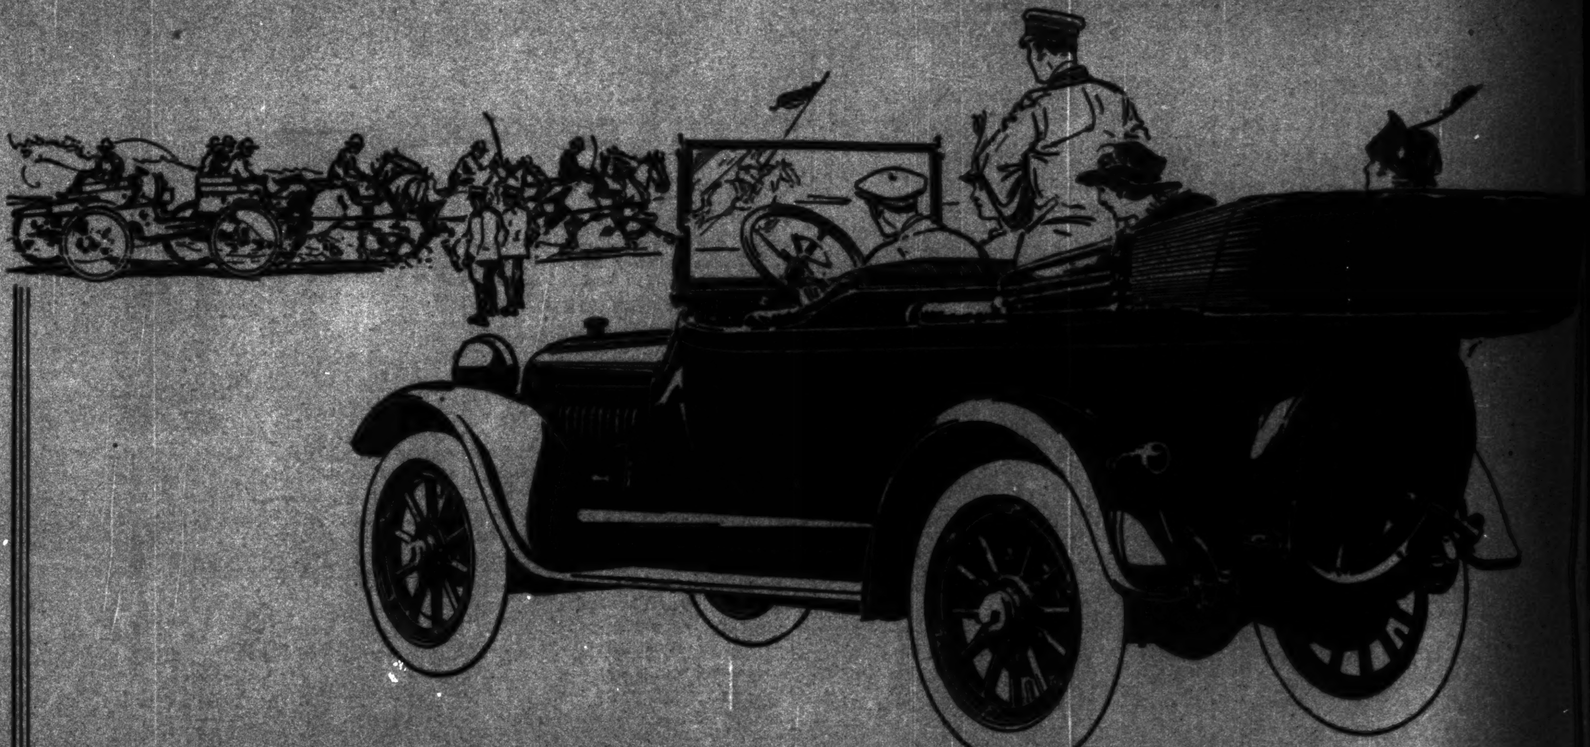
Chalmers

"Light Six"

$1650



Our Fastest Selling Car

Over 40,000 people now drive Chalmers cars.

But the Chalmers 1915 "Light Six" is the fastest selling car we ever built.

First announced last May, over 3500 "Light Sixes" were delivered in three months.

In this time the motor-wise of the country tested this wonderful car in nearly 3,000,000 miles of service.

As a result of these tests in the hands of owners, the demand for "Light Sixes" is far exceeding our anticipations.

A second factory order of "Light Sixes" was started two months earlier than had been planned.

At $1650 the Chalmers "Light Six" is setting new sales records. It is the fastest selling car at its price on the market.

At this writing, sales records show that we have delivered more cars in the last three months than in the same three months of 1913. And this in spite of the fact that 1913 was the biggest year in the automobile industry.

There are many reasons for this tremendous sale of the Chalmers "Light Six." Here are just a few of them:

A different kind of automobile beauty; unusually handsome finish; Pullman-like comfort; a 48 H. P. long stroke non-stallable motor which "stays put"; graceful molded oval fenders of both strength and beauty; 4½-inch tires—"Nobby" tread on rear wheels; unusually complete equipment including Chalmers-made one-man top of silk mohair; quick acting storm curtains; five demountable rims; one motion Chalmers-Entz electric starter; Klaxon horn; electric lights, etc. And perhaps the greatest reason of all, the unusually high quality in a car at such a price.

Get Full Value in Your Motor Car Investment—Write for Book

There are many other reasons why the 1915 "Light Six" is the fastest selling of all Chalmers models. These additional reasons are given in a special issue of Chalmers "Doings" which has just come from the press. This latest Chalmers book has a full color cover and pictures of both the "Light Six" and our larger "Master Six." It is filled with facts and information which will enable you to compare the Chalmers with all other cars. It contains complete description and photographs of all models including the Limousine, Sedan and Coupelet.

Send coupon today and get your copy of this attractive book. Every automobile buyer should read it, before investing in so important a thing as a motor car.
